PROTECTION.
Ladies, protect your health by purchasing the
WHEELER & WILSON
which is proven to be
The Lightest Running Sewing Machine in the World!
Natural Philosophy proves it, and Common sense sanctions it, as their motion is Rotative, while that of a shuttle machine is a reciprocating, and far less complicated.
They sew heavier and lighter than any other machine.
They make less noise than any other machine and they do the nicest and greatest range of work, never nothing the thread with oil or dirt.
They also took the Second Prize at the Dairy in Toronto, held in France, on the 21st of October, 1878, when all the other machines were out, and there were over fifty-two thousand on exhibition.
The above Leading Machines are sold at Peterborough by
G. A. MITCHELL,
The only authorized Agent. ☞He also repairs all classes of Sewing Machines, and guarantees his work. Office, Hunter-St., Peterborough.

The Good Old Farm.

There's got to be a revival
Of good sound sense some more.
Before the day we passed away
WE dawn upon eternity.
The boys want more 'chivalrie'
Hopes reprove the terrors of heaven.
An' the girls must learn that beauty
Consists in maid's their looks.

Before we can steer clear uv failings,
An' many lackadaisicals, too,
The boys have got to quit clerkin'
An' git back to wood on the farms.
I don't settle on no policy,
It ain't gettin' on easy I know,
But parin' your hair in the middle,
An' cottin' up for a show.

But there's more hard dollars in it,
An' more independence, too,
An' spare real pieces an' contentment,
An' honest, that is rarely true,
I know it takes years of labor,
But you've got to "tough on" in a store.
Before you can keep a good livin'
An' clothes, but little more.

An' you steer well clear of temptation
On the good old honest farm,
An' a thousand ways's fashions,
That only brings ye to harm.
There ain't many fortunes to be made,
There ain't many fortunes to be made,
With many other men's cash,
And the honest toiling money who try it,
Proves humiliation shame in rash.

So when the road to State prison
Lays by the good old farm,
An' a man sees a tolling brother
Wal out of the way of harm.
He measures he hasn't stood there.
A-tilling the soil in peace,
Where he'll yet creep back in dishonor.
After a tardy release.

What hosts ov'em go back broken
In health, in mind, an' purse,
To die in sight uv the clover,
Or hunger along, which is worse!
An' how many mourn when useless,
That they didn't see the charm,
The safety and independence
Uv life on the good old farm.

So preach it to 'em, parson,
Jest lay it out plain and square,
That the land flows with milk and honey,
That health and peace are there.
An' call back the clerks an' runners,
An' show 'em the peaceful charm
That waits to cheer and bless them
On father's dear old farm.

The Liquor Business in Maine.

Mr. C. D. Barr, who has been summering for a while at Old Orchard Beach, writes an interesting letter to his paper, the Lindsay Post. What he says about the liquor business down east is worth reading. We quote:

On the second Sunday the Veteran Gen. Neal Dow addressed an immense audience in a beautifully shaded natural amphitheatre, with nothing, as one of the impassioned speakers said, but the "arched panoply of heaven overhead." The General is the same old piece of pretty well dried up timber, and does not seem to have grown any older during the last ten years. I need not allude to the leading features of his address, but at the close he repeated a conversation with an old citizen of Portland who charged him with having achieved nothing in the suppression of the liquor traffic in this State, and I give the answer in substance, because it agrees with information I have gathered here from various sources, and with what I have seen in a necessarily brief and limited experience,—because it all bears on the vexed question as to whether the Maine Prohibitory Liquor Law has been enforced in Maine and has diminished or destroyed the liquor traffic. Gen. Dow reminded his aged interlocutor that before the law in question was passed there were six or seven great distilleries in Portland, and that on one occasion a leading wholesale liquor merchant had received in one cargo nearly an acre of rum—the consignment when landed covering in casks an immense area, and although that particular cargo was an extra large one, the importation of rum was an ordinary affair of trade and of frequent occurrence. Now there is not a single distillery in Portland, and no rum is imported. General Dow admitted that intoxicating liquor can be obtained in Portland more easily than in any other part of the State, but even there it is obtained with the greatest difficulty; and he maintained that there were extensive rural districts with flourishing villages and towns where not a single drop of liquor was sold. I presume the exception for proper medicinal purposes is made. This statement of the General's is corroborated by several with whom I have conversed, and it would appear that in these happy districts public sentiment is so largely against the sale and use of intoxicants that the "traffic" has altogether ceased. At the same time liquor can be obtained in Portland without very much difficulty by those who are often there or by residents "who know the ropes."

Still the difficulties they encounter and the knowledge of the heavy penalties for selling must have a very great deterring effect; and the comparison between manoeuvering to "get a drop" and the simple act of stepping into a shop and buying what's wanted is significant. The other day a Canadian related to me his experience in Portland, and it is interesting when contrasted with what would have been necessary in another State. Being in the Maine Metropolis he concluded, as much from curiosity about the way in which the law was enforced or rather could be violated as desire or need for stimulant, to see if he could get some "Bourbon." A druggist was tried without success; and a hint was given to apply to a leading hotel. This was done, with a presentation of his business card as a sort of guarantee, and the clerk while stating the house did not sell it thought he might indicate where it could be found. A bell-boy was called and the thirsty traveller conducted by a back stairs to a room in the basement. Here a spring-door was opened on a signal, and he was ushered into a bare, obscure, rather dirty room, with three or four chairs occupied by young men smoking lazily. A fourth advanced somewhat suspiciously and approaching a thin and common cupboard or sideboard produced a bottle and a glass of water, and took therefor fifteen cents. In Boston or Montreal or Toronto this thing would not have been done in the basement in a secret way. The bar-room of a leading hotel in Portland (had there been no Maine law) would have been convenient, roomy, handsomely furnished; the bar a fine piece of ornamental wood-work, with large mirrors and a gorgeous display of bottles and glasses with all the famous and popular brands, and now and then music would have lent its charms to the place. Instead of one or two slipping slyly down, a festive crowd of boon companions would march in, or three or four friends would stop in because it was handy and quiet and orderly. The statement is indeed a great one—and he must be blind who would say that the work of Neal Dow and his friends has been [illegible] and [illegible] to [illegible]

Another Castleton Tragedy.

A WOMAN SHOOTS HERSELF BECAUSE A MAN WON'T MARRY HER.

(Port Hope Guide.)

Castleton is again in the throes of excitement over one of the most extraordinary love tragedies that have been lately heard of. A woman named Mrs. Blakely, who was rather of prepossessing appearance had been for some time desperately in love, apparently with Mr. McKay, of Castleton, and had been endeavoring to induce him to marry her, although he states that he never gave her the slightest encouragement. Mr. McKay is a well to do merchant of Castleton, and, rather good looking. He is looked upon by his acquaintance as a man of unblemished character and above reproach. He was very much annoyed by her attentions, and, although he treated her civilly, when brought into contact with her, tried to avoid her as much as possible. The woman has been once married, and her husband, it appears, abandoned her with one child We have not learned whether Blakely is yet alive or not. On the day of the tragedy, she had gone to Mr McKay's house where he resides with his mother, and inquired for him. The mother, knowing that her son did not desire to see her, gave her a short answer, that he was not at house. She then went to the store and inquired for him there, and was told that he had gone to Montreal, when she deliberately drew a revolver, and placing the muzzle to her breast, fired, and putting her hand to the wound from which the blood began to flow, she exclaimed: "There's blood, send for Mr. McKay, I want to speak to him before I die." Almost immediately afterward, however, she fired two more shots at herself, one of which took effect in the heart, and she immediately expired. The news soon spread, and it was not long before the greatest excitement prevailed in the usually quiet village. Medical assistance was at once called, but the unfortunate woman was beyond the reach of any assistance. A messenger was despatched to Colborne for the Coroner, who arrived in the afternoon and opened an inquest on the body, which was continued into the next day, when a verdict was returned in accordance with the above facts. The body was buried on Tuesday afternoon.

Shaking His Faith.

"Do you believe in predestination?" enquired a Mississippi steamboat captain of a clergyman who happened to be travelling with him.

"Of course I do," was the reply.

"Then you believe that whatever is to be, will be."

"Certainly."

"Well, I am glad of it."

"Why."

"Because I'm going to pass that boat ahead in just fifteen consecutive minutes, if there is any virtue in pine knots and safety valves. So don't be alarmed; if the boilers are not going to bust, they won't, that's all."

Upon this the divine began to put on his hat, and looked as if he was going to back out, which the captain on observing, remarked:

"I thought you believed in predestination!"

"So I do, but I prefer being a little nearer the stern when it takes place."

The greatest length of Lake Superior is 335 miles; its greatest breadth, 160 miles; mean depth, 688 feet; elevation, 627 feet; area, 32,000 square miles.

The greatest length of Lake Michigan is 300 miles; its greatest breadth is 108 miles; mean depth, 600 feet; elevation, 506 feet; area, 23,000 square miles.

The greatest length of Lake Huron is 200 miles; its greatest breadth is 169 miles; mean depth, 600 feet; elevation, 274 feet; area, 20,000 square miles.

The greatest length of Lake Erie is 250 miles, its greatest breadth is 80 miles; its mean depth is 84 feet; elevation, 555 feet; area, 6,000 square miles.

The greatest length of Lake Ontario is 180 miles; its greatest breadth, 65 miles; its mean depth is 500 feet; elevation, 301 feet; area, 6,000 square miles.

The length of all five is 1,265 miles, covering an area of upward of 135,000 square miles.

The National Hum in Ottawa.

(From the Ottawa Free Press.)

Our morning contemporary is exercised at the commercial prostration everywhere observable in this city, and evidently anxious to do something towards propitiating in Ottawa the "hum" which, he declares, has set in various parts of the country, as a consequence of the National Policy. Barring a biscuit factory, Ottawa has not witnessed the initiation of any new industry since the 17th of September, and it is pretty well known she only got that because she offered greater facilities as a distributing point than Morrisburgh, where the proprietor had the misfortune to be burnt out.

Early and Late Hours.

The London Truth thinks that it is really full time that the conventional prejudice against late hours should be exploded, when people want to bed early it was to rise early, because business commenced at an early hour. Persons who have nothing particular to do in the morning have no reason for rising at some unearthly hour. Nor do they. The early to bed with them means a great deal too much bed. There is nothing in itself more objectionable than being up at 3 a. m. A person in good health requires a maximum of seven hours sleep, and at what period of the twenty-four hours he takes this sleep is, provided that it does not interfere with his occupations, a matter of [illegible] taste [illegible]

PETERBOROUGH, SEPT'R 18, 1879.

THE POSITION IN QUEBEC.

The political contest in the Province of Quebec has assumed a new phase, through the resignation by Hon. Mr. Chauveau of his position of Provincial Secretary, on the ground that he considers the formation of a coalition government the easiest solution of the dead-lock between the two chambers. Probably a coalition is the easiest way to overcome the difficulty and yet not the best way. In the first place it will be a yielding to some extent to the irresponsible chamber by the elective, and popular, assembly, thus encouraging such obstructionist action as has been taken by the Legislative Council. It is also possible that a compromise government,—strong only because men of both parties refrain from healthy and honest criticism of the acts of their particular friends in the Ministry—may be productive of far greater evils than that which exists by reason of the dead-lock. The position now does not permit of the perpetration of positive wrong-doing by legislation; whereas the formation of a coalition, by disarming wholesome opposition would be seen to lead to errors and evils in Ministerial action, from which the Province would suffer far more than can possibly be the case during the temporary existence of a dead-lock. The easiest solution in this case, as in many others, is not always the best. Indeed we cannot understand Mr. Chauveau's advocacy of a coalition, unless he is ready to justify the course taken by the Legislative Council; for if he considered that course wrong, how could he in honor, and in good faith as a supporter of Mr. Joly, consent to yield in the least degree to the influence of a wrong action? Unless Mr. Chauveau's desire to see an end to the stand still to which Provincial affairs have been brought—especially visible in his department—there must be some other motive for his action in resigning his port-folio. We hope it can be said in excuse for him that his anxiety to see smooth departmental sailing once more in his Province caused him to lose some of his cautious deliberation, and much of that chivalric resistance to coercion for which those of his race are noted.

Though we hope such is not the case, it may be that Mr. Chauveau represents the feelings of a number of the members of the Legislative Council on this question of a coalition. We would rather that Mr. Joly should be able to give the vacant port-folio into some other hands, with the full approval of all those who have hitherto followed him; and that he will still be able to withstand the attempts of the oligarchy to force their partisan views upon the Province. The Premier has fought a good fight, in the face of unparalleled obstructions, and earned for himself, on all hands, the character of a manly and consistent politician. To accept any compromise such as the proposed coalition with his political opponents even at the suggestion of some of his following, would be but an ill climax to a brilliant official career. We therefore hope that Mr. Joly will, for the good of his party, as well as for the preservation of his own political character, continue to resist all solicitations for the formation of a coalition; and that he will rather tender his resignation, or, if necessary, subject himself and his colleagues in the Ministry to dismissal. He has yet the best of the position, and need not yield it though the weaker of his followers desert him, nor yet though he be forced to desert the position he has honored, to appeal once more to the people for their unqualified verdict, out of which a coalition would cheat them.

The Globe says: "The Dominion Government has given another backhander to the farmers, and this time the blow will be felt by those farmers who are the least able to bear it. An export duty of $1 per cord is levied on all shingle-bolts taken out of Canada. To evade this duty it has been the practice of the farmers in sections where cedar is used for shingles to leave their logs uncut and sell them in lengths which would make two, three or more shingles. The Government has now stepped in and declared that cedar logs so exported are liable to duty as shingle-bolts. The effect is that the farmer will get a dollar a cord less for his cedar, and may/hap will have to submit to still further reduction, because, being unable to export, he is left to take whatever price the Canadian shingle-manufacturer may offer him. It's nice to be [illegible]."

RAILWAY CONNECTION WITH BOBCAYGEON.

We observe that what is known as "the Cobourg and Peterborough Railway" has come under the control of a Mr. Bates, of Rochester, N. Y., who proposes to re-open the line between the two towns, re-construct the road, and extend it to Bobcaygeon, on certain conditions. These conditions are that Peterborough and Bobcaygeon shall give "reasonable assistance." What "reasonable assistance" may amount to is a matter for consideration; the chief point being that of reasonable guarantees, not only that the work will be carried out according to agreement, but also that the Municipalities assisting may be secured in the permanent enjoyment of the advantages derived by the building of such a line as a competitor for the carrying trade of the district. What guarantee, for instance, can be offered that any bridge thrown across Rice Lake will not suffer the same fate as former structures? And should Peterborough and Bobcaygeon give more than "reasonable assistance" to it, what earnest have they that the line will continue to be worked with due regard to their interests? These are questions that must be settled if not before, at least, conjointly with any proposition for a bonus to this project. There are also other considerations in connection with the determination of what would be "reasonable assistance;" such, for instance, as the aid formerly given to this line of road by Peterborough, and for which no adequate return has ever been received by the town. But these are merely secondary; and will not likely be lost sight of should the matter come under serious discussion. In the meantime it is in order for the projectors of this line to Bobcaygeon to place their plans definitely before the people for consideration. If they have a good thing in hand, Bobcaygeon will be ready to help them, and Peterborough will not stand in their way.

RAILWAY REFLECTIONS.

The proposition for a fusion of the Grand Trunk and Great Western Railways is of great interest to the people of this locality, as having a strong bearing on the Toronto and Ottawa project. An amalgamation such as spoken of, once effected the people of the western part of the Province will be completely at the mercy of the combination; just as those of the east are now subject to the Grand Trunk Company. The whole Province under such conditions would desire to put through, at once, another through line, to compete with the combination; and this could best be done by forming a line of the Credit Valley and Toronto and Ottawa Railways. The very possibility of arrangement between the Grand Trunk and Great Western Companies, shown by the serious consideration given to the proposal, is of itself proof positive of the necessity for the Toronto and Ottawa road, in the interest of the people. It is also sufficient to explode the very crude ideas put forth by some parties, that a line between the Dominion and Provincial capitals could be secured by utilizing parts of existing lines, dependent wholly or partially on the Grand Trunk. The new through line must be built independently; and the sooner the better for the whole Dominion.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Mr. Chauveau's resignation has been accepted in Quebec, but nothing further is likely to be known for a few days.

The Christian Guardian notes and comments on the fact that no clergymen outside the Episcopal and Roman Catholic churches were presented to the Marquis and Princess at Toronto.

The Legislative Council of Quebec passed another series of resolutions Thursday, and after the Bills passed during the session were assented to by the Lieut-Governor, the Council adjourned until the 30th inst.

Dr Schultz is urging on the Dominion Government the necessity of modifying the Land Law so as to allow the settlement of homesteads of 160 acres each throughout the reservations of the North-west.

The importation of horses from Canada to the United States has increased thirty-fold in the last four years. Now, will some one tell us if $20 have been added to the price since the new tariff came into operation? That was distinctly promised.

The proprietors of the Grand Junction and North Hastings Railways have made arrangements with the Grand Trunk to operate those roads throughout for one year, the proprietors putting the roads in order, bearing all risks as to bridges and embankments, the Grand Trunk taking the whole receipts and expending a small portion on repairs.

The Legislative Council of Quebec have placed themselves in this position: Before taking their leave [for two months, the members of the Assembly were each paid their $600, while the members of the Council will be obliged to wait the passing of the Supply Bill before they get a cent! Petty obstruction seems to have a reflex movement.

Dr. Besseler, rector of the University of Berlin, who is also a brilliant member of the Reichstag, in a recent speech thus defined protection: It is essentially a financial system which separates nations, organizes universal discord and hinders natural operations by artificial and arbitrary measures. Such a policy I can only describe as hostile alike to Christianity, to culture and to common sense.

The Ottawa Free Press understands that the sum of $50,000 constituted the consideration for the withdrawal of Messrs. Fraser, Grant and Pitblado from the section B. contract of the Pacific railway —$30,000 cash down and the remainder in one year from the present date. There are some queer manipulations in connection with Government contracts now-a-days—what might be expected under Tupper's regime.

A pontifical requiem mass for the repose of the soul of the late Bishop O'Brien was celebrated on Friday morning in St. Mary's Cathedral, Kingston, the service being quite as imposing as that which took place at the funeral of the deceased prelate. The sanctuary and altar were still draped in mourning, and the mitre and vestments of the Bishop were placed on the top of the bier. The sermon was preached by the Bishop of London, who paid a high tribute to the deceased Bishop.

—The Toronto Telegram says that house holders are grumbling over the increased rents some of inconsiderate alleged corn-fairs and so-questioners from the country. There is nothing like an Exhibition to make one sure of the number of friends he has who do not live in the city.

—The most charming season for travelling is just at hand. Nature, among the mountains, fields, and forests, as well as on the sea-shore, is never more enjoyable than in September. And when October sets in, with its brilliant hues, and the crisp fall air gives a zest to everything out-of-doors.

County Court.—There will be a sitting of the County Court, without a jury, on Friday Sept. 26th.

Personal.—Dr. H. C. Burritt was present at the meeting of the Dominion Medical Association, held at London, last week.

Gun Shot.—A canoe built by Mr. John Stephenson, Ashburnham, was highly commended by the judges at the Toronto Exhibition.

Personal.—Mr. H. V. Saunders, the popular and energetic station agent at Bethany, is at present located here during the absence of Mr. Gladman.

Dominion Statistics.—The Clerk of the Peace has received a consignment of the Dominion Statistics of 1879 London for distribution amongst the County J. P's.

Personal.—The London Advertiser says:—"Richard Meade, of Peterborough, takes the Allen Craig photo gallery in place of Jas. Hamilton, gone to Liverpool with sheep.

Prize.—The Auburn Woollen Co., at the Toronto Exhibition, carried off the second prize, in tweeds, Moorehouse, Dodds & Co., of Glen Tay taking first. This speaks well for the company as there were many other entries in the same class.

Curling Club.—The annual meeting of the Peterborough Curling Club will be held at the Hall, mas House to-morrow evening, commencing at 7.30 o'clock, when the election of officers and other important business will come before the meeting.

Grangers Excursion.—A number of Grangers from Peterboro' and vicinity, held an excursion to Cobourg last Thursday. They visited the Agricultural College, and attended a sale of stock held there. Many on their return "took in" the Toronto Exhibition.

Lacrosse.—At a meeting of the Peterboro' Lacrosse club on Tuesday evening last a committee was appointed to make arrangements for the opening of reading and club rooms for this club during the coming winter.—to which enterprise we referred in our last issue. A project is also on foot for the organization of a snow-shoe club, and an effort will be made to amalgamate this with the Tecumseh club, which is an excellent idea, and which, it is to be hoped will be accomplished.

Boating Club Excursion.—The excursion of the Peterborough Boating Club to the Toronto Regatta and Exhibition, was attended by nearly 300 persons, of whom a large number participated the same evening. The Peterborough crew were not as successful as heretofore. Three crews entered in the race. The Peterboros, of Peterboro', the Argonauts of Toronto, and the Leanders of Hamilton. The latter crew came in first, winning easily. This defeat was in a great measure owing to the bad steering.

Another Fire.—Last Thursday night, another alarm was sounded. The fire was discovered to be in an unoccupied building on Brock street, owned by Mr. Falls, of Bobcaygeon. The building which was a rough cast, burned quickly and was well nigh consumed when a stream of water began to play on it. Owing to the exertions of the firemen the adjoining buildings were saved. The Scottish Commercial Insurance Co., of Glasgow, had an insurance on the house of $600. Cause of fire unknown.

How the Princess was Dressed.—At the reception in Toronto Her Royal Highness the Princess Louise wore a rich white ribbed silk and black velvet dress, trimmed handsomely with fringe to correspond, and garlands of various colored cherries. Ornaments—A diamond tiara, diamond and pearl necklace, etc. Orders—Victoria and Albert, St. Catharines, and the Indian and Cobourg orders. Lady S. MacNaughton's dress was a black grenadine, trimmed with jet, jet tiara, and jet ornaments. The Hon. Mrs. Morelon's dress was gold-colored satin, trimmed with grey and gold brocade and rainbow jet. Ornaments—Diamond tiara and diamonds.

A. F. and A. M.—The following are the names of the officers elected by the Grand Lodge of Canada, A. F. and A. M., during its session in Kingston: Grand Master, R. W. Bro. Jas. A. Henderson, Kingston; Deputy Grand Master, R. W. Bro. Jas. Moffatt, London; Grand Senior Warden, R. W. Bro. D. McLellan, Hamilton; Grand Junior Warden, R. W. Bro. John Walsh, Ottawa; Grand Chaplain, R. W. Bro. and Rev. J. Gallagher, Kingston; Grand Treasurer, R. W. Bro. Edward Mitchell; Grand Registrar, R. W. Bro. Jas. Greenfield, Kingston; Grand Secretary, R. W. Bro. J. J. Mason, Hamilton; Grand Tyler, R. W. Bro. G. Smith, Guelph. R. W. Bro. W. D. Hepburn, of Preston, was elected D.D.G.M. for Wellington. The Grand Lodge will meet in Guelph next year.

Farewell Supper.—On Monday evening a number of the friends of Mr. Napoleon Lemay, and Mr. R. Brown, met at the Choate House to tender these young gentlemen a farewell entertainment, prior to their removal from town. The supper furnished by mine host Choate was gotten up in his usual excellent style, and was a fitting compliment to the subjects for whom it was prepared. After the cover had been removed the usual toasts were proceeded with, and an exceedingly interesting and pleasant evening spent. Mr. Lemay goes to Chicago, to try his fortune in that go-ahead western city, and Mr. Brown to a point still further west—Echo in the Sierra Nevadas, to take part in a commercial line there. We wish our young friends every success in their new homes, and in doing so we are but echoing the sentiments of a host of others in this town and vicinity.

Lissell's Living Age.—The numbers of the Living Age for the weeks ending September 6th and 13th respectively, contain the following articles: The Works of Rembrandt, Edinburgh; Count Cavour, Quarterly; Some Facts and Thoughts about Legs—Emitting Animals, Popular Science Review; Prince Louis Napoleon's Expedition to Boulogne, and a Gallivan Novelist, Fraser; Fashionable Charity, and The Late Youth of Philosophers, Saturday Review; Barnard Castle, Spectator; with continuations of Jean Ingelow's "Sarah de Berenger;" and Miss Keary's "Doubting Heart;" and the usual amount of Poetry. The fifty-two such numbers of sixty-four large pages each (or more than 3,600 pages a year), the subscription price ($8) is low; while for $10.50 the publishers offer to send any one of the American $4 monthlies or weeklies with The Living Age for a year, both postpaid. Littell & Co., publishers.

Jurors' Act Amendment.—By the provision of "An Act to amend the Jurors' Act," sections 5 and 6, the Board of Selectors for the County of Peterborough, met on Monday and adjourned to Wednesday afternoon. The Board consists of the County Judge, the Sheriff Treasurer and Warder of the County. They meet "for the purpose of determining the number of Jurors, both grand and petit, for the Superior and Inferior respectively, within the County, which shall be returned by the Local municipalities to the Clerk of the Peace for service asjurors during the ensuing year, and to fix the number of Jurors which shall be for service." The local municipalities shall return three times the number of names of Jurors as required for service in the said courts. The Clerk of the Peace is also the Clerk of the Board of Selectors, although he has no voice in the selection. This is the first Board meeting under the amended act.

Cox's Hand Fire Engine.—We have been recently shown a new hand fire engine invented by Mr. H. W. Cox, of this town, which promises to become a valuable acquisition as a protection against fire. Among the advantages which it possesses over other similar engines in its compactness and simplicity, and the effectiveness with which it does its work. It can be worked by one or six persons, as the case may require, and the force of the stream thrown may be modified so as to be utilized for lawn sprinkling, washing windows, etc. It is mounted on a small carriage, and can be easily conveyed to any required place. It is supplied with a flexible suction hose, and can be led from a cistern or well. The absence of complicated machinery, will we should think greatly cheapen the cost of production, and we trust that before it is once introduced, it will become a general favorite, as already several orders have been received by Mr. Cox. It is intended to have the present one on exhibition at the Central Fair, where it may be seen working.

Bend Contest.—Our modest little town is fast gaining a reputation. Our Fire Brigade Band has nobly stepped to the front and carried off first place in the amateur band contest. This victory has been the culmination only of steady practice and hard labor. The members of the band deserve the highest praise for their laudable efforts to make the band the best in the Province, and it rests with the citizens of Peterboro' whether it shall still advance or not. They are well worthy of generous and liberal support, and should receive the greatest encouragement. Throughout the contest they were the favorites, and although a severe loss was sustained through one of the leading players having his corset broken just as the competition was commencing, they succeeded in securing 150 points out of a possible 160, 10 points ahead of any of the other bands, of which there were eleven competing. The judges we are informed, complimented them on their proficiency and said they could have competed successfully with the military bands who played on Wednesday. On Saturday evening after the finishing strike Messrs. Stratton & Rutherford extended an invitation to accompany the visiting bands on the steamer Peyton during the afternoon of the following day. The invitation was promptly accepted, and a number of choice selections rendered, with the exception of those on the steamer Peyton, during the afternoon of the following day. The invitation was promptly accepted, and a number of choice selections rendered, with the exception of those on the steamer Peyton, during the afternoon of the following day.

Personal.—On Tuesday last we had the pleasure of a visit from Mr. Randall, of Port Hope.

"Signs."—Arrangements, we believe, are being made by the Lacrosse Club for the return match with Belleville, on the second or third day of the Central Exhibition. Another match is also in progress with the Bowmanville Club. These matches should call for close practice by the members of the Peterborough club, so that they may be able to give a good account of themselves.

Obit.—Mrs. Nicholls, wife of Mr. Aaron Nicholls, Smith, died on Sunday, 14th instant, at the age of 69 years. Mrs. Nicholls was a native of England. She and her husband settled in Smith 47 years ago—when the township was a comparative wilderness—where she resided till her decease, and which has become one of the most prosperous portions of Ontario. She was a consistent member of the Baptist Church. She leaves four sons and four daughters, all in comfortable circumstances. Her husband died about three years ago.

Auction Sales.—Mr. George McIlmoyl, will offer for sale by public auction on Monday the 22nd inst., on the premises of Mr. John and Thomas Cheeves, lot no. 20, in the 14th con. of Smith, the farm, consisting of 200 acres, farm stock, implements, household furniture etc. The farm is pleasantly situated, about 2 miles from Young's Point, and 6 miles from Lakefield and has all necessary buildings. The sale of stock is large, and will be without reserve, as the Messrs. Cheeves are leaving for the West. The sale will commence at 11 a.m.

Auctioneering.—As will be seen by advertisement in another column, Messrs. Gilbert & Moore have entered into partnership as auctioneers, commission merchants, etc. These gentlemen are so favorably known in Peterboro' that the mere mention of their entering into the auction business will command a fair share of the patronage. Those who contemplate having a sale might find it to their advantage to see this new firm before making definite arrangements. Parties entrusting sales to them will find them prompt and attentive.

Dominion Exhibition.—In connection with the Dominion Exhibition, to be held at Ottawa next week, the Midland Railway will issue tickets at single fare, during the week. They will also run a special cheap excursion to Montreal and Ottawa on Tuesday the 23rd. From Peterborough to Montreal and return the fare is only $6.50; and to Montreal and return by Ottawa, $8.50. The tickets to return by Ottawa cover a delightful excursion trip from Montreal via the Ottawa River Navigation Company's Steamers to Ottawa, rail from Ottawa to Prescott Junction, via the St. Lawrence and Ottawa Railway and thence by regular train home. This will prove a really desirable trip to those who can embrace the opportunity afforded.

To Sportsmen.—Now that the shooting season is again coming in, the following suggestions although not new, may not be out of place:—Don't point your gun at yourself. Don't point your gun at any one else. Don't carry your gun so that it's range includes all your hunting companions. Don't try to find out whether your gun is loaded or not by shutting one eye and looking down the barrel with the other. Don't use your gun for a walking stick. Don't climb over a fence and pull your gun through muzzle foremost. Don't throw your gun into a boat so that the trigger will catch in the seat and the charge be deposited in your stomach. Don't use your gun for a sledge-hammer. Don't carry your gun full cocked. Don't carry your gun with the hammer down. Don't be a fool. Don't you forget it.

A Sudden Death.—Mrs. Hall, of Aylmer street and relict of the late Mr. Wm. Hall, died very suddenly on Thursday night, of heart disease. She had been in her usual health until Thursday about eleven o'clock, when she felt symptoms of severe illness, but during the afternoon she recovered, but remained weak. Her son, Maxwell, sat up with her through the night. About eleven o'clock she felt easier and advised him to lie down, but immediately after this he heard heavy breathing, and approached her to find her just expiring. She was in the 82nd year of her age. Her husband died about 16 years ago. She leaves three sons to mourn their sudden bereavement; her husband, three sons and a daughter, having gone before her. Her remains were followed to interment on Sunday by a large number of friends.

Cavalry.—Our Peterborough cavalry troop in the Toronto review, carried of the palm. They were well received by their fellow soldiers of Toronto and speak glowingly of their visit. The general commanding, congratulated Lieut. Col. Boulton on the appearance of the cavalry in general, and the Peterborough troop in particular. On Saturday the troop turned out and presented a very handsome appearance. Their new helmets seem to be a decided improvement. The officers deserve high credit for the proficiency to which they have brought their command. The Globe's report of the Toronto review says:

"The Cavalry acquitted themselves to admiration, and were conspicuous as well for their soldier-like appearance as for their horses, and as for their dressing, which was as nearly as possible perfect, that of the Peterborough troop being remarkably excellent."

ACCOUNTS.

An account from J. R. Stratton amounting to $47.50, and one from T. Sargeson for $1.60 were referred to the Finance Committee.

The Council then adjourned for one week.

The Boating Club Excursion.

The Peterborough Boating Club Excursion to Toronto on Saturday was very largely attended, between 300 and 400 people leaving the station that morning, the greater portion of whom returned the same evening, very much disappointed at the result of the four-oared race. After the Lachine and Barrie regattas "the Peterborougha" became general favorites, not only at home, but elsewhere, and on Saturday the large majority of those present were confident that they would come off again victorious. Fate decreed otherwise, and many who had taken heavy bets on them suddenly changed the expression on their countenance when it was officially known that their favorites were—not first, but third. Owing to the high wind prevailing during the afternoon, the race could not be called on till late in the evening; in fact many had left the lake shore believing it to be postponed till Monday. At about six o'clock, however, the wind fell and the crews were called out. Out of the large number registered to have entered only three came forward—The Leanders of Hamilton; the Argonauts of Toronto; and the Peterborough crew. After a start had been made and the first half mile rowed it became so dark that but little interest could be taken in the race by the spectators on shore—in fact it was impossible to tell the position of the crews, and it was not till the return of the crews to their boat houses that definite intelligence could be obtained. The following is the Globe's report of the progress of the race as seen from the press boat:

"All the crews struck the water well together and started off at a vigorous rate, the Argonauts leading with 37 strokes to the minute. The Hamilton crew pulled 36, and the other 34. The Argonauts continued to pull a strong and lively stroke, and before a quarter of a mile had been made they had two or three lengths to the good. At this time the Peterboroughs were second, but behaving very badly. Their steering was wild and zig-zag, and they pulled the water considerably. It was noticed that the Leanders were proceeding in an almost direct course, and were pulling a steady stroke that drove their shell rapidly forward. At the half mile the positions were the same, only that the Peterboroughs had fallen somewhat behind the Argonauts, and the Leanders were now close upon them. By the time the three-quarters flag was reached the Leanders had taken second place. The Argonauts continued to speed through the water with their steady and telling stroke, and reached the turning point six or seven lengths in advance of their Hamilton rivals, who kept second place, while the Peterboroughs still followed in their terrific course. The view of the race from the rudder's peg was now completely changed by the S. G. Mason, which deliberately crossed the course between the J. D. Doyle and the turning flags, although Mr. Robertson managed to keep his keep back. This absurd and unfair practice is condemned among captains of steamers at regattas, and it is about time that they learnt to know better. In this instance there was no necessity for the step taken by the captain of the Mason, while it put the referees at a great disadvantage, inasmuch as he was for a time hindered from watching the progress of the crews. When these in the rear again again caught sight of the boats, the Argonauts were in the act of rounding their mile, being closely followed by the Leanders. It was remarked that the Argonauts were very slow in making the turn, and consequently lost a number of yards which the Leanders were not slow to take advantage of by the Leanders, who were the first to straighten out for the pull homeward. The Peterboroughs rounded in good style, but were so far behind that there was little chance of them overtaking the others. The Leanders kept a tolerably straight course, and led all the way home, while the other two crews were wide of the line and not in among the steamers and row-boats, whence their progress was of course somewhat retarded. The Leanders passed their winning flag about three lengths in advance of the Argonauts, their time being 20 min. 15 sec. The Peterboroughs were four or five lengths behind the Argonauts, but stopped rowing when the latter got home. They would undoubtedly have been in a better position at the finish had they kept on rowing. The delay of the Argonauts in rounding the mile flag was probably due to the fact that the slipped off his mat, by which they lost or seven lengths. Had this mishap not occurred they would probably have come in considerably from what it did. Hanlan went over the course with the crews previous to the race, and was of opinion that the Leanders would win if they pulled as they had to observe to do so."

It is perhaps unfortunate that the crews connected to the many boating clubs on the lake front, or had the boats been manned by local crews, would have been more interested in the race, and would have taken more pains to see that it was fairly rowed. As it was, the Leanders had a much better position than the others, and were thus enabled to win by a much greater distance than would otherwise have been the case.

—The village Council met last Monday evening in the Council Chamber. All present but the Reeve. Isaac Garbut, Esq., occupied the chair. There being little or no business of any importance to transact, the Council enjoyed a friendly chat, and were amused by the chairman remarking that the Council was like a town market at home, in Yorkshire, which opened at half-past eleven and closed at eleven thirty.

—The Rev. Mr. Rowe paid our village a visit on Saturday, and undertook to water his horse in the river just above Mr. Hull's dam. The "critter," not satisfied with a drink, concluded to have a swim, and started across the river. When he got as far as the slide, the current proved too strong, and he tried to land there. Fortunately some parties were at work there and managed to head him off, for had he gone over our Rev. friend would in all probability been minus a horse and harness. As it was he got ashore almost where he started from, all safe and sound.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The Town Council met on Monday evening in regular session. Present,—His Worship the Mayor, J. J. Lundy, Esq., and Councillors Cahill, Paterson, Rutherford, McBain, Yelland, Douglas, Deane, Griffith, Taylor and Robertson.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The following communication from Mr. Baptie was read and received:—

To the Mayor and Town Council of the Town of Peterborough:—

GENTLEMEN,—I, the undersigned, Alexander Baptie, planing mill proprietor, of the Town of Peterborough, do hereby petition your honorable body to submit to the duly qualified electors of this municipality a by-law granting me aid to carry on and extend my business in the sum of Three Thousand Dollars, the conditions as to re-payment to be such as your honorable body may deem best in the interests of those whom you represent.

In support of this my petition, I beg leave to present the following reasons:

1st. I have for five years past carried on in this town an important industry, viz.: The manufacture of all kinds of building material composed of wood, and with the aid of the best wooden machinery, this has placed facilities for building and improving buildings within the easy reach of all property owners, a statement which the fine appearance and continued progress of both our public and private buildings fully attests. Viewed in this light, therefore, the maintenance of such an establishment with complete mechanical facilities is undoubtedly a public benefit.

2nd. During the five years I have been in business I have paid out in wages to workmen, from five to six thousand dollars per annum, and this amount has of course all been spent within the town. My material has also nearly all been purchased here, making an aggregate of from ten to twelve thousand dollars outlaid here.

3rd. The depression of the past year has compelled me to curtail my business so that I now employ only about one half of the amount of skilled labor that I did heretofore.

4th. The acquisition of $3,000 additional capital to my business would enable me to place it on its old footing. I could also increase and improve my machinery, this by the saving effected in labor would lessen the cost of work, giving renewed encouragement to building enterprise and, moreover, I could extend my business in another direction, giving employment to a much larger force of men. For these reasons, therefore, I ask your honorable consideration of my petition, and I do so with the confidence since I have learned that several members of your body view with favor a petition of a similar nature from a business competitor of my own. I remain, gentlemen,

Yours, etc.,
A. BAPTIE,
Planing Mill Proprietor.

September 3rd, 1879.

From W. Masson, Secretary Peterborough Mechanics Institute, forwarding a copy of a resolution passed by the Institute, acknowledging with thanks the receipt of the grant of $100 made by the town.—Received.

From Jas. Edwards, Town Treasurer, stating that the Market Clerk was in arrears to the amount of $468.59, which was payable on the 1st of September.—Referred to Finance Committee.

From James Edwards, asking the Council to provide a safe place for the keeping of town moneys after banking hours.—Referred to Finance Committee.

From Jas. Edwards, giving a statement of the receipts and payments for the month of August. —Referred to Finance Committee.

An opinion from Scott & Edwards, was read, to the effect that the town would have to refund to Mr. Wm. Davidson the $1089 paid by him to the town for property which actually belongs to the Dickson Estate.—Referred to Finance Committee.

From Thos. Billington, asking for a refund of over assessment.—Referred to Finance Committee.

From John Patterson, asking for a refund of $1.60 dog tax. He being assessed for three and having only two dogs.—Referred to Finance Committee.

From R. White, asking for a refund of dog tax, he having only one dog.—Referred to Finance Committee.

From Thomas Coe, asking for a transfer of butcher's license.—Granted.

From Mrs. Donovan, asking for a reduction of her taxes.—Referred to Finance Committee.

From Thos. Britton, asking for the remission of a fine imposed on him in the Police Court.—Referred to Finance Committee.

From W. and James Montgomery, asking that the taxes be not returned against the property on part of lot 17, north of Charlotte and west of George street, as the party that occupied the same at the time the taxes were payable, had sufficient to make the taxes had the Collector made sale.—Referred to Finance Committee.

ACCOUNTS.

Pullman's Shave.—Monday last, Pullman's London combination gave two exhibitions in this town. Almost every man and boy in the locality went to see the fun. The fact is, nothing—not even a street-row or a dog-fight will excite our male population so much as a general circus combined with a genuine variety troupe. In the afternoon, there was a fair sized audience. But when the shades of evening had enveloped the grounds, and people could not be distinctly distinguished, it was noticed that two or three persons who did not attend 'circuses' had a comfortable seat, taking in the whole 'bit' both with mouth and ears. The absence of a menagerie deprived a large number of others of a night's fun, as there was no gigantic 1869 mound hippopotamus to show the younger members of the family. The first part of the show, was not as funny or as interesting as the latter half. The acrobatic feats were well up to the average. The dogs were well trained, and the songs were very well rendered. The last act was irresistibly humorous.

Melancholy and Fatal Accident.—As Mr. William Wood, Teacher, North Monaghan, was driving down the Court-house hill, Brock Street, on Saturday, his horse in some unaccountable way became unmanageable and ran away. As the animal, running at a furious rate, turned down George Street, Mr. Wood was thrown out of his buggy opposite L. Fisher's feed store, and one of the wheels in the circular sweep, caused on turning the corner, caught his right arm causing a compound fracture just at the elbow and displacing the elbow joint. Owing to the shock of the fall, Mr. Wood did not at first feel the injury to his arm, until urged that he must re to a doctor. With a little assistance he was able to walk to Dr. Kincaid's office, who immediately reduced the fracture. He was taken to the residence of his brother, Ashburnham, where he remained under Dr. Kincaid's care, and was believed to be progressing favorably till Tuesday night, when symptoms for the worse manifested themselves. The Doctor was sent for and he found it advisable to call in Dr. Burritt for consultation. They advised amputation, but delayed it till his brother, Mr. A. Wood, of Millbrook, should arrive. At ten o'clock yesterday, when the doctors met to perform the operation, mortification had advanced so rapidly that they felt it impossible to save his life. He died about 12.30 o'clock. Mr. Wood has been about 28 years in Canada. During these years he taught school, 20 of which he taught in the same school section No. 3, North Monaghan, and six years in school section No. 4, Smith. He was 34 years Clerk of the Township of Monaghan. He was comparatively a young man, only 56 years of age, born as an unblemished character, was highly respected by all who knew him, was a useful member of society, and a consistent christian. He has two sons and a daughter, having gone before her. Her remains were followed to interment on Sunday by a large number of friends.

The Trustees of School Section No. 4 applied to the Council to be relieved from paying the sum of $24, being two years rent now in arrear for the Town Hall, which they have rented for a school house for five years. The Council wisely rejected the request, feeling it their duty to protect the interest of the ratepayers. On motion of Paul Costello, the Council stands adjourned to the call of the Reeve.

Lakefield.

(From our own Correspondent.)

—Mr. Griffin expects to have the repairs to the bridge completed in about a week.

—One or two cases of scarlet fever are still in the village, but of a very mild type.

—On Tuesday the Methodist Sunday School children held their annual picnic on "Hague's Point."

—Our Street Inspector has made quite a number of improvements to the street crossings during the past week.

—Last week some 25 of our citizens took advantage of the excursion and paid Toronto a visit. All returned well pleased with the trip.

—Quite a number of our sportsmen went up to Burleigh on Monday for a few days deer hunting on Lovesick Lake and Burleigh Bay.

—One of our village boys, who does not believe in pedal exercise, may be seen any morning or evening riding one of the family cows to and from the pasture field.

—Allow your correspondent to call Hurrah! for the Peterboro' Band! as I am sure I am only echoing the sentiments of their many admirers in this village, over their victory in Toronto.

—Brock Wait, Esq., formerly one of the owners of the water mill here, has been over from Michigan, his present home, on a visit to his numerous friends for the last few days. He looks as well and jolly as formerly.

—On Saturday last Mr. Wm. Adams, carpenter, while engaged at work on the bridge, got his hand crushed between the timbers. He may lose one of the fingers of the right hand; but at the best can rustionate for the next month, at least.

—The village Council met last Monday evening in the Council Chamber. All present but the Reeve. Isaac Garbut, Esq., occupied the chair. WITH THE REVISION.

"But I trusted in thee, O Lord, I said, Thou art my God."—PSALM xl. 14.

O Thou immortal Source of life,
The centre of all glory, below,
Thy glory and thy happiness
Doth Thou Thy own perfections flow:—
Blest in Thyself, no mortal tongue
Or voice of man, can ever lend
To Thy essential glory aught,
That no beginning knows or end.

My God, who form'd the earth, whose hand
Supports the pillars of the sky,
And fashioned by Its potent word, hold,
Thou art my God, O Thou Most High.—
Almighty Spirit,—Thou art my God;
All from Thy sovereign love divine
I mark applied saving energy,
My soul dare say, Lord, Thou art mine.

Thou art my God, I'll Thee exalt;
My God, I'll my soul to trust,
Thou feed the glorious powers are espoused,
And trained to Christ's divine truths and:
When expectations fail and vain
In human trust, my soul doth cry,
My strength is in Omnipotence,
God is my Rock, I dwell on high.

Let me my high estate survey!
O breath, O height, O depth,
All measurement, my vast desires
Are filled with human infinite.
My God's my triumph, glory, joy,
Possess my heart and let me feel
Thy Spirit's pow'r, so shall my soul
Love's fervors warm Thee reveal.

Adoring seraphs own their joys,
The thrice melodious notes they swell
Their glorious songs from tuneful harps,
Thou art my God, on this they dwell.
Thou art my God,—transporting words.—
The saints' eternal themes resound,
This, this, their constant praise, 'Thou art
My God who didst my soul redeem.'

Delightsome sounds, my willing lips
Thus, thousand times worshipfulness repeat,
The harmony, He restores all.
To Paradise, its bliss complete,
Unspeakable this gift, 'My God.'
Yes, Thou Thyself canst give be more.
Oh, teach me how I may Thy Name
Most magnify, bless, and adore.

CHAPTER I.

Faster and faster spread the flames, and now the ship was enveloped in a fiery sheet. Men and women rushed madly over the side to meet a quicker but less painful death. The boats, with one exception, had been overladen and capsized. There were hasty prayers and heart-rending cries of misery and distress. Death hovered, ravenous-like, over his victims; some clung desperately to the vessel's side, some supporting themselves in the water by articles snatched hastily from the burning ship, and with which they had leaped wildly into the sea. The captain sang through his trumpet, 'Take heart and sustain yourselves as long as possible. A ship is coming to our relief.'

James Durant stood upon the almost deserted deck with his only child, but four years of age, folded closely in his arms. His eyes swept the horizon in search of the ship to which the captain had alluded. He discovered it at last, but it was at least four miles off. Before the ship could arrive, they must be burned to death; or if he sprang, as others had, down into the water, both he and the child must be drowned, for he was not a swimmer.

The little arms were twined about his neck, the pale cheek rested confidingly against his own, but the brave child did not tremble.

'O, my God, is there no help?' cried the despairing father as the flames swept nearer, and he felt that his present position could be held but little longer.

'Here, give the child to me, and I will save her,' and turning quickly, Mr. Durant stood face to face with a stranger who had a life preserver in his hand.

'Quick! there is no time to be lost! The child can have my life preserver, and it will float easily. Yonder is another ship. I have been watching it for the last five minutes. It will reach us in half an hour at the most. There, that is fastened securely. Now, little girl, I am going to throw you into the water. You are not afraid?'

'No, no, but papa!'

The father caught her frantically in his arms.

'My darling Eva, you may never see your father again; but do not fear—God will guard you, and somebody will find you and take care of you. If you never see papa again, remember he is in heaven with mamma.'

'Has she no relatives?' asked the stranger.

'None in this country; I am from England and am travelling for health.'

'Take that pin from your bosom and fasten it to her clothes.'

'Heaven help you for the thought,' said the father; and in a moment the square and compass were glistening on the bosom of the child, and the stranger took her from her father's arms, saying: 'I am stronger than you, she must be cast beyond the reach of these poor drowning wretches, or they will rob her of her life preserver.'

The white drapery fluttered through the air, and sank beyond the waves; then rising, it floated lightly on the waters.

James turned to the stranger with tearful eyes.

'May God bless and preserve you, noblest of men. But you, as well as myself, must be lost.'

'No, I am a good swimmer, and here is a piece of board with which you can sustain yourself until relief arrives.'

The father cast another glance at the white speck floating rapidly away, and with an inward 'God preserve her!' sprang into the sea, followed by the stranger; but the two floated in different directions, and they saw each other no more.

Two hours later, James Durant awoke, as from the sleep of death, and found himself in the cabin of a strange ship, with kind and sympathising faces all around him. In a moment he realised all that had passed, and said eagerly, though feebly: 'My child, little Eva; is she safe.' There was no response, and a low moan escaped the father's lips.

'Courage, sir,' said a lady with tearful eyes, some of the passengers were saved by another ship.'

The father's countenance lighted. 'God grant that she may be safe.'

Mr. Durant recovered his usual strength for a few hours, and sought among the saved for the stranger who had proved himself so true a Masonic Brother, but he was nowhere to be found.

'He must be on the other ship,' said Mr. Durant, 'and he will care for Eva.'

Both ships were at port the following day, although Mr. Durant found the stranger who had befriended him, and who proved to be a Mr. Wadsworth, from a Southern city, Eva was seen by no one, and was given up for lost.

CHAPTER II.

'Here, wife, is a child that has just been washed upon the beach. She is cold and stiff, but I think she is not dead. Let us have some warm flannels immediately, and tell Thomas to run for Dr. Hunt.'

It was long before the quivering lashes and feeble fluttering of the heart gave token that success would crown the efforts of Eva's rescuers; but by and by, the lids parted and revealed two large liquid sky-blue eyes, the wandered from face to face in a bewildered way, and then closed wearily.

'I fear she will not recover very rapidly, said the doctor. 'She has a delicate constitution, and will require the best of care.'

'Poor child, said Mrs. Turner, 'I do not wonder she is nearly dead; but who can she be? Some terrible accident must have occurred at sea.'

'You had better examine her clothing,' said the doctor; 'perhaps you may find some clue to her relations.'

Mrs. Turner lifted the garments white dress, and turned it over and over. The square and compass glared there by Mr. Durant flashed upon the eyes of all at once. The doctor and Mr. Turner looked at each other, but neither spoke, and Mrs Turner did not notice the star but glistened in her husband's eyes.

The doctor's fears that Eva would not recover rapidly proved to be well founded. Days and weeks of fever succeeded in succession to life, during which she talked incessantly of 'papa' and 'poor mamma,' and of the 'burning ship' and of 'hunger.' She finally awoke to consciousness, and asked many questions as to where she was and how she came into the dark room, and who were those who attended her, but Dr. Hunt forbade her being questioned until she was stronger.

How interested were all in the convalescent whom the elements had cast into the little orchard town! The ladies declared that never before did a child possess such beautiful curls, while the gentlemen seemed no less interested, and brought her gifts of everything that might please her childish fancy.

'My dear little girl,' said Dr. Hunt, when Eva was at length able to ride out, 'will you tell me your name?'

'Eva,' said the child. 'I thought you knew it.'

'Yes, I know your name is Eva; but I want to know the rest of your name—your father's name.'

'Eva Durant. Mr. Durant is my papa.'

'Yes; I want you to tell me all you can remember about your father and mother.'

Eva's eyes filled with tears. 'Oh, sir, my mamma died and went to live with the angels. Papa said if I never saw him again I must know he had gone to mamma.'

'Where were you when he told you this?'

'On the ship; and oh, the fire burned me so; and papa held me in his arms until a strange man took me and tied something under my arms and threw me into the water, and I have not seen papa since. Oh, sir, can you tell me where he is?'

'No, dear child; but perhaps we may yet find him.'

And this was all that Eva's new friend could discover. It was plain she had come from the ship which had burned a few weeks before; that she had been cast upon the sea, and floated to the shore; but where was her father? Had he been saved, and was he searching for his child? Every possible effort was now made to find him. The circumstances of the case, with the statement of the child, were published fully in the newspapers of the neighboring cities, but the grief-stricken father, believing his child to be lost, had sailed a week before to Europe, and it soon became settled in the mind of Eva's protectors that he had perished. But the little one still prattled about her 'papa' and he was coming by and by, and those who believed differently would not pain her by contradiction.

The square and compass that had been found upon her clothing was regarded as a powerful appeal from a Mason to his brethren to care for his child. So it came to pass that Eva became, as it were, the special charge of Hiram Lodge, No. 92. Mr. Turner would gladly have taken the entire care of the little waif, and the wealthy Senator W—— requested to be allowed to adopt her as his daughter, but the brethren in lodge assembled, declared by a vote that Eva should be reared, educated, and protected by the lodge, and that as Providence had placed her in Brother Turner's house, that should be her home.

And so years went by, and Eva became a healthy, joyous child, flitting here and there and everywhere, meeting with the warmest of welcomes. The Masonic Hall was only a few rods from Mr. Turner's residence, and Eva often went with him as far as the door, bidding the Tyler 'take good care of Pa Turner and send him home early.'

CHAPTER III.

The six years that followed the death of his wife and the loss of his child, passed wearily to James Durant. He visited every country in the Old World, seeking among scenes of natural beauty and grandeur as well as o historic interest, for the mental rest which could never be found. Once more he turned his steps towards America, and sought his Masonic friend Wadsworth. Finding that gentleman about setting out with his family on a journey to the Atlantic, Mr. Durant accepted the invitation to accompany them to Saratoga and Niagara, then to New York, where, leaving the ladies, Mr. Wadsworth and Mr. Durant wandered from town to town along the coast, enjoying the beauty of the scenery and the quiet hospitality that greeted them more than the crowded hotels and the fashionable style of the popular watering places. Fancy and the kind hand of Providence at length led them to the little town of B—— and the second evening after their arrival they visited the Masonic lodge. A warm welcome was extended to these brethren from such distant homes and both were invited to address the lodge. Mr. Durant said:

'Brethren:—I have travelled much and long. I have found Masonic sympathy in every part of the globe, and everywhere is Masonry substantially the same. I can hardly tell where I reside. The world seems to be my home, as I remain but a short time in any town or country, but my name is recorded in an English lodge. I love my English brethren, for they first brought me from darkness to light,' and I love English soil, for with it sleeps the wife of my youth. But love American soil, also, for here have I found the warmest of welcomes, the kindest of brethern. And, too, my own child is sleeping in a American waters; even beneath the very waves that wash the shores of your beautiful village.

'Six years have passed since this dear friend and brother robbed himself of his life preserver, that my little Eva might perhaps escape, and we hoped the elements might be kind, and that heaven would send her relief, but she was never heard of more.'

The voice of Mr. Durant was quivering with emotion, and unable to speak further he seated himself and covered his face with his hands.

Glances of surprise and pleasure were cast from one another among the brethern of Hiram Lodge. No one spoke, however, but all eyes turned upon the master, Mr. Turner. For a moment he seemed reflecting; then taking a slip of paper from the secretary he wrote:

'Mrs. Turner—Do not allow Eva to retire until I return home; tell her I am going to bring a strange gentleman who wishes to see her.'

And calling the junior deacon, Mr. Turner gave him the note, saying, in a low voice:—'Take this note to Mrs. Turner immediately.'

'Why, Eva,' said Mrs. Turner when she read the message, 'you are going to have company. A strange gentleman is at the lodge room who wishes to see you.'

'Who can it be?'

Eva looked perplexed and thoughtful Suddenly her cheeks flushed, her eyes lighted and clapping her little hands, she sprang to her feet and exclaimed, 'Oh, it must be papa! no one else would wish to see me; no one in the world;' and before Mrs. Turner comprehended the child's interpretation, she had passed the threshold and was flitting through the moonlight towards the lodge room. The tyler looked amazed when Eva burst into the ante-room, her cheeks burning, her eyes flashing with joy and excitement.

'Do not stop me, I am going in!' she exclaimed. But the inner door was fastened, and the impatient Eva nearly cried with vexation.

'Wait a moment,' said the Tyler, who having heard nothing of what had transpired within, was at loss to account for the strange conduct of the child, 'wait a moment, and I will send your request to Mr. Turner. He shall come out and see you.'

'Ashall not wait! I do not want to see Mr. Turner, I want to see my pa!'

'The child is crazy, that is evident,' said the perplexed tyler to himself; but calling out the deacon, he bade him say that Eva was there and was determined to get into the lodge room.

The deacon went to the east, and delivered his message in a low tone, and a moment afterwards moved 'that the craft be called from labor to refreshment.'

'Eva,' still Mr. Turner did the tidings to her eager ears.

And Eva did [illegible] into the hall, [illegible]

[illegible] ment than ever before. She glanced to the centre of the room and stood before the altar; half poised upon the tiny feet she seemed rapidly the faces of all. Her eager eyes soon detected the stranger, who was seated behind each other, and for a moment she seemed irresolute, then darting forward with a glad cry she threw her arms about the neck of Mr. Durant, crying, 'Oh, papa! my dear papa! You have come home at last. You were not burned in the ship!'

We will not attempt to paint the scene further, but will leave our readers to imagine the joy of the fond father, and also leave them to decide whether the tears that wet the cheeks of the brethren of Hiram Lodge were caused by sympathy with the happiness of their charge, or grief that they should lose one whom they all loved.

Sentiment and Sense.

Education is the keynote of the best society.

Duties fulfilled are always pleasures to the memory.

In the vain laughter of folly wisdom bears half its applause.

There is no killing the suspicion that deceit has once begotten.

Every man who has decision of character will have enemies.

To manage men one ought to have a sharp mind in a velvet sheath.

Veracity is a plant of paradise, and the weeds have never flourished beyond the walls.

All lines of the human face have something either touching or grand, unless they seem to come from vulgar hearts and low passions.

Every day brings its own duties and carries them along with it; and they are as waves broken on the shore, many like them coming after.

The rewards of the truly virtuous are inherent in their own lives, and are none the less enjoyed, though they are unknown to all the world.

It is a great gift of the gods to be born with a hatred and contempt of all injustice and meanness. It is a higher lot never to have lied and truckled, than to have shared honors won by dishonor.

Wherever affection can spring, it is like the green leaf and the blossom—pure and breathing purity, whatever soil it may grow in. It is not satisfied without perfect loyalty of heart It aims at its own completeness.

The world was made to work in, and if you fill your hearts with good angels the bad spirits will keep out, because there is no room for them. They like work to do, and will not stay long with an idle, slothful person.

Little words are the sweetest to hear; little charities fly farthest and stay longest on the wing; little lakes are the stillest; little hearts the fullest; little farms the best tilled; little books the most read; and little songs the dearest loved.

There is no compensation for the woman who feels that the chief relation of her life has been no more than a mistake. She has cost her crown. The deepest secret of human blessedness has half whispered itself to her and then for ever passed her by.

The purity and elevation of the race depend upon preserving inviolate in the hearts of men a belief that women's natures are crystalline as the celebrated glass, which was so exceedingly fine and delicate that it burst into fragments if poison was poured into it.

We see no white winged angels now. But yet men are led away from threatening destruction; a hand is put into theirs which leads them forth gently towards a calm and bright land, so that they look no more backward, and the hand sexy be a little child's.

Family likeness has often a deep sadness in it. Nature, that great tragic dramatist, knits us together by bone and muscle, and divides us by the subtler web of our brains; blends yearning and repulsion; and ties us by the heart-strings to the beings that jar us at every movement.

Always there is seed being sown silently and unseen, and everywhere there come sweet flowers, without our foresight and labor. We reap what we sow, but nature has love ever and above that justice, and gives us shadow and beauty, blossom and fruit, that spring from no planting of ours.

LITHOGRAPHIC STONE.—Mr. McLellan, of New York, a lithographic printer, has visited the lithographic stone quarry on Pigeon Lake, to confer with his colleague, Mr. Dillingham, and to inspect the stone personally. He corroborates our report of last week, and states that the quality of the stone is excellent, better than the German stone, but that it will be of no commercial value unless larger stones can be produced than is no the case. The German stones are very large, indeed, they can be obtained of any size required, and if the German quarry has a monopoly of the large stones they can charge such a price for them as will enable them to reduce the price of small stones to a point so low as to make the trade in small stones profitless. Unless larger stones are obtained than is yet the case the quarry will not be permanently worked. The quarrying is still going on steadily.—Independent.

Emmismore.

CATHOLIC PICNIC.—Contrary to the expectations of all, the day for our picnic at the Emmismore Creek turned out exceedingly fine and the people of the neighboring parishes—Peterboro' and Emily—took advantage of it to enjoy themselves as was proved by the vast crowd that assembled on the grounds from all quarters. Among others was noticed the Rev. Fathers Connolly of Emily, Cleotari and Kealty of Emismore. Dancing and all kinds of athletic sports were the principal features of the day. Dancing was kept up with great spirit to music furnished by a first-class string band from Peterboro'. A base ball game was played by the Peterboro' club against the Emismore Clippers in the forenoon and decided in favor of the latter by thirteen runs against three. The catalogue of game winners is as follows, no second prizes being awarded:—Running hop, skip and jump, 2 entries, M. Meehan. Running high jump, 4 entries, M. Meehan (in fact this fine young man took everything before him.) Tossing caber, 5 entries, Tearney of Peterboro'. Putting heavy weight, 4 entries, J. Meehan. 200 yards race, 3 entries, M. Meehan. There were prizes for various other sports, but for want of time they were not competed for, and the proceedings wound up with a competition in clog-dancing, won by T. Callaghan, of Peterboro', and an Irish jig won by M. Meehan. There were three entries to each.

John Bright on Canadian Protection.

John Bright has addressed the following letter to a prominent resident of New York:—

OUR ABE, RECHDALE, Aug. 16, 1879.

DEAR SIR,— * * * The policy of the Canadian Government seems to me injurious to the inhabitants of the Dominion, and, if persisted in, will be fatal to its connection with the Mother Country. To shut out the manufacturers of England is bad enough, but at the same time to seek to borrow money from her on a guarantee for a loss is a nonsense and a policy so impudent that it cannot succeed.

The great railway project (the Canada Pacific) can only add to the debt of Canada, and [illegible] heavier taxes, and [illegible] for all higher productions, so that Manitoba's [illegible] to her colony, for the [illegible] to cripple the

I believe the present policy of the Canadian Government is inflicting a wound on the union between the colony and England, from which, if it be not speedily reversed, great changes must come.

I watch the progress of the protection malady in the States and in Canada with great interest. I cannot think it will continue very long. Your letters will do something to weaken its hold upon those affected by it.

I am very respectfully yours.
JOHN BRIGHT.

Fatal Accident at Hamilton.

Two Men Killed by Fall of a Scaffold.

On Wednesday of the new Baptist church in course of erection on James street, Hamilton, a scaffold, about thirty feet from the ground, on the outside of the building, gave way as the stones were being hoisted, precipitating two men named Sullivan and Lang to the broken stones below. Sullivan's head was smashed and both legs broken, causing instant death. Lang fell on his shoulder, and was otherwise injured. He died shortly afterward. The other two men who were on the scaffold at the time clung to the buttress and the upright supports and escaped unhurt. Mrs. Sullivan came on the ground unobserved, and almost became frantic at the sight of her mangled husband.

The First Long Dress.

Did you ever experience the agony of meeting a girl that you are well acquainted with in her first long dress? No! A shower-bath of ice-water is nothing to it. You see a girl whom you have known from childhood. As you passed her each day your salutation was "Good morning Mary," but this time you notice something different. You seem to know the face, and there is a suggestion of familiarity about the figure, but you cannot place the girl at first. After a time it occurs to you that the girl has got a new set of clothes. This fact is not overwhelming in itself, and you prepare to give her your usual salutation, and mechanically thrust your hands into your pockets to see if there are any confections among the tobacco dust. You find a few conversation lozenges that had been handed to you at the last party by Miss Flirty, and you take them out, prepared to pass them over to your little girl friend. As you meet, however, there is something in her mien that causes you to crowd the lozenges back in your pocket. (We might remark in passing that conversation lozenges were invented by a philanthropist to amuse the inmates of a lunatic asylum. They have got outside of the asylums, but they still serve the purpose of the inventor.) You are not greeted with the hearty laugh of the little girl—that sweet music even to the most confirmed old bachelor and woman hater—but with a decorous bow that makes you involuntarily bow in return and mechanically raise the hat. The girl has lost her charm. She has a long dress on, and you are crushed.

One Great Mistake.

(From the Montreal Witness.)

There is one great mistake, which has been made by our people, which does not seem to be much dwelt upon, though, doubtless, every thinking man must be aware of it, and that is the constant influx from the country to the cities and towns. Farmers' sons don't see why they have not as good a right as any one else to be merchants and mechanics—and we don't either; only of this we are sure, that while there are not a sufficient number of producers in the country to supply the wants of their consumers, there cannot be solid prosperity. What we wish is to see merchants sons going out into the country, and, after a thorough practical training, settling down to scientific farming. Then farmers' sons will see that city life is not always and altogether desirable, and not be so anxious for it. We continued for years to warn the people that a crisis was impending, when all looked bright, and there seemed to be no limit to a clever man's prospects of success, because we saw the country as a whole steadily piling up her liabilities abroad and knew that such a rapid increase in our indebtedness must soon tell.

PETITT'S EYE-SALVE.

An Infallible Remedy for all Diseases of the Eye (acute or chronic), Granulation of the Lids, Ulceration of the Lachrymal Glands, Film, and Weakness of the Vision from any cause.

THE AMERICAN EYE-SALVE is presented the public with the assurance of its efficiency as a curative of the most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflammation whether induced by scrofulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diminished tone of the optic nerve, or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ. Also for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the Salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, where weakness, pain, and misery may have long threatened a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe, and effective remedy ever discovered. The materials of which it is made are pure, perfect, and costly, compounded with elaborate care and exactness safe in its application, being used externally, and, of course, lessening the pain and danger, which necessarily attends the introduction of minerals and eye-washes. RINGWORM and OLD CHRONIC SORES, of scrofulous origin, or resulting from whatever cause, yield to the AMERICAN EYE-SALVE. It is used successfully for Piles. Its soothing effect is immediate, permanent cure requires but a few applications. The proprietors of "Dr. J. PETITT'S AMERICAN EYE-SALVE," while making new and improved machinery for making a more perfect box for the Eye-Salve, have changed the Trade Mark on the cover so as to correspond with the Cut on the Wrapper, Circulars, Advertisements, etc. We call attention to this, as it might otherwise be regarded as counterfeiting.

THE GREAT CAUSE Of Human Misery.

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

☞ Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

As Surely as Effect follows Cause.

As surely as effect follows cause, so surely will disease eventually fasten itself upon a system deficient in vital energy, if tonic medication is not resorted to in time. The necessary tendency of a weak discharge of the functions of the body is to disorder its organs. Invigoration, prompt and thorough, is the only safeguard. No renovant of depleted physical energy, no restorative of lost flesh, nerve power and cheerfulness, has more clearly demonstrated its efficacy than Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine. In this preparation, associated with the salutary medicines which form its basis, is pure sherry wine and certain aromatic constituents, which impart an agreeable taste to the article, and give additional emphasis to its effects. In cases of general debility and dyspepsia it is invaluable and the desired effect is, in the vast majority of cases, remarkably prompt as decisive. That good natural appetite, which gives a relish for the coarsest fare is insured by the use of the Quinine Wine, while also cerebral brain exciting and body refreshing sleep. Fever and ague and bilious remittent fever, are dreams to the eradication of which it is specially adapted; but it should be used only in the intervals between the enhesses. The far-reaching effects of a good tonic, in all complaints involving loss of physical energy, are well understood by physicians, and the comprehensive indorsement for good of this preparation upon the system pens for us to bear out the professional belief in the value of invigorants as opponents of disease. Be sure to ask for the "Quinine Wine prepared by Northrop & Lyman, Toronto. Sold by all druggists.

PETERBORO' BRANCH, - DIXON'S BLOCK.

Goods Sold Direct to the People at Wholesale Price.

The Only Business in Canada Conducted on the Same Principle.

Over $200,000 Worth of Boots and Shoes so Supplied Last Year.

The great loss annually sustained by selling to Dealers, first led to our establishing of Branch Stores, where we could supply direct to the people for Cash all the goods we could manufacture, thus giving to the people the goods less the dealer's profit, and saving to ourselves the annual loss. We were the more forcibly impressed into this step from the fact that cheap Eastern-made shoddy goods were being palmed off as our goods. We now sell our own goods, warrant what we sell, use no shoddy or inferior material of any kind, and can and do supply goods of the best quality 25 per cent. less than they can be bought elsewhere.

Everything Marked in Plain Figures. Only One Price.

CUSTOM DEPARTMENT.

Our arrangements are now complete in this department, and we can make to measure promptly either Ladies', Gentlemen's, or Children's Goods, in the Latest Styles, at little over half the price usually charged.

IMPROVED CHURN DASHER.

(Patented July, 1878.)

Is adapted to all the old fashioned Round, Tub or Crock Churns. It will churn and gather the butter in from 4 to 10 minutes, and turn out 10 per cent more butter than anything of the kind in use. Each section or flange is an Air Chamber, which forces a large volume of atmosphere down into the milk or cream at each stroke, the cream or milk at the same time is forced over upward of four hundred inches of surface, and is thrown with such great velocity square against the walls of the churn that it ruptures the globules and frees the butter with a few strokes. It is perfectly simple and easily constructed,—no machinery about it to get out of order.

PROTECTION.
Ladies, protect your health by purchasing the
WHEELER & WILSON
which is proven to be
The Lightest Running Sewing Machine in the World!
Natural Philosophy proves it, and Common sense sanctions it, as their motion is Rotating, while that of a shuttle machine is reciprocating. They are more durable than a shuttle machine and far less complicated.
They sew heavier and lighter than any other machine.
They make less noise than any other machine and they do the nicest and greatest range of work, never soiling the thread with oil or dirt.
They also took the Grand Prize at the Paris Exposition, held in France, on the 1st of October, 1878, from all the other machines present, and there were over fifty-two thousand on exhibition.
The above Leading Machines are sold at Peterborough by
G. A. MITCHELL,
The only authorized Agent. He also repairs all classes of Sewing Machines, and guarantees his work. Office, Hunter-St. Peterborough.

Time Turns the Table.

Ten years ago when she was ten,
I used to tease and could her;
I liked her, and she loved me then.
A boy scorns five years older.

I liked her; she would fetch me my hook,
Bring lunch to stream or thicket;
Would oil my gun, or bait my hook,
And fish for hours at cricket.

She'd mend my cap, or find my whip,
Ah! but boys' hearts are stony!
I liked her rather less than "Gyp,"
And far less than my pony.

She loved me then, that's Heaven knows why,
Small wonder had she hated,
For scores of deals she's had to cry,
Where I decapitated.

I tore her frocks, I pulled her hair,
Called "rod" the sheath upon it;
Once fishing I would even dare
Unhook baboons in her bonnet.

Well, now I expiate my crime—
The Nemesis of fables
Came after years—To-day old Time
On me has turned the tables.

I'm twenty-five, she's twenty now,
Dark-eyed, pink-cheeked and bonny,
The curls are rumpled round her brow;
She smiles and calls me "Johnny."

Of yore I used her Christian name;
But now, through fate or malice
When she is by my lips can't frame
Five letters to make 'Alice.'

I, who could joke with her and tease,
Stand silent now before her;
Dumb, through the very wish to please,
A speechless, shy adorer.

Or, if she turns to me to speak,
I'm dazzled by her graces;
The last blood rushes to my cheek,
I babble commonplaces.

She's kind and cool—ah! Heaven knows how
I wish she blushed and faltered;
She likes me, and I love her now;
Dear, dear! how things have altered.

Three Rules for Abbreviating Multiplication.

(From the Scientific American.)

The "Talkby's Amali al Hissab" ("Analytical Resume of Calculating Processes"), written by Ibn al Banna of Morocco, contains in the chapter devoted to the multiplication of integral numbers, some abbreviated methods by means of which, in certain particular cases, the product of the multiplication of two integral numbers may be obtained very quickly. As these processes deserve to be known, and are not found in any arithmetical treatise, (although the "Talkhys" gave them nearly six centuries ago), we publish them for the benefit of our readers.

FIRST RULE.—Suppose it be required to multiply by itself a number composed of figures, each equal to unity; for example, 11,111 × 11,111.

We say that the product will be, 123,454,321.

To obtain this we write the number of figures contained in one of the factors and to the left and right of this number we place symmetrically the natural decreasing series of numbers less than it. Thus, in the example proposed we write down 5, that being the number of figures in one of the factors, and then we place on each side of that number the natural decreasing series of figures less than 5, that is 4, 3, 2, 1, in the following form, 1234 5 4321.

Another Example.—Multiply 1,111 × 111 by 1,111,111. The product will be at once obtained by writing to the left and right of 7 (the number of figures contained in either of the two factors) the numbers 6, 5, 4, 3, 2, 1, as follows: 1,234,567,654,321. If we multiply 11 by 11, the application of the same rule will give as result, 121.

SECOND RULE.—To multiply by itself a number composed of figures, each equal to 9; for example, 99,999 by 99,999. We say that the product will be 9,999,800,001.

To obtain this result, we write down the figure 8, placing to its left as many nines, and to its right as many ciphers, as there are figures less one, contained in either of the two factors, afterwards adding to the extreme right of the resulting number the figure 1. Thus, then, in the proposed example (99,999 × 99,999) we write the figure 8, and to its left the figure 9 repeated four times (5—1), and to its right four zeroes (5—1), giving as a result 9999 8 0000; now altering the figure 1, we obtain the product sought, 9,999,800,001.

Another Example.—If we desired to find the product of 9 by 9, we should obtain, by applying the general rule 81. In fact, in this case, the number of figures of either factor, diminished by 1, gives zero as a result. This explains why the figure 8 does not appear accompanied by nines or ciphers, but only by the figure 1 of the units.

THIRD RULE.—To multiply a number composed of figures each equal to 9, by another whose figures, although equal to each other, are different from 9; for example, 999 by 666.

In this case we say the product will be equal to 665,334.

To obtain this result, we first obtain the product of a figure of the multiplicand by that of the multiplier; the figure of the units of this preliminary product will be the number of the units of the product sought. To the left of the figure of the tens of the said preliminary product we write the figure of the multiplier as many times as there are figures, less one, in either of the two factors; and to its right we place the same number of figures, each equal to the difference between a figure of the multiplicand (9) and a figure of the multiplier (6). To the extreme left of the quantity thus obtained we annex the figure of the unit of the preliminary product; thus we have the product sought. To make this clearer: in the proposed example, 999 × 666, the preliminary product will be 9 × 6 = 54; so that, to the left of the figure (5) of the tens, we place the figure of the multiplier (6) as many times, less one, as there are figures in either factor, which in this case will be twice (3—1), and to its right twice the figure 3 (the difference between 9 and 6), as follows, 665 33; and to complete this number we annex the figure (4) of the units of the preliminary product (54). We then have the product sought, 665,334.

Another Example.—Suppose it be required to multiply 9,999,999 by 3,333,333. The preliminary product is 27, and the number of figures in each of the factors is 7; so that, writing to the left of the figure 2 (of the tens of the preliminary product) six (7—1) figures, each equal to one of those of the multiplier (3), we have, 3333332. Now, if to the right of the same figure (2) we write six figures, each equal to the difference between the figure of the two factors (9—3), we have, 3333332 666668; and finally we obtain the definite product by annexing to the right of the foregoing quantity the number 7 (the unit figure of the preliminary product), as follows: 33,333,-296,666,667.

Another Example.—It 99 be multiplied by 22, as the preliminary product is 18, and each factor contains two figures, it will be sufficient to write, to the left of the figure of the tens (1), the figure of the multiplier (2) but once, and to its right the figure 7 but once (the latter being the difference between 9 and 2); we will thus have 217, and to this we annex the figure 8 (the unit of the preliminary product), and obtain the product sought, viz., 2,178.

This rule will hold good in all cases except those in which the factors contain each but a single figure. If for example, we should apply the rule to the case 9 × 2, the preliminary product, 18, would at the same time be the final product. It is easy to see that the second rule may be considered as a particular case of the third—one in which the difference between the figure of the multiplicand and the multiplier is zero.

The Zulu War Ended.

Capture of Cetewayo.

CETEWAYO DESERTED BY ALL HIS FOLLOWERS IS SURROUNDED AND CAPTURED IN THE BUSH—SIR GARNET WOLSELEY'S POLICY CRITICISED.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—A despatch by way of St. Vincent fully confirms the capture of Cetewayo. He was taken by a pursuing party under the command of Col. Barrow. The news causes much excitement in Capetown. Some days before the King's capture he disbanded his followers and secreted himself in the bush. The British, under Col. Barrow, pursued him from kraal to kraal, burning kraals as Cetewayo and his constantly diminishing followers fled before them. His capture was finally made by surrounding him in the bush with a detachment of troops, and threatening to shoot him if he refused to surrender at once. He was alone and made no resistance.

The few followers who accompanied the King in his flight left some weeks ago. His Prime Minister, two of his sons, and three brothers surrendered soon after the pursuit, and almost every day arms and cattle were surrendered to the English. Toward the end of his flight Cetewayo had no more than two or three followers, and these finally deserted him. The threat of Sir Garnet Wolseley that any chief harbouring Cetewayo would be punished severely, and that his kraal would be burnt, had its effect in bringing about the capture of the King. The capture of the Zulu King ends the war in South Africa, though it is feared new troubles will arise in the settlement of the affairs of the conquered territory.

Sir Garnet Wolseley's policy of distributing Cetewayo's power among the chiefs in Zululand is severely criticized in radical circles as involving entirely a new organization of the country, and likely to lead to new and perilous complications. It is affirmed it would have been much wiser on the part of the Home Government to instruct Wolseley to have granted such concessions as would have made the present dynasty a friend of the Crown instead of destroying it. England's entire South African policy before and during the war is characterized as both treacherous and foolish.

What disposal will be made of Cetewayo's person has not yet transpired.

General Wolseley telegraphs that all important Zulu chiefs have now submitted.

The Two Honeymoons.

Samantha Allen's opinion upon these familiar moons, as expressed in the Chicago Inter-Ocean, is as follows: "Thomas is as determined as a rock about one thing, that when he and Maggie are married they are going to keep house by themselves. The first years in married life is a precarious time, make the best of it; a dreadful curious, strange, precarious time; and never a woman wants a free room for meditation and prayer, it is then; and, likewise, the same with the man. There never was two persons so near alike but what they were different, and had their different ways and eccentricities. A woman may think she knows a man just as well as if she had been through his head a number of times with a lantern; but let her come to live with him from day to day, from week to week, in sunshine and in storm; when dinner is ready at noon and when it is late; when his boots are in the nail and when it is lost, when stovepipes are up and when they are being put up, and in all other trials and nevrfuss of life. I tell you, she will come across little impatient, obstinate streaks in him, she never laid eyes on before; little selfish, overbearing streaks. And the same with her. He may have been firm as a rock in his belief that he was marrying an angel, but the very first time he brings unexpected company home on washing day he'll find he hasn't. They may be awful good-principled, well-meaning folks, nevertheless, but there are rocks they have got to sail around, and they want strength, and they want patience, and they want elbowroom."

* * * "There is another moon, what you may call the harvest of married life, that rises to light the married lovers on the pilgrimage. It may not be so brilliant and dazzling as the honeymoon, but its light is steady and calm, and mellow as anything, and it shines all the way down to the dark valley, and throws its pure light clear across to the other side. * * * Then, if they want to take in a few infirm or even bed-ridden relations, on his side or on hers, let 'em take 'em in—it would be perfectly safe."

Twain on Elevated Roads.

"I used to be afraid of them, but it's no use. Death stares us in the face every where and we may as well take it in its elevated form. I have a friend who wanted to take a ride on the elevated when the first one was built; but when he looked at it he thought of his wife and children and concluded to walk home. On the way up, to see a woman who was washing a stationary window fell out and just grazed my friend's head. She was killed and he had a very narrow escape. It's no use there are points nothing whatever dangerous, and we may well fall in [illegible]

Completed.

THE WOOLLEN FACTORY.—Mr. E. Senior informs us that he will begin operations in the new factory upon the arrival of the wool. Much of the machinery required in the process of manufacture, is now in readiness awaiting the application of the power and the attendance of the employees; and in three or four weeks everything will be as busy as in the days of yore. A commencement will be made with three sets, still, Mr. Senior hopes in the near future to carry on the business to the full capacity of the building, which we understand is quite large enough to run five sets, and give employment to about one hundred hands.—Herald.

Cobourg.

DEPLORABLE FATAL ACCIDENT.—An accident occurred at the Grand Trunk station in this town at midnight on Monday last, by which a brakesman named Edward Plain lost his life. A freight train had just arrived, and a car having to be left at this station, the deceased proceeded to uncouple it, when he was knocked down and his left leg smashed in a frightful manner by the wheels. The deceased belonged to Belleville, and leaves a widow and two children.

A WONDERFUL ESCAPE.—On Friday morning Harry Jamieson, of the firm of Grieve Jamieson, met with a severe and very painful accident. He was working on the new roof of Victoria Hall, south side, and was sitting on a board near a derrick when the board canted and he slipped off. He had presence of mind enough to clutch the derrick, but he could not hold on Further down, he clutched the rope, put it slipped through his fingers, and he fell with a heavy thud to the ground on a pile of bricks and tin eave troughing. The latter material being flexible, helped to break his fall. He struck on his shoulders and head, but wonderful to relate after falling 45 feet, above the average four-storey building height, he was picked up sensible and no bones broken. He received a severe shaking and a cut on the back of the head.

THIEF CAPTURED.—The Star says that Major Boulton, of Sherbrooke Lodge, had a valuable horse stolen from his stable on Wednesday evening last. The major was in town the same evening, and when returning home met the man riding the horse, but owing to the darkness of the night did not recognize it until missed from the stable. The following morning he procured a warrant for the arrest of the thief, and also telegraphed westward for the authorities to be on the outlook, and Mr Boulton himself also followed. The thieft had got as far as Bowmanville, and had tied the horse outside of the house while he went in for a drink; the Major coming along at the time observed the horse, and at once secured the services of Chief Constable Coleman, who arrested the thief. He was brought to Cobourg on Friday, and was up before the Police Magistrate on Tuesday for examination. He gave his name as Simon McLeod and is a Frenchman. He was sent up for trial.

Newcastle.

There is rather an old state of things in Newcastle. A young woman was imprudent enough to become a mother before a wife. After trying in vain to get the reputed father to recognize her claims upon him she left the child at the house of his father, with whom the young man resided. The grandmother repudiated the burden thus thrown on her, and had the mother arrested and brought before the authorities for child desertion, and the authorities, after the regular examination, committed the wicked parent to the Cobourg gaol for the crime. But the babe still remained, and the grandmother, conceiving the Reeve of the municipality to be officially the foster parent of such unwelcome waifs, carried it to the domicile of His Worship and there deposited it. The Reeve in turn, grew angry on receiving such a gift, and had the grandmother arrested for child desertion, and committed her with the miserable mother for trial. But there is the child yet.

Bobcaygeon.

MUNICIPAL GOOD MANAGEMENT.—It is worthy of record that so careful has been the management of the township finances during the past few years that not only is the township out of debt but it actually has money on hand. At this season of the year the generality of township treasuries are empty. Not so with that of Verulam, which has paid every order presented up to date. Verulam, with Mr. Fairbairn for reeve and Mr. Junkin for deputy-reeve, is the best governed municipality in the county.—Independent.

Four adventurous young gentlemen from Buffalo passed through Bobcaygeon recently. Starting from Buffalo in a nicely equipped and thoroughly seagoing boat, they sailed down through Lake Erie and Lake Ontario, put their boat on the train at Whitby, launched again at Port Perry, and sailed through Sougog and Sturgeon Lake to Bobcaygeon. Passing through they spent a few days camping on the shore of Pigeon Lake, and then sailed away for Rice Lake. At Harwood they propose taking their boat by train to Cobourg, and then once more launch their bark upon the heaving bosom of Lake Ontario, spread their sails to the eastern breeze, and ho for home.

Lindsay.

A GOOD LUMBER SALE.—A remarkably good sale of lumber for the times is reported to have been made recently by Messrs. Ulyott, Sadler & Co., who got $12 per m for three million feet delivered at Cobourg. This is equivalent to over $15 per m delivered across the Rice, and is said to be the best sale made in this section for a number of years. This is another indication of the decided improvement that has taken place in the lumber trade, and which if maintained and increased fairly will have a direct benefit factor in restoring "good times" than a dozen N. The Smith-Morris Race.

SMITH CONFIRMS THE RESULT OF THE PREVIOUS RACE IN BEATING MORRIS EASILY BY TWO LENGTHS.

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 18.—It was determined to get off the race between Smith and Morris yesterday if it was at all possible: so, though the weather was not the most favourable, both men being willing, they were called out shortly before six o'clock. The Basin then was somewhat rough about the turning buoys, though at the starting point not much exception could be taken to the water. Morris won the choice for position, and of course, took the inside berth. When the word "Go" was given Morris struck first at 36, obtaining a slight advantage over Smith, who began at 34. Morris soon increased his advantage to a length, but at this distance Smith, who was taking things easily, held him. Two or three times Smith spurted and elicited a response from Morris, who however, showed signs of having about enough of it, while Smith was still quite fresh. Smith came round easier than Morris, who, however, was a little ahead. The Hailgonian then dashed in with a tremendous spirt, and left four lengths of daylight between his scull and that of Morris. The race was now won, for there was no life left in Morris' efforts. Having seen that he could at pleasure lengthen his lead to six lengths, Smith took Morris' water, and paddled in ahead by two lengths in 21 m. 51 sec, —very fair time considering the state of the water. The betting ruled at 3 to 2 on Smith, with the call in Smith's favour. Morris is satisfied that he was beaten on his merits, though he claims a beaten man's consolation to complain of the water.

Love, Religion and the Peerage.

The greatest marriage of the past London season (says a London correspondent)—or, I ought to say, the greatest arrangement of a future marriage made this last season—is said to be hanging fire. The Earl of Loudoun has for some time been engaged to the Honorable Miss Alice Howard, daughter of Lord Howard of Glossop. The lady being a Catholic and noble lord a Protestant, she is prevented by the rules of her Church from contracting the marriage unless her future husband agrees, firstly, that they should be married in the Catholic Church only; and secondly, that all the children of the marriage shall be brought up as Catholics. Lord Loudoun agrees to the conditions; but his father, Mr. Abney Hastings, has placed his veto upon the arrangements. According to the will of the Countess of Loudoun, her husband, Mr. Abney-Hastings, has it in his power to disinherit his son, the present earl, of all the vast fortune left by his mother, with the exception of about £15,000 a year, which Lord Loudoun now enjoys, and which cannot be touched. But the fortune over which Mr. Abney Hastings has control amounts to upwards of forty thousand pounds per annum, and this the father threatens to cut off from the earl if he consents to the conditions which the Catholic Church wishes to impose. In a word, Lord Loudoun and his future bride have the choice between about £55,000 per annum, with the wedding celebrated in an Anglican Church and the male issue of the marriage brought up as Protestants, or of £15,900 a year with the marriage celebrated in a Catholic Church, and all the children educated as Catholics. Miss Howard and her family remain firm, and without the fear of giving into Mr. Abney-

PETERBOROUGH, SEPT'R 25, 1879.

NATIONALITIES and NATIVISM.

We have before had occasion to remark upon the peculiar tenacity with which people resident, in Canada, and to all intents and purposes citizens of the Dominion, cling to the traditions and names of the lands from which they or their fathers originally came. Go where you will, come when you may, you will find men boasting that they are English, Irish, Scotch, French, German, "or perhaps Italian"; thereby negatively depreciating and actually injuring the country of their residence, or even of their birth. Native Canadians are being continually reminded by their most intimate acquaintances and friends that they have been exceeding unfortunate in not being Scotch, English, Irish—or anything but Canadian. Even if birth in Canada were a positive blight upon the life of the man or woman, it is surely not kind, and certainly not considerate in relatives, neighbors and chance acquaintances, to be continually reminding one of the great calamity that befel one at his or her birth. Men and women who have come from older, and perhaps in many ways, more favored countries, pride themselves that they are natives of this, that or the other land; and call it patriotism. Yet they try to kill in their children that same patriotism—pride in the land of their birth—by teaching them to think more of some old land of which they practically know nothing, and to which they owe nothing but the accident that "once on a time" a child was born there who afterwards became a parent to them. What is this which all the parents owe to the land that has been the birth-place of their children? Many of them indeed are indebted to the Canada that they affect to despise, that they have ever had wife or child; or that they or their children are alive, to boast off, or be bored about a land of big sentiment, but little or no sustenance to the elders even, —much less the young ones. It speaks well for the filial respect and veneration of the youth of Canada, that they have not long since resented this continued imputation of inferiority upon their native land, and upon themselves. That nativism has not assumed a regular and aggressive organization in the Dominion, shows that Canadians proper have had the good sense to treat others with more consideration, not to say good manners, than others have treated them. What would be said of a Canadian going to Britain, who took every occasion of referring to the Dominion in terms to imply disparagement of that land in which he sojourned? He would be called all manner of hard names, and quickly voted no gentleman. Even though he could boast truly that better English is spoken by the masses in Canada than in England; that British rivers and lakes are merely creeks and ponds compared with those of the Dominion; and descant on scores of objects, new and wonderful to the unsophisticated Britisher, to make his comparisons offensive to his hearers would deservedly bring down upon him contempt and ridicule. Yet he would not be doing more than the average immigrant, however long in the country, contrives to do every day of his life in his intercourse with Canadians, even though they be members of his own household. Surely people who have enjoyed the advantage of birth out of Canada should know better. Canadians do.

The assertion of nationality was painfully apparent during the late visit of the Governor-General and his Princess wife to the western cities of Ontario. National Societies thrust themselves forward to present addresses. St. Andrew's societies seemed to congratulate the Marquis and themselves that he and they were Scotch. The St. George's Society of Hamilton displayed pettishness because they were not accorded the place of honor in the procession. The Germans were specially desirous of reminding the Princess of her and their common origin. In Toronto the Africans were accorded a special place in the procession, and they would have presented an address, had not some one dissuaded them from showing any distinction of colour in this free country, yet other distinctions, just as absurd, and just as invidious were preserved. Where were the Canadians in all this turmoil of addresses and replies? Nowhere. It would have been presumptious and pragmatical for natives of Canada to single themselves out from the great body of the people, and offer a special welcome to their Governor-General and the daughter of their Queen; but it was not so on the part of the Scotch, English, Germans, &c., who did thus from exclusive ests. So far has this absurd importation of nationality become a part of our social life, that the Governor-General of the Dominion has received every sort of welcome but that he should receive—a Canadian welcome to Canada.

Is it not about time this exotic nationalism was cast out; or at least placed away down where it should belong? The "heathen Chinee" is bewailed because he comes to this continent, and works hard and diligently to amass money to take home with him to China. The French Canadian habitant is accused of retarding the progress of the country, because he clings to the mode of life of his French ancestors of a century ago. But your French Canadian is the most Canadian man amongst us; and the saffron-skinned heathen is logical in his national exclusiveness, having for a basis the all-important return to his own country. The nationality mania which we condemn has no such excuse. It is the craze of men who are permanent residents of Canada, who exercise all the privileges and enjoy all the rights of citizens, and most of whom expect to die as well as live in this country. They certainly have more cause to love and respect the land in which they live than any other. It may not have so long and eventful a history, and hence not so many traditions of which to be proud. Neither has it so many for which its children may blush and feel ashamed. Scotch, English and Irish societies seem to feel the need of some excuse for existence in Canada, hence they assume to be benevolent associations—for the purpose of giving assistance to needy persons, if born within certain limits. But is not benevolence of wider principles? Certainly the genuine article doesn't give itself such display as regalia, badges, bag-pipes, bands of music and street parades. Nor does St. Andrew, St. Patrick, St. George, or any other national ghost provide the wherewith to bestow benevolent aid, even on the limited liability plan. The money is made in Canada; the increase is Canadian; and thanks are due to the same good Giver who looks to the prosperity of Canada as to that of older lands, and who is responsible for the making of Canada what it is—no matter who dare despise His plans and Providence.

THE CENTRAL EXHIBITION.

Although late in commencing arrangements for the holding of the Central Exhibition, present indications show that it will be little if any thing behind any of its predecessors. The entries have come in remarkably fast, and everything augurs well for its success. The local committee, as might have been expected, are untiring in their endeavors to have the grounds and buildings in thorough order, and if the weather is auspicious we fell confident their efforts will be well rewarded.

The following are the entries made with the Secretary up to our going to press:—

THE DAILY EXAMINER.

During the three days of the Central Exhibition, to be held in this town next week, we have arranged for the daily publication of the EXAMINER, one thousand copies of which will be issued each day and distributed gratuitously on the show grounds and streets. To business men this will prove a most desirable medium for advertising. In fact, so favorably is it entertained, that nearly all the available advertising space has been taken. We shall endeavor to make the paper as readable and newsy as possible, giving full particulars of the progress of the show, as well as other reliable local and general news. To those of our readers who may visit the Exhibition and who intend to lay in their supplies of fall goods, a perusal of the advertisements will well repay them. The men who advertise are the men from whom seasonable and cheap goods may be expected, and we therefore bespeak for our advertising patrons the support of our readers.

The West Waking Up.

The following from the Owen Sound Times shows that the interest of Western Ontario in the Toronto & Ottawa Railway continues to grow in extent and intensity:

"Another railway project which is attracting a great deal of attention in Eastern and Central Ontario, the Toronto and Ottawa Railway, though of more immediate concern to the people of the section through which it purposes to run, is not without interest to us also in the west. It is proposed to start from Toronto, and run in an almost direct line to Ottawa, touching at Lindsay, Peterborough and other towns en route. A glance at the map will show that it traverses a large territory now without railway facilities, and it cannot fail to be of great advantage to the back country. But it is an opening up another highway to Montreal and the seaboard that it will possess interest from a Western Ontario point of view. When navigation closes on the St. Lawrence, a large portion of the Western part of the Province is pretsed to[day] at the mercy of the Grand Trunk, and the way that road takes advantage of the situation is well known to all who have freight to bring over it. Illustrative of this, one of our merchants the other day showed us summer invoices in which the freight from Montreal to Toronto was 15 cents per cwt., while in the winter time the freight rates ran up to 30 cents and over. So notorious has become the bound, which rates make, immediately the Grand Trunk is relieved from St. Lawrence competition, that merchants here (and we suppose that Owen Sound is but a sample of other places in the west) endeavor as far as possible to have their heavy freight come through during navigation. This, however, is not always possible, and then our merchants have to suffer the penalty of their being no competition with the Grand Trunk. The Toronto and Ottawa Railway, besides giving us easier access to the back country and opening up a direct route to the capital of the Dominion, will connect with the Quebec Government road at Ottawa (the bridge across the Ottawa is now reaching completion), and thus furnish a new route to Montreal and the Atlantic, the distance by which will we believe, be a little less than by the Grand Trunk. The effect this will have in lowering freights in the winter time is apparent, and we hope the scheme will be carried to a successful issue.

The Vice-Regal party reached Ottawa on Saturday evening.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Hamilton-Courtenay match has been postponed until the 16th of October.

The tax assessment rate for the City of London has been placed at twenty mills in the dollar.

Hon. Senator Carroll, of British Columbia, died at his brother's residence, near Woodstock, Friday afternoon.

Sir Hugh Allan is in Ottawa frequently, and the inference is that he has not been sufficiently "recouped" yet.

Secretary Evarts, has returned to Washington, and speaks very cordially of the Canadians and his reception in Canada.

Mr. Smithers, of Smithers & Watson, the New York agents for the Bank of Montreal, was on Monday appointed General Manager of that Bank.

A corporation laborer of Toronto was buried alive Saturday by the sides of a drain he was digging caving in upon him. He was dug out just in time to save his life.

The Inspector of Fisheries in Prince Edward Island has seized the lobster factories east of Point Prim for canning after season, and dismissed the Fishery Warden for not promptly doing his business.

One of the strong objections urged by the Great Western Directors against fusion with the Grand Trunk, is the certainty of losing the traffic of those American lines with which the Grand Trunk is at constant war.

Secretary Evarts, of the United States, on his return to New York, stated to a newspaper representative that he had found the commercial classes in Canada generally in favor of reciprocity, but he held out no hope of the United States Government being the first to move in the matter.

The Lindsay Post believes "it would be to the interest of the Midland to throw its fortunes in with the Toronto and Ottawa, promote its construction, and work with it under one management." Undoubtedly. So it would be to the interest of every other local line to encourage a cheaper outlet for their traffic.

Perhaps we have not been swearing so badly after all in this profane country. It is now said that a "dam" is a small coin used in India, worth three farthings. It is also said that the expression, "not worth a dam," means in reality under the value of three farthings. If this is the case it will materially lessen the load of sin which many people have to bear.

Mr. Joly is apparently determined, if he is to die politically, to die game. He would make a profound mistake in entering any coalition. As long as he is "one thing or another" he occupies a strong position, and one which will always "bring him to his own again," but the moment he consented to coalition with such opponents as he confronts, his strength would become emasculated.

A special cable to the Globe of Friday says:—A deputation of Great Western shareholders had an interview with the Board of Directors yesterday, and urged the desirability of fusion with the Grand Trunk. It is understood that the result was a temporary postponement of action in the matter, and that the Directors promised to call a special meeting of the shareholders at an early date to discuss the subject.

An English paper says:—Talmage has not converted the English people to the belief that he is one of the most eloquent and able of living platform speakers. They look upon him as a huge fraud, in a character which makes frauds all the more detestable. He went there to make money, and his conduct in carrying out this intention has exposed him to merciless criticism. His harangues have been little more than frothy declamations, and his audiences decreased from the very beginning of his lecture tour.

Another stormy meeting of the shareholders of the Consolidated Bank was held in Montreal Saturday. Such expressions as "villain," "scoundrel," &c., were freely used. Sir Francis Hincks said that a run on the Belleville branch last December caused them to begin discounting. Their liabilities on 31st. Dec. were $6,101,369; on 31st. March they were $3,413,038, or a decrease of $4,100,000. The re-discount began some time ago, and deposit receipts were given for the amounts which appeared as deposits, while the paper was entered as a liability.

The celebrated libel case of the Hon. Mr. Huntington against the Montreal Gazette was before the court at Montreal on Thursday last. Judge Rainville decided that the portion of the plea referring to the Canadian Copper Pyrites Company be struck out, it being claimed that the facts set forth in this part of the plea had no connection with the Huntington Copper and Sulphur Company, for the reason that the plaintiff might bring a distinct action for the articles referring to the Copper Pyrites Company. The defendant has given notice of appeal against Judge Rainville's decision.

Ex-President Grant has arrived at San Francisco, after his tour around the world, and the reception which he received on landing was such as an Emperor might envy. The occasion resulted is quite a set-back for the Kearneyites. The leader of that gang of demagogues had threatened that he would hang Grant in effigy on his arrival. This created a good deal of feeling, and a prompt response was made that if Kearney attempted such a thing he would himself be hanged in person. The agitator dropped his project, deeming his neck too valuable to be trifled with in that way. There is no reasonable doubt that Grant can secure the Republican nomination if he wishes it, and with that there is equally no doubt that he could carry the country.

The Industrial Exhibition at Toronto closed on Friday last during the Exhibition the visitors who paid at the gates numbered 100,000; the subscribers and the holders of exhibitors, and complimentary tickets aggregated 50,000; and the aggregated entrances of exhibitors and attendants numbered 50,000, making a total of 200,000 visits to the grounds. Of course many people attended more than once, so that the number of different individuals would be less than that grand total. The gross receipts from all sources since the opening of the Fair foot up to about $68,500. About $20,000 have been expended for prizes and $30,000 on general expenses, leaving a margin of $12,500 to apply on capital account, or 20 per cent. of the expenditure on buildings. This sum, it may be mentioned, far exceeds the amount expected by the Association, and leaves them in a good position for next year. The amount coming from the gate this alone is $1,500, or two-fifths of the whole proceeds of $3,500. The expense of erecting the building was $600, leaving a good margin of profit.

ACCIDENT.—On Friday last as Mrs. D. McGregor of this township was descending from the barn floor where she had been gathering eggs, the rung she was holding, gave way, precipitating her to the floor fracturing her right arm, close by the wrist. The bone was set by Dr. Cornwall of Omemee, and the patient is now recovering as well as can be expected. —COM

FIRE.—A fire broke out on Division street, at 9 o'clock p.m., on Monday, in the north end of a frame tenement, occupied by Mrs. Maher. The fire brigade was promptly on the spot and confined the fire to the building, which was badly gutted. No insurance; loss about $450.

ANOTHER BLAZE:—By a fire in this town on Tuesday night O'Neill's livery stables, Stephen's cabinet shop, a building occupied by Isaac Oliver and Mr. Geddes, and the stables attached to the Commercial Hotel were destroyed. Loss about $8,000; partially covered by insurance.

On Friday last there was held at Bethel a splendid pic-nic in connection with the Methodist Sunday School. The day being particularly fine, there was a large "turn out," and ample justice was done to the delicious things provided by the good ladies of this neighborhood. The usual pic-nic plays, ball, croquet, swinging &c., were carried on enthusiastically. Rev. Mr. McCullagh improved the occasion by canvassing for subscriptions for the missionary debt of the Methodist Church of Canada.

A melancholy accident befel a son of Mr. John Gabbie, on Friday the 12th inst. The boy was driving a load of lumber with a team of wild horses. The horses ran away, and he was thrown off in front of one of the fore-wheels. The injury received by the wheel passing over his body left him in such agony as can be imagined by those only who waited on him during his illness, nor could anything be done for him, until death brought relief on the following Monday. Though in great pain he was quite sensible to the last. Being about fourteen years of age, and of a remarkably religious disposition, the family feel very keenly the loss of John. While we sympathize deeply with them in their bereavement, we feel that they must have great consolation in the fact that their dear one has had the religious training of pious parents. During his illness John besought them not to weep for him as he considered himself wholly to blame in the accident which would not have occurred, had the wishes of his father been minded, and he was far happier with the thought of leaving this world, than he would be by staying. Shortly before his death he told the doctor that he would not get better if it were in his power, for any money. On Wednesday a very large concourse of friends paid their last tribute of respect to one who was admired by all who knew him.

Lakefield.

(From our own Correspondent.)

—A large number of our citizens will take advantage of the excursion and pay a visit to Midland City on Wednesday.

—Bass are biting well just now, large strings being daily caught in the rapids below the dam here.

—The last drive of logs for this season passed through here last week. They belonged to Mr. Rogers, Ashburnham.

—Quite a large quantity of wheat has been brought into Lakefield during the past few days, the rise in price no doubt having an influence on the movement.

—The Village council have several men engaged cleaning out the drains on the railroad and other property (dug over a year ago), which have fallen in more or less. It will be a decided improvement, as the result will tell next spring.

DEGENERATING.—Since the "News" suspended there has been no one to call attention to any shortcomings, and pigs, &c. are again allowed to wander free and unrestrained over our roads and sidewalks, specially those belonging to one party who should have learned wit ere this, that is if it can be learned from payment of "poundage fees."

RUN AGROUND.—As the Chippewa was bringing down a scow loaded with wood on Saturday morning, it got aground in the Smithtown channel at the three Islands and remained there until Monday, in spite of all efforts to get it off, the cause was low water owing to the running of Mr. Rogue's logs over the dam.

HO! FOR THE CENTRAL.—Lakefield will visit Peterborough next week, or rather the Central Exhibition in our sister town. We were certain of at least one prise, but alas! the pumpkin split. The skin would not hold the meat, much to the disgust of the owner, but we hope to see him make a mark elsewhere and Lakefield hold her own.

COUNCIL MEETING.—The Village Council met in the Council Chamber on Monday evening; all present, except the Reeve; Isaac Garbut in the chair. Minutes of last meeting read and on motion adopted. Chas Payton was on motion appointed Collector of Taxes for this year. Some discussion took place in reference to the removal of the crossing opposite Mr. J. Griffen's, which was finally decided on, and the Road Inspector instructed to remove it at once:—[The above is as contemptible a piece of spite as has ever been sanctioned by a corporate body, and I only hope our ratepayers will remember it next January, and that it will be well ventilated through the press in the meantime.] The concession road matter was left over for a week to allow the matter to be investigated, and other information produced. Council adjourned for two weeks.

OUR OTTAWA LETTER.

(From our own Correspondent.)

So far as the weather is concerned the week opened up well for the Dominion Exhibition, and the prospects are that we shall have a show that will be well worth visiting. Your correspondent was at the Toronto Fair last week, and is free to admit that in the matter of buildings, Toronto is ahead of Ottawa, but in the matter of exhibits, Ottawa bids fair to equal the Toronto show in all respects. The Toronto show was a Manufacturer's Fair and held as a financial speculation. The Ottawa show is a Dominion affair and held with a view to promote the general agricultural interest of the farming community throughout the Dominion. Objection has been made to Ottawa as a place to hold the exhibition on account of its geographical position, but when it is taken into account that the present show is to assume a Dominion character, Ottawa is well chosen, being on the border line between the east and west.

THE GROUNDS ARE VERY CONVENIENT TO THE CITY,

having a number of different avenues of approach. The ovel within the enclosure is admirably adapted for a show ground, being a light sandy loam, which is rather improved than otherwise by a little rain, very different from the abominable mud at Toronto. The building accommodations are ample, substantial and well arranged. To-day, Monday, the grounds are like an animated beehive, getting things in place. The entries in all classes are very large in number. While the Agricultural Association in conjunction with the citizens, are doing everything to make the show both interesting and profitable in information to the visitors, and it is to be hoped, to the association financially, the citizens of Ottawa have not forgotten to spice the thing with a little amusement. There is to be an illumination and tender torch-light procession. McDowell will be at the Opera House with a good troupe, &c. The city just at this season is interesting to a stranger. There are many very fine rigs, rivers interspersed in the enclosure. The grounds about are in splendid order and are worthy of the heritage, and that is saying a good deal for them. The show of fat stock promises to be ahead of any previous exhibition ever held in the Dominion, already a great many splendid animals are on the grounds from the east and the west, and the prizes will be worth something in honor as well as cash.

Then we are to have a large gathering of representative men. The Governor-General, the Lieutenant-Governors of several Provinces, the Governors of Maine, Vermont and Ohio, and lastly we are to have H. R. H. the Princess Louise. On Tuesday evening she will present the medals to the successful exhibitors in the Senate Chamber. It will be a brilliant scene, one worth coming from Peterborough to see.

Great dullness has prevailed in political matters for sometime past, only the small lights of the Government have been attending to routine matters. Next week all the big guns will be here and the work of getting ready for the winter session will no doubt begin.

I hope to be a little more regular in my correspondence in future.

Vice-Regal.

RECEPTIONS AT WHITBY, PORT HOPE, COBOURG, NAPANEE AND BELLEVILLE.

The progress of their Excellencies from Toronto to Ottawa on Saturday last was one continued ovation. At Whitby fully 5,000 people turned out to welcome them, and demonstrated in the most emphatic manner their loyalty to Her majesty, represented by the Princess and her distinguished husband. At Port Hope, Cobourg, Belleville, Napanee, and in fact every where on the line of the road, people of all classes did their best to impress the travellers with their affection and loyalty. There were addresses, of course, kind words, while cheers and bunting did the rest. Their Excellencies will be welcomed back to the Capital after their extended tour through the country, during which they have had ample opportunity for making the acquaintance of our people, and of learning by actual experience the happiness and contentment which prevails in the land.

Dominion Exhibition.

An enormous number of animals and articles have arrived on the ground, and were placed in position during Friday and Saturday. It is certain that there will be one of the greatest live stock displays ever seen in the Province, except in the matter of horses, in which the east and centre fall far behind the west in richness. The total number of entries is considerably over 10,000.

According to the regular rotation Hamilton should have the Provincial Exhibition next year. It appears, however, the Ambitious City is not stirring very actively in the matter of bringing its claims before the Board, and it is rumored on the street that a strong effort will be made to pass over Hamilton and locate the show for 1880 in London.

It is also rumored that the Dominion Government is not acting towards the Provincial Association with the amount of courtesy which might be expected. It is said that nearly the whole of the Dominion appropriation of $5,000 has been spent under the direction of the Ottawa Government in erecting the building for the Manitoba exhibits and other purposes.—The Agricultural Association has been put to special expenses amounting to between one and two thousand dollars in the effort to give a national character to this exhibition. Under the circumstances it is expected that the small unspent balance of the $5,000 would be handed over to the Association, but the official in charge of it declines to do anything but expend the money according to instructions he has had.

Rev. Wm. McCullough.

Died at his residence, Gore's Landing, on Friday evening, Sept. 18. The deceased was a native of Ireland, who emigrated to this country many years ago. He has been a minister of the Methodist Church since 1840, and has during that long period occupied some of the most important offices in the gift of his brethern; but for the past three or four years has sustained a supernanuated relation. He was at one time pastor of the Methodist Church at Port Hope, and had a host of warm friends in town. His last visit to Port Hope was during the late Conference, but on account of the ill-health that proved fatal to him, he was compelled to leave before the close of the session. A post mortem examination was held by Dr. Herriman, who was his attendant physician, on Sunday, when it was found that the cause of death was cancerous ulceration of the stomach. A funeral service was held this afternoon in the Methodist Church Cobourg, in which all the ministers in the vicinity took a part. The body will be sent west to night, to St. Catharines, where the funeral will take to-morrow. "His end was peace."—Guide.

Robinson's Phosphorized Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Lacto-Phosphate of Lime.

Is prepared with the finest Cod Liver Oil,—one of the most esteemed remedies in the catalogue of the "Materia Medica," —Lacto-Phosbate of Lime, which enters so largely into the formation of bone material and other important tissues of the body,—Phosphorus, the great brain and nerve tonic and invigorator, in a form and combination most desirable to obtain its fullest effects, together with other valuable remedial agents, not the least of which is Iron, the great blood producing element. These are all intimately combined in one demulcent fluid of homogeneous appearance and delicate flavor, possessing remarkable power in arresting the decay and supplying the waste constantly going on in those abnormal conditions of the system affected by such diseases as pervert and impair nutrition, vitiate the blood, and sap the vital forces. It is highly recommended for Consumption, Chronic Bronchitis, Coughs, Scrofula, Scrofulous and Syphilitic Ulcers, Tumors, Diseases of the Bones, Joints and Spine, General Debility, Emaciation, and all impurities of the blood. It is particularly adapted to Delicate Females in those low states of the system that manifest themselves in so many of the ailments peculiar to their sex. To the aged and infirm its nourishing and invigorating properties will give renewed strength and buoyancy of spirit; and to very young children its continued use will be found of incalculable benefit, as its tonic and nutritive properties supply the blood with strength-giving materials for bone and muscle structure, and thus furnish the foundation for strong and healthy constitutions. It is very pleasant to take.

Prepared solely by J. H. ROBINSON, Pharmaceutical Chemist, St John, N.B. and for sale by Druggists and General Dealers. Price $1.00 per bottle; six bottles for $5.00. 39-3ins.

The Sheddon Suicide.

Charles Heidt, a farmer residing near the village of Sheddon, committed suicide on Wednesday night or Thursday morning September 19, while laboring under a fit of temporary insanity. For some years past his mind has been more or less affected in consequence of a severe blow that he received on the head, and any untoward circumstance was apt to upset him. Latterly he was a good deal disturbed by the desertion of his wife. He brought an action against her on Wednesday for breaking into his house and stealing a quantity of clothing and a number of promissory notes, &c. She was acquitted, and his annoyances at the result is believed to have completely upset his intellect. The old man lived by himself, and therefore it is uncertain when the rash deed was done. His eldest son by his first wife, Christian W., who lives on an adjoining farm, went to see his father at an early hour on Thursday morning, and failing to get in, he returned again about nine o'clock. Silence still reigned about the house, and he partially opened the bedroom window and perceived his father lying on the floor. Assistance being procured, it was found on entering the house that the old man lay extended at full length in a pool of blood beside the bed. He was quite cold and stiff. A coroner lay near him and upon examination it was evident that he had shot himself through the right ear, and had died instantly. A double barrelled gun of large bore lay beside the body, and a number of cartridges with the shells were scattered.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, SEPTR 25, 1879.

Good Hands Wanted.—Several first-class coat hands wanted immediately at Madison & Green's.

Fall Opening.—Miss E. Delaney announces the opening of her millinery and mantle show rooms. Her stock is as large and as select as usual.

St. Patrick Society.—A meeting of the members of the St. Patrick's Society will be held at the Choate House on Friday evening, October 3rd.

Dry Goods.—It will require a good deal of search to find a dry goods store where better satisfaction is given to customers than at Messrs. Rochett & Shirley's.—Call around there.

Lacrosse.—We learn that the proposed match between the Belleville and Peterborough Clubs will not take place owing to the inability of the former club to get their team together.

New Dress.—The Brantford Expositor has donned a new dress and is much improved in appearance. The Expositor is a live paper and an excellent spokesman for the people of Brant.

Removed to the Asylum.—A young man named O'Brien, who was committed a short time ago to the common gaol as a lunatic, was removed to the Toronto Asylum on Monday morning.

Fire Brigade Social.—The social assembly under the auspices of the Ashburnham Fire Brigade, held last Friday evening in the Town Hall, Ashburnham, passed off very successfully some forty couples participating in the night's enjoyment.

Repaired.—The Hunter-street Bridge, opposite the old Rink, has been repaired. It appears to be more substantial than formerly and is, no doubt, destined to bear some heavy trials. The work is evidently well put together, and will last a considerable time.

Burned.—We learn from the Globe that two barns near Mt. Elgin, belonging to Mr. John Garvey, of this town, were struck by lightning and totally consumed. They were filled with the crops which had just been gathered and the loss will be severe. There was no insurance.

What Meat is Worth in Australia.—A gentleman in the West has received a dodger from his brother, who is a butcher, in Australia, which contains the prices of prime meat. They are as follows:—Roasting beef, 4d. per pound; second roasting, from 2½d. to 3d.; hind quarter of mutton, 2½d. to 3d.; fore quarter of mutton, 2d.

The Golden Rest.—Ever attentive to the wants and requirements of his customers, Mr. Samuel White has this season made special efforts to secure one of the best stocks of fall and winter boots and shoes shown by him. The stock being well assorted and embracing every line, those needing a comfortable and durable article should visit his establishment.

Fall Boots and Shoes.—During the past few days Mr. W. J. Larmour has been receiving large additions to his stock of boots and shoes for the fall trade, which is now very complete. Especially in the finer lines he is showing some very superior articles which have been purchased on very advantageous terms, and will be sold at prices that must commend the goods.

A Beautiful Remark.—An exchange makes the following beautiful remark:—"As to the fine print, what is news and what is advertising—we would say that whenever a "notice or "local" is calculated to prove of pecuniary benefit to any individual or body of individuals, such notice or local should most unquestionably be regarded as an advertisement."

St. Luke's Church.—A harvest thanksgiving service, will be held in the above church on Friday, (to-morrow) evening at half past seven. The church will be neatly decorated for the occasion with the produce of the garden and field, and it is hoped the members of the congregation will avail themselves of the privilege of then rendering their thanks to Almighty God for the abundant harvest, and of joining in the first Harvest Home Festival in connection with the parish of Ashburnham. The Rev. W. E. Cooper, of Port Hope, will be the preacher on this occasion, and the collection is to be in aid of the organ fund.

Clothing for the Million.—The feeling generally pervading the country is that the "good times" for which we have hoped so long, are about dawning, and that business this fall will be much better than that of previous years. In view of this fact, merchants generally are preparing for a brisk trade. Among those who have purchased largely is our enterprising citizen, Mr. H. LeBrun, whose mammoth advertisement appears in this week's issue. It would be impossible in this notice to enumerate the many lines and attractions he is offering, and nothing but a visit to his store can give the slightest conception of the pains he has taken to provide for his customers and the public. Those who read his announcement in another part of this paper, and requiring good and substantial clothing at moderate rates, should not fail to call at the City Clothing Store.

Curling Club.—On Friday evening last, the annual meeting of the Peterborough Curling Club was held at the Huffman House. After the examination of reports, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—

PRESIDENT—Mr. Adam Hall.
VICE-PRESIDENT—Mr. A. H. McDougall.
SECRETARY-TREASURER—Mr. A. McNeil (re-elected).
CHAPLAIN—Rev. V. Clementi.
PATRON—Judge Dumoulin.
PATRONESS—Mrs. Dumoulin.
COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT—George Dunsford, W. G. Peterson and Alex. Bertram.
REPRESENTATIVE MEMBERS.—J. F. Donaldson and D. Walker (Toronto).
HONORARY MEMBERS—D. G. Hatton, Esq., John Burnham, M.P., Geo. Hilliard, M.P., Rodk. Hall, Esq., J. H. Roper, Esq., F. J. Lewis, Esq., James Campbell, Esq., Geo. A. Cox, Esq., and J. Jardine, Esq.

Destructive Fire.—About nine o'clock on Saturday last, the Shingle Mill erected by Messrs. Brown, Chase & Muir, on Spaulding's bay, but lately operated by Mr. B. Brown, was discovered to be on fire. The brigade very promptly were on hand, but by the time they arrived on the scene the building was completely enveloped in flames, and beyond hopes of saving. It is supposed to have originated in the vicinity of the boiler house, as it was from that point the current of fire spread. Owing to the intense heat and the limited space they had to move in, the firemen and especially the hosemen, met with "a red hot reception," in their endeavors to save the bridge and sidewalk across the bay. Nothing definite can be obtained as to whether there was any insurance on the building or machinery, as Mr. Brown is away from home and has not yet returned, but it is rumoured there is no insurance in American companies. The loss is estimated at about $4,000.

Presentation.—An interesting incident occurred at the Collegiate Institute on Friday afternoon, when prizes were given by the teachers to those pupils who had excelled at the recent examinations. Mr. Dixon, the mathematical master, presented handsome gifts of books to E. L. Hunt and Wm. Scott in appreciation of their having taken First Class honors in mathematics at Toronto University—Junior Matriculation. It may be mentioned that these young men won for their school two First and two Second Class honors. Other prizes, the valuable gift of the teachers of the Institute, were presented to those pupils who, at the recent "Intermediate" marked [illegible] 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th. Those were: 1, Sarah McLeod and Mary Burgess, equal; 2, Frank Adams; 3, Malcolm R. Eddi; 4, Margaret Orr. After the presentation of the above, the Principal announced that next July Scholarships would be given in lieu of books, viz: four scholarships of the value of $40, $30, $20, and $10 each.

The Weather.—This must be Vennor's fine spell of weather, and for the sake of his reputation we hope it will last.

Off for a Hunt.—Several camping parties are organizing for an attack on the pets of the forest. Sportsmen are having their old flint-locks prepared for the slaughter.

Fire Stations.—Cameron has organized a Fire Company, a deputation from which place were in town on Tuesday afternoon, inspecting the Hook and Ladder Truck and other equipments of the town Brigade.

Lovell's Intermediate Geography.—We have received from the publisher, Mr. John Lovell, Montreal, a copy of his new Intermediate Geography, which is intended to take the place of "Lovell's Easy Lessons." This new work has been prepared with great care, and is a good improvement on the Easy Lessons. The maps are good, very neatly coloured, distinct, and full enough for young pupils. It is author-ized by the Minister of Education, and deserves public patronage.

Gilbert & Mower's Sales.—The following sales are advertised by Messrs. Gilbert & Mower, Auctioneers:

On Monday, 29th of September, the goods and chattels of Wm. A. Fletcher, comprising farm stock, implements, &c., by sale of which he is leaving the premises, Lot 21 in the 7th con. of Smith, at one o'clock.

On Tuesday, 30th of September, on the premises, west half of Lot 2, in the 5th con. of Dover, the farm stock, implements, &c., belonging to Mr. Daniel D. Fletcher, after which the farm will be offered for sale. Sale to commence at 12 o'clock sharp.

Barking up the Wrong Tree.—A comical incident occurred at Clarkeia recently. The 45th Battalion band, of Port Hope, were waiting to take the Norseman on the return trip, having spent the day visiting the city. They had been at Charlotte before and had been well entertained by Mr. Child, of the Cedar House, so they thought they would give him a serenade. The house was dark, but they thought it would be pleasant to wake up the gentleman and his guests with music. They took their sweetest melodies and blowed their prettiest on their silver instruments. They played piece after piece, but no light or other token of appreciation appeared. Just as they were preparing to play their loudest and most soul-stirring selection, Capt. Sherwood, of the steamer Norseman, walked over and asked them if they were having a night practice, because that house had been closed for a month. Large sums had been offered to keep the matter quiet but the joke leaked out.—Whig.

Melancholy Drowning Accident.—A very sad and melancholy drowning accident occurred near Lakefield on Tuesday afternoon, whereby the eldest daughter of George Strickland, Esq., came to her death. She in company with her uncle—Mr. Eugene Smith—had been out hunting on Kachewanuck Lake, and when about two miles above the village and nearly opposite the residence of Mr. Greaves, the canoe upset. Mr. Smith struggled for a length of time to save his companion, but without effect, and finally she sank from his grasp. Being by this time in a very exhausted state he clung to the canoe, from which perilous position he was rescued by Mr. Greaves, and taken to that gentleman's residence, where he now lies in a precarious state. Dr. Caldwell was at once called in, and a despatch sent for Dr. Kincaid, for consultation. Although he is in a very critical condition hopes are entertained of his life. Up to the hour of our going to press Miss Strickland's body had not been recovered. The accident has cast quite a gloom over the neighborhood, and the bereaved friends and relatives have the sympathies of the community.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Council met on Monday evening last pursuant to adjournment. Present.—His Worship the Mayor and Councillors Cahill, Taylor, Smith, Buller, McBain, Paterson, Yelland, Douglas, Rutherford, Deane, Robertson and Griffith.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Geo. Schneider and eight others, asking for the remission of taxes of Mrs. Bird.

From Thomas Beavis and John McGhee, Health Officers, stating that the nuisance on Townsend street had not been removed by Jacobs.

From Jos. Smith and a number of others, in reference to the Dewair-street drain.

From Wm. Chapman, asking to be relieved of the payment of taxes as he had not occupied the property.

From John McMann, complaining of being charged with arrears of taxes from 1876.

From John McClure complaining of over assessment for a dog.

From Mary Walsh, asking for a remission of taxes.

From J. G. McWilliams, asking to be relieved of the tax on one dog. He was assessed for two, but only owned one.

From J. B. McWilliams, stating that he was assessed for $200 for office on Water-street, and claiming exemption, as it was held for the use of the Province.

From Michael Boulton, asking for a crossing over the drain to his lot.

From W. Stock, asking that a platform be laid down on the corner of Stewart and Sherbrooke streets, as he had erected a shop there.

ACCOUNTS.

The following accounts were received and referred to the Finance Committee:—

Wm. Beavis	$35 61
Wm. Hamilton	15 00

The communications were referred to the Committees having jurisdiction in the matters.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.

Councillor CAHILL read and submitted the following report:—

The Finance Committee beg leave to recommend the payment of the following accounts:

J. R. Stratton, Printing	$42 00
John Doherty, Weighing Iron	1 25
Toker & Co., Printing	42 24
Toker & Co., Stationery	9 70
W. Roberts, Repairing Tanks	9 75

Your Committee recommend that the Treasurer be directed to refund to Mr. Hilliard $106 with interest at 7 per cent. on account of an error made in carrying out his assessment in the Treasurer's book for 1875.

In reference to the petition of John Delaney and 214 others, asking the Council to submit a By-law to aid Mr. Wm. Teole to rebuild his factory lately destroyed by fire, the Committee recommend that a By-law to the extent of $2,000 be submitted for the purpose, the conditions of such By-law to be made by the whole Council.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

THOMAS CAHILL, Chairman.

Councillor CAHILL moved, the adoption of the report.

In amendment it was moved by Councillor ROBERTSON, seconded by Councillor McBAIN, —That that portion of the report referring to Mr. Teole be struck out.

Councillor RUTHERFORD said before the submission of the resolutions he wished to speak. He thought it was not a matter for the Council to say, "We shan't subsidize the By-law." The petition did not ask for the Council to grant the loan to Mr. Teole, but for the ratepayers to say so. Some of the most influential ratepayers of the town had signed that petition,—men like Mr. Cox, Mr. Bradburn, and Mr. Stevenson, who had done more building than any other men in town. He did not suppose these men signed the petition to merely get rid of Mr. Teole. Some years ago legislation was obtained to aid manufacturers to the extent of $40,000. A portion of that had been given to the Asburn Mills, which were a great benefit to the town. He was not present as an advocate for Mr. Teole, but he believed something should be done to retain manufactories amongst us. He would move in amendment to the amendment that the following conditions be inserted in the By-law:—

1st.—This Corporation to hold first mortgage on the property.

2nd.—The property to be insured and the policy to be held by this Corporation.

3rd.—To give sureties not to engage in any works now carried on by any ratepayer in this town.

4th.—Interest to be paid at the rate paid by this municipality.

5th.—Re-payments to be made in ten equal instalments—first to be paid in the year 1881.

Councillor DOUGLAS did not think this municipality was a money lending institution.

Councillor YELLAND thought if Messrs. Cox, Bradburn and Stevenson were so anxious to assist Mr. Teole why not lend it themselves.

Councillor CAHILL thought the Council should submit a By-law. What the conditions of this By-law would be, that would be for the Council to decide after the report was adopted.

Councillor SMITH thought the Council had no responsibility in the matter. A large number of ratepayers asked for the submission of a By-law—had if Mr. Teole was prepared to meet the expenses of the submission of the By-law he thought the Council should say whether the request of the petition should be granted or not.

The amendment to the amendment being submitted with disfavor lost, and the amendment, on being submitted was declared carried.

The report as amended was then submitted and adopted.

APPROACH ON CHARLOTTE STREET.

Moved by Councillor PATERSON, seconded by Councillor DEANE.—That the Inspector of Streets and Bridges be an approach on Charlotte street to Mr. R. Gunn's yard, at a cost not to exceed [illegible] dollars.

[illegible] the adoption was carried.

REQUEST OF TENDER.

Moved by Councillor RUTHERFORD, seconded by Councillor ROBERTSON.—That the Clerk be directed to correspond with the President of the Midland Railway to request him to take the proper steps to prevent the trains running faster than allowed by law.—Carried.

POLICE COURT ACCOUNTS.

The MAYOR said in the matter of the Police Court accounts Mr. Donaldson, on behalf of the town, and Mr. Hutson on his own behalf, had their cases prepared and laid before the Judges in Toronto, and that Mr. Donaldson now wished the authority of this Council before proceeding further.

In the discussion which ensued over the submission of the following resolutions, many of the Councillors favored strongly of the dropping of the suit altogether, as the cost of the same would in all probability be very heavy. Others were in favor of having the matter finally settled, now that there had been so much money already spent upon it.

Moved by Councillor PATERSON, seconded by Councillor McBAIN.—That James Frederick Donaldson be formally retained under the Common Seal to prosecute an action against David George Hutson, in the Court of Common Pleas, for the recovery of certain fees received by him, and which the Corporation of the Town of Peterborough, claim to recover against said David George Hutson, and that the Mayor do seal the said retainer with the Common Seal and attest the same by his own signature as Mayor.—Carried.

Moved by Councillor ROBERTSON, seconded by Councillor DEANE.—That the Clerk be instructed to write Mr. Donaldson and ask the probable cost of the action against Mr. Hutson, Police Magistrate.—Carried.

ASSESSMENT OF LIQUOR LICENSING.

Moved by Councillor PATERSON, seconded by Councillor McBAIN.—That the Clerk be instructed to correspond with the Honorable the Provincial Treasurer and ascertain why the amount due the town on account of Liquor Licenses for the present year has not been paid as required by law.

CORRESPONDENCE WITH ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

Moved by Councillor PATERSON, seconded by Councillor RUTHERFORD.—That the Clerk be instructed to correspond with the Attorney-General regarding the Police Court fees and any other information he may require as to town and county cases.

MONAGHAN DRAIN.

Moved by Councillor CAHILL, seconded by Councillor TAYLOR.—That the money appropriated for the cleaning of the Monaghan Drain be spent upon the work at once.

After some discussion a point of order was raised by Councillor McBAIN. The MAYOR holding the objection good the matter was laid over as a notice of motion.

A NUISANCE.

Mr. D. LEMAY was heard before the Council in reference to a nuisance in the neighborhood of his dwelling, and asking that means be taken for its removal.

The MAYOR said he would see that the matter was attended to.

The Council then adjourned.

Jurors' Act Amendment Act.

The Number of Jurors to be Returned under the Amended Act.

The Board of County Selectors met on Wednesday last, and fixed on the following number of Jurors which will be required from each municipality for service at the Superior Court during the year 1880:—

	Grand Jury.	Petit Jury.
Ashburnham	6	12
Smith	13	26
Douro	11	22
Dummer	9	18
Otonabee	13	26
Norwood	2	4
Asphodel	13	26
Belmont, etc.	3	6
Enniskeen	6	12
Lakefield	6	12
Harvey	7	14
North Monaghan	5	10
Peterborough	46	92

The Voters' Lists for Peterborough and Galway did not show the persons entitled to serve as jurors, and no Voters' List for Burleigh, etc, had been returned. The same number of additional names have also been fixed for the Inferior Courts. The Clerks of municipalities have to return three times the number of names stated above for each court. The total number of names to be returned for the county will be 264. We are indebted to the genial Clerk of the Peace, C. A. Weller, Esq., for permission to peruse his books for the above figures.

HERE AND THERE.

Poultry is plentiful at present.

Clothing men are beginning to look happy.

The evenings will soon begin to lengthen very sensibly.

The mosquitos having "presented their bills" as often as possible, have retired from the dunning business for the present season—their work is done as it were.

The close season for partridge ends with the present month, and you can go out into the woods on the first day of October and shoot them with a gun, or else call them to you and knock them down with a club. The gun is the most satisfactory method, though.

The British Grain Trade.

IT SHOWS A HARDENING TENDENCY.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 20.—A leading grain circular says:—The grain trade continues to show a hardening tendency. Little of the new crop of wheat is as yet available, and almost the entire consumption is for the time thrown upon foreign grain, large supplies of which are consequently absorbed without difficulty. The samples of old English wheat offering have been taken at fancy prices. There has been a large business in cargoes of American red winter and California, at an improvement of six-pence to nine-pence. At Liverpool and the neighbouring markets since Tuesday, there has been a good consumptive demand for wheat, and prices were fully maintained. Maize advanced a penny at the opening of yesterday's Liverpool market. Business was checked by holders asking threepence advance on wheat. Ultimately sales were made to a fair extent, at an improvement of a penny to twopence on red, and a penny on white wheat. Flour was again a shilling per sack dearer. Corn was in fair demand at two and one-half pence above Tuesday's rates.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

Corrected Weekly by Mr. W. H. Wrighton, Grain and Produce Dealer.

Receipts of wheat during the week have been large, meeting with an active enquiry. Spring wheat has been steady at about $1 a bushel, fall selling for two or three cents more. There is at present an active enquiry for both wheat, and fluctuations. In barley there is more doing—receipts increasing, due to the fall in about the range of prices. In peas there is very little doing—very few offering, which bring about 58c. Oats for the past week have fallen off, they are now firmer, and with more enquiry. No being obtained actively for them.

SATURDAY'S MARKET

was fairly well attended. There was nothing new to report. The quantity of fruit has fallen off. Apples were not in plentiful, but enough offering to supply the demand, which is not brisk. Blue plums were plentiful and sold at 65c. to 80c. per peck. Butter was more plentiful, no particular change in prices—15c. to 16c. is about the range. Eggs are falling off, but a good many offered. Sold freely at 16 cents per dozen. Roasting chickens are in pretty [illegible] quantities are put in price, 60c. being their value.

VEGETINE.
The best Medicine in the World.
Weakness, Rheumatism.
Prostration of the Nervous System.

JACKSON, TENN., June 16, 1879.

H. R. STEVENS, Boston:

I take great pleasure in recommending your "Vegetine." I have lived in Jackson, Tenn., nearly 20 years, and am now an old man. About one year ago my health was very poor from Weakness, Rheumatism, and general prostration of the system. At that time, I commenced using the Vegetine. I am now enjoying a good health and feel that I have a new lease of life. I believe the Vegetine is the best medicine in the world. I cannot say too much in its favor. Please publish this, as I wish my friends to know that Vegetine is no humbug, but a great and good medicine.

Yours truly,
W. R. CALAWAY.

CATARRH.
Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Cures Catarrh.

T. J. B. HARMON, Esq., BROCKVILLE, ONT.

DEAR SIR,—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me. I have watched this long to see if the cures it made were permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as at first the happy effects seemed to me to be "too good to be true."

I was afflicted in my head for years before I commenced it to be Catarrh. In reading in your Circular I saw my case described in many particulars. The forced "drops" from the head had become very distressing, and a choking sensation often prevented me from lying down. I would find that my throat and lungs would be completely filled up in the night. My hearing and eyesight were also affected. When your Agent came to Cobourg to introduce the Remedy, I purchased of one bottle. I found decided relief, and when I had used four bottles was entirely cured. I believe it, having used it for over a year. I have taken every [illegible] of duty to endorse it from first [illegible] Catarrh. Constantly hearing people say to me [illegible] I am glad to send you this testimony, that others may be made aware of it in your way proper. Yours truly,

W. TIDBALL, Hardware Merchant,
Port Hope, Ont., Aug. 24, 1878.

Them Say "Farewell."

BY WM. B. PRIDDY.

I cannot hear this cold compliance—
This waiting for one kindly word;
Each moment makes it more absurd.
And brings, alas! lost hope deformed.
The dreary days be—coming and gone,
The passing hour, as seasons glide,
And love me still as once I did?
Unkind and discontented.

You could call with bright sigh,
"Oh, dear my self, I love so well;
Oh, hear my call, remember me,"
And say ye loves, "au—revoir!"
Let me no longer live on now,
To build vain fancies in the air,
But listen to my tender vow.
And bring me love, or else—despair.

Have not my loving ways to thee
A woke one throb of kind return,
Or touched me one chord of sympathy—
One—one—I—cannot—forget;
One—one—I—cannot—forget;
Then—I—will—die—of—broken—heart
And—in—the—silent—grave—sleep—on Where love—no—longer—can—disturb!

When I am gone—when I am lost
To thee and thine for evermore,
And stormy waves of grief are tossed
In sadness on Hope's distant shore,
Perchance some echo to thy soul,
From out the gloom of cheerless years
Will come, when love meets cold control
Nor stay thy fond, regretful tears.

Then speak, my own, my silent one,
Some tender word of hope and cheer,
Ere love's delusive rose is run
And I no longer shall be near;
Or else, or else—oh, woe is me,
Hope burst, it is to break the spell!
Speak one soft word and set me free;
Say, loved one, say—oh, say "farewell!"

A Night With Wolves.

"A number of years ago," said an old settler, whom I met on my western travels, "I took my family to Wisconsin, and located myself in the woods, about ten miles from the nearest settlement, and at least five from the nearest neighbor. The country round was mostly forest; and wild beasts and Indians were so numerous, that my friends at the east, to whom I gave a description of my locality, augmented great fears for our safety, and said they should be less surprised to learn of our having all been cut off than to hear of our still being alive out there at the end of a couple of years.

"However, I did not feel much alarmed on my own account—and my wife was as brave as a hunter; but then we had three children—the oldest only ten—and sometimes, when I was away from home, the sudden growl of a bear, the howl of a wolf, or the scream of a panther, would make me think of them, and feel quite uneasy.

"For a while, at first, the night-screeching and howling of these wild animals alarmed the children a good deal—and sometimes my wife and me—especially when we mistook the cry of the panther for an Indian yell; but we soon got used to the different sounds, and then did not mind them so much; and after I had got a few acres cleared around the dwelling, they generally kept more distant at night—just as if they comprehended that the place, now in the possession of their enemies, was no longer to be an abode for them. Besides, I now and then shot one, which thinned them a little, and probably frightened the others, for they gradually became less bold and annoying.

"During the first year I had two rather narrow escapes—once from a bear, and once from a panther; the most remarkable adventure of all was the one which happened during the second Winter, and which I have always designated as a "Night with the Wolves."

"One bitter cold morning—the ground being deeply covered with snow, so crusted, and frozen that no foot could sink into it—I brought out the horse for my wife to ride to C——, the nearest settlement, where she had some purchases to make, which she wished to attend to herself. Besides being well muffled up in her own clothing, I wrapped a large buffalo robe around her; and admonishing her that the woods were full of danger after dark, I urged her to be sure and get back before sunset, which she promised to do.

"All day long, after her departure, from some cause for which I could not account, I felt very much depressed and uneasy, as if something evil were going to happen; and when I saw the sun about half an hour high, and no signs of my wife returning, I got out my pistols, rifle, ammunition and hunting-knife, saddled a young and rather skittish colt, and bidding the children keep within doors, and the house safely locked, I mounted and rode off to meet her, which I expected to do at every turn of the bore-path. But at every turn I was doomed to disappointment; and when I had put mile after mile behind me, without seeing any signs of her, I became more and more alarmed, and dashed on still faster.

"It was just about dark when I saw the lights of C—— gleaming in the distance; but before I reached the town I met my wife hastening homeward—she having been unexpectedly detained by meeting an old acquaintance, who had recently come on from the eastward, and with whom she had remained to gather the news and take supper—the time passing away so quickly as to render her belated before she was aware of it.

"I was greatly relieved to find her safe and unharmed—but not a little puzzled to account for my presentment of evil, which it appeared to me had taken place without cause—though in this respect I was greatly mistaken, as the sequel will show.

"We now set off at a brisk trot homeward—through a dense, dark gloomy wood, which lined our way on either side—and had safely proceeded about five miles, when we were somewhat startled by a series of long plaintive howls, at a considerable distance, and in different directions, and which our experience told us were wolves, seemingly calling and answering each other through the great forest.

"The wolves of this region were of the larger and fiercer species; and though ordinarily and singly they might not attack a human being, yet in numbers and pressed by hunger, as they generally were at this season of the year, I by no means felt certain that we should not be molested.

"Accordingly we quickened the pace of our horses and as we hurried on I grew every moment more uneasy and alarmed as I noticed that many of the sounds gradually approached us. We had just entered a deep hollow, where a few large trees stretched their branches over a dense thicket, when suddenly there arose several loud, harsh, baying and snarling sounds close at hand. The next moment there was a quick rustling and thrashing among the bushes; and then some six or eight large wolves—lean, gaunt and maddened with hunger—sprang into the path close beside us.

"This happened so suddenly and unexpectedly that my wife gave a slight scream and dropped her rein, and the horse rearing and plunging at the same moment, unseated her; and she fell to the ground right in the very of the savage beasts, whose glaring eyes midst shone in the darkness like so many coals of fire.

"Fortunately her sudden fall startled the wild animals a little; and as they momentarily drew back, she, with rare presence of mind, at once gathered her buffalo robe, which she had dragged with her, in such a manner about her person as to protect herself from the first onset of their fangs. The next moment the ferocious animals, with the most savage growls, sprang at her, at me, and at the two horses simultaneously. Here at once shook himself clear of his foes and fled; and mine began to rear and plunge in such a manner that I could not make use of a single weapon, and only by main strength kept him from running away with me.

"It was a terrible moment of exciting agony; and the instant that I could release my feet from the stirrups I leaped to the ground with a yell—my rifle slipping from my hands, and discharging itself by the concussion, and my steed rushing like lightning after his flying companion over the frozen snow.

"Luckily, I had my loaded pistols and my knife convenient to my grasp; and scarcely conscious of what I was doing, but thinking only that the dear mother of my little ones lay fairly beneath three or four of the fiercest and most ravenous beasts that ever howled in the wilderness, I grasped the weapons, one in each hand, cocked them the same instant, and fairly jumping into the midst of my enemies, poured the muzzles against the heads of two that had turned to rend me, and fired them both together.

"Both shots, thank God! took effect—it could not be otherwise—and as the two wolves rolled howling back in their death agonies, their starving companions, snuffing and smelling a taste of their blood, all instinctively comprehending that they were now fairly in their power, fell upon them with the most ravenous fury, and literally tore them to pieces, and devoured them before my very eyes, almost over the body of my wife, and in less, I should say, than a minute of time.

"Incredible by a few hasteus inquiries that my wife was still alive and unharmed, I hastened towards her, and, picking up my rifle, I proceeded to load all my weapons with the greatest despatch.

"As soon as I had rammed the first ball home I felt prompted to shoot another of the animals; but at that moment I heard a distant howling, and fearing that we should soon be beset by another pack, I reserved the fire for the next extreme danger and hurriedly loaded the others.

"By the time I had thirty completed this operation our first assailants, having nearly gorged themselves upon their more unfortunate companions, began to slink away; but the odor of the spoils on the snow soon renewed their ardour, which was soon up to the fighting point.

"I had just succeeded in getting my wife more securely rolled in her protecting robe—as the safest thing I could do in that extremity—and myself, pistols in hand, in a defensive attitude over her body, when some eight or ten more of the savage and desperate creatures made their appearance upon the scene.

"There was a momentary pause as they came into view and discovered me—during which their eyes glared and shone like living coals—and then, with terrific growls and snarls, they began to circle round me, each moment narrowing the space between us.

"Suddenly one more daring or hungry than the others bounded forward and received a shot from one of my pistols directly between the eyes, and as he rolled back upon the snow a part of the others sprang upon him, as in the case of the first.

"But I had no time to congratulate myself that I had disposed of him; for almost at the same instant I felt the lacerating fangs of another in my thigh, which caused me to shriek with pain; and my poor wife, with an answering shriek, believing it was all over with me, was about to get up and face the worst, when shouting to her not to stir, that I was still safe, I placed my pistol against the head of my assailant, and stretched him quivering on the snow also.

"I still had my rifle in reserve; and pointing that at the fighting pack, I poured its contents among them. How many were wounded I do not know; but almost immediately the space around us became once more cleared of our howling enemies—some limping as they fled, and appearing to be harassed by the others.

"Again it appeared to me we had met with a wonderful deliverance, and though the wound in my thigh was somewhat painful, a brief examination satisfied me that it would not prove serious; and I hastily proceeded to reload my weapons—my wife meantime getting upon her feet, embracing me tenderly and earnestly thanking God for our preservation.

"'O, the dear children!' she exclaimed, with maternal tenderness; "little do they know how near they have come to being made orphans, and left alone in this solitary wilderness! Let us hasten home to them; Oh, let us hasten home to them, while we have an opportunity.'

"'We have no opportunity, I gloomily replied. 'Dark! there are more of our foes in the distance—do you hear them?'

"'And are they coming this way, too?' she tremblingly inquired.

"'I fear so.'

"'Oh, great God! what will be become of us?' she exclaimed, 'for I am almost certain, that we shall not both survive a third attack.'

"'I see but one way of escape,' said I, anxiously. 'We must climb a tree, and remain in the branches till morning.'

"'We shall surely freeze to death there!' she replied.

"'I trust not; but at all events, as our horses are gone, we have no alternative. I think your buffalo robe, well wrapped around, will protect you from the cold, as it has done from the wolves; and as for myself, I will endeavor to keep warm by climbing up and down, and stamping upon the limbs.'

"'But why not kindle a fire?' she quickly rejoined, her voice suddenly animated with a hope that I was obliged to disappoint.

"'For two reasons,' I replied. 'First, because we have not time—do you not hear another hungry pack howling?—and secondly, because we have not the materials—the axe brush and sticks being buried under the snow.'

"'God help us, then!' groaned my wife; 'there seems nothing for us but death! Oh, my poor dear children! May the good God grant that they be not made orphans this night.'

"'I bade her take heart and not despair; and then selecting a tree, whose lower limbs were broad and thick, but above the reach of our enemies, I hastily assisted her to a good foothold, and immediately climbed up after her.

"We were not there a moment too soon; for scarcely had we got ourselves settled in a comparatively comfortable position, when another hungry pack of our enemies appeared below us—howling, snarling and fighting—their upturned eyes occasionally glowing fearfully in the darkness.

"But we were safe from their reach; and all that long, dismal night we remained there, listening to the discordant tones, and thinking of the dear ones at home.

"The night was intensely cold; and in spite of all my efforts to keep my sluggish blood in circulation, I became so benumbed before morning that I believe I should have given up and perished, except for the pleading voice of my wife, who begged me, for God's sake, to hold on; and not leave her a widow and my children fatherless.

"Daylight came at last; and never was morn hailed with greater joy. Our foes now slank away, one by one, and left us to ourselves; and a few minutes after their disappearance I got down and exercised myself violently; and having thus brought back a little warmth to my system, assisted my wife to alight, and we at once started homeward.

"I scarcely need add that we arrived there in due time, to find our poor, night-long terrified children almost frantic with joy at our safe return."

Grangers as Money Dealers.

The Monetary Times criticises somewhat severely the manner in which a new Loan Company in the Grange interest is commencing business. It says:

'A Loan Company, under the name of the Grange Trust, has been incorporated, and has taken subscriptions for stock to an uncertain amount. An even million seems to be the amount aimed at. But as we learn from a circular signed, "R. J. Doyle, Secy-Treas., Provisional Board," that the society commenced by blundering. "Some misapprehension," it is explained, "existed between the financial agents and the agents for sourcing stock, and some stock had been subscribed under the impression that notes could be taken for the first 10 per cent., and that actual payment would not be required. To straighten out this kink the directors allowed some considerable amount of additional stock over and above the million to be subscribed, with the view of getting one million dollars actual bona fide subscribed. How much has been so subscribed we are not told.'

But if subscribers are not to be allowed to pay the first call on their premises, they may do so in mortgages up to fifty, which must be paid. Will this be the best bona fide payment which the charter calls for? Will payments by such loans that confidence which the Trust appears to establish as a means of enabling it to issue bonds? The Secretary of this Trust Company talks glibly about 'money stocks,' by way of protesting, we suppose, that he has no connection with the disreputable classes of 'Change Alley, and that he fully agrees Ben Johnson's hearer of all 'money bawds.'

But the brawling Pharisee is here sadly out of place. It is a pity that he should have anything to do with a business that he seems to think discreditable. But then his is a philanthropic part. His mission is to rescue the simple farmer from the deadly grip of the 'money shark.' He is going to provide some farmers with money, if they can give him money on stock, at 'a little over five per cent.' Here is the secret. The intended borrower pays $500 on his stock in the Grange Trust; then the Trust sells bonds to six times that amount at a rate that would make the Company's loan cost only 5½ per cent.

In this cheap borrowing lies the secret of the ability to lend cheap. But who will lend the Trust six dollars to a dollar of its capital? We fear the farmers are in danger of being deluded. They had better not go in. As the business of lending, if they must first commence by borrowing to get the wherewithal to 'go' the first call. The Grangers had better stick to their legitimate business, and not allow themselves to be led away by Mr. Doyle's plausible promises.

"In the fourth place," said the preacher to his drowsy audience, "those of you who are awake will notice"—etc. There was a pause, a sudden straightening up of almost everybody in the congregation and a general appearance on nearly every face as if to say, "why don't you fellows keep awake better."

It was on the boat. The wind was dead ahead and the vessel was slowly beating to windward. "I never got sea-sick," said one of the party. "What, never?" questioned some one. "Hard-a-lee!" sang out the man at the wheel, and the entire party arose and bitterly reproached him for bringing in that old Pinafore joke.

The Queen of Madagascar has issued a proclamation to her subjects commanding them to send their children to school, saying that it makes her glad to see her subjects rise. She adds: "And so be all of you diligent, for although you do not now know the sweetness of knowledge and wisdom, you will discover it when they become yours."

The Racine Journal charges that there is an economical young man in that city, who closely observes the weather, and never calls upon his girl only on cool and rainy evenings. When he gets back home after his call, he takes out his pocket-book, counts out twenty cents, the price of two dishes of ice cream, and puts the money in his trunk. That young man will own lands before long.

Comfort Before Pleasure.

It was stated in a Toronto paper the other day that on the occasion of the Marquis and Princess visiting church the former opened the pew door and walked in, leaving the Princess to follow.

Here was a new wrinkle in etiquette, and of course all the people of Society determined to follow the example.

Mr. Mildew's wife is in Society, and is bound as if with steel to follow all the niceties in such matters.

She instructed Mr. Mildew as to this latest kink, so she prepared to go to church last Sunday.

Mildew is a pretty cunning rascal, but he said nothing, as he did not care to risk his reputation by any verbal conduct with his other half.

But when they arrived at church he followed his old style of opening the pew door and then standing to one side and allowing Mrs. M. to pass on.

We shall pass over the scene that occurred on the arrival home from church. There are domestic doings that are too sacred for the public gaze.

As he walked off for his afternoon nap Mr. Mildew remarked:

"This here etiquette biz. is all right. But I don't let no woman sit on the outside of the pew when I want a place to rest my three acres on. As long as I am going to church I'll sit where I find my self on the top of the pew."

Too Thin.

(From the Detroit Free Press.)

"Now, who is this?" his Honor asked, As forth came William Whiting; And the answer was: "He's a chap Brought here last night for fighting."

'Did this man fight anybody or anything?' whispered the court as he looked down upon the prisoner.

William's weight might have been ninety pounds. His body was hardly thicker than a hitching-post, his fingers long and white, and his sunken cheeks and hollow eyes reminded one of cough medicines and drug stores.

'They mustn't nobody crowd me!' answered William as he looked up and shut his teeth together.

'Crowd you! Why, man, a rat could crowd you across a ten-acre lot! You are no fighter; you must be here on a charge of obstructing a baby-carriage or breaking some old window.'

'I tell you I'm a fighter!' protested William as he clenched his fingers. 'I'd have taken the whole three of them if I hadn't been arrested!'

'Three pills, you mean? Well, I'm glad you didn't. The more you take the more you'll have to. You can go, William. The idea of a man like you raising a row or hurting anybody is absurd.'

'Well, they want to let me alone or they'll get mashed!'

'The children shall let you alone, William. Go on, now, and be a good boy.'

William went, but after reaching the sidewalk he became so mad that he shed tears, pulled off his coat and cried out:

'I don't like the way he talked to me! The idea of talking to me as if I was a baby hurts my feelings, and I'll fight any man in the crowd for the championship of Grass Lake!'

Make Friends.

Life is very critical. Any word may be our last. Any farewell, even amid glee and merriment, may be forever. If this truth were but burned into our consciousness, and if it ruled as a deep conviction and real power of our lives, would it not give a new meaning to all our human relationships? Would it not make us far more tender than we sometimes are? Would it not oftentimes put a rein upon our rash and impetuous speech? Would we carry in our hearts the miserable suspicion and jealousies that now so often embitter the fountains of our loves? Would we be so impatient with other faults? Would we allow trivial misunderstandings to build up strong walls between us and those who ought to stand very close to us? Would we keep alive petty quarrels, year after year, which a manly word any day would compose? Would we pass neighbors or old friends on the street without recognition, because of some real or fancied slight, some wounding of pride, or some ancient grudge? Or would we be so chary of our kind words, our commendations, our sympathy, our comfort when weary hearts all about us are breaking for just such expressions of interest or appreciation as we have in our power to give?

Mitchell's Belladonna Improved India Rubber Porous Plaster.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been treated by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

The principal ingredients used in making these Plasters are Gum Olibanum—or better-known as the Frankincense of the Bible—Rubber, and Burgundy Pitch which, when scientifically compounded, is full of electricity and when combined with the pure medicinal gums, is found to be one greatest healing mediums ever brought before the human race.

They are acknowledged by all who have used them to act quicker than any other Plasters they ever before tried, and that one of these Plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other Plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different; the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.

They possess all the soothing, warming, supporting and strengthening qualities of all other Plasters. Many who have been relieved of RHEUMATISM, TICBOLOREUX, and various other pains in the KIDNEYS, BREAST or SIDE, and believe it is solely done by the electrical qualities which the Porous Plasters contain, and which is imparted to the system, thus restoring them to a healthy condition.

They are very soft and pliable, still very adhesive; and a sure cure for WEAK BACKS PAINS IN THE SIDE AND BREAST, and are invaluable to those who have a COLD of long standing, and often prevents CONSUMPTION. Some even tell us they believe they were entirely cured by the use of them of a long seated Consumption.

ELECTRICITY.

Thomas Eclectric Electric Oil—Worth Ten Times its Weight in Gold—Pain Cannot stay where it is used.

It is the cheapest medicine ever made. One dose cures common sore throat. One bottle has cured Bronchitis. Fifty cents worth has cured an old standing cough. It positively cures catarrh, asthma, and croup. Fifty cents worth has cured crick in the back, and the same quantity lame back of eight years' standing. It cures swelled neck, tumors, rheumatism, neuralgia, contraction, of the muscle, stiff joints, spinal difficulties, and pain and soreness in any part, no matter where it may be, nor from what cause it may arise, it always does you good. Twenty-five cents worth has cured bad cases of chronic and bloody dysentery. One tea-spoonful cure cramp in 15 minutes. It will cure any case of piles that it is possible to cure. Six or eight applications is warranted to cure any case of excoriated nipples or inflamed breast. For bruises, if applied, often and bound up, there is never the slightest discolouration of the skin. It stops the pain of a burn as soon as applied. Cures frosted feet, boils warts, and corns, and wounds of every description on man or beast.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.—Ask for Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. See that the signature of S. N. Thomas is on the wrapper, and the names of Northrop & Lyman are blown in the bottle, and take no other. Sold by all medicine dealers. Price, 25 cts. NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto, Ont., Proprietors for the Dominion.

Joy Among the Children.

CORLAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 600 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administering nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having them pleasant to the taste, induced T. Corland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and while equally safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is honey; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—'My children drink it like water;' another—'We had to hide the bottle or they would have finished it right off;' another—'My little girl has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she hates the ordinary Castor Oil and we never could get her to take it without a fight; yet another—'I wish you would send me your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—sure to take the place of all the common oil.'

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a staple household medicine has brought fraudulent imitations into the market, but the public can guard themselves against imposition (which are principally parties are attempting to sell on the reputation of this article) by seeing that the name of 'CORLAND'S Sweet Castor Oil,' is on both wrapper and directive label.

The undersigned having purchased Messrs. T. Corland & Co.'s interest in the above preparation, are now manufacturing it from the original recipe. NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto.

Manufacturer of Boots & Shoes,

16 FRONT St. EAST, TORONTO.

PETERBORO' BRANCH, - DIXON'S BLOCK.

Goods Sold Direct to the People at Wholesale Price.

The Only Business in Canada Conducted on the Same Principle.

Over $200,000 Worth of Boots and Shoes so Supplied Last Year.

The great loss annually sustained by selling to Dealers, first led to our establishing of Branch Stores, where we could supply direct to the people for Cash all the goods we could manufacture, thus giving to the people the goods less the dealer's profit, and saving to ourselves the annual loss. We were the more forcibly impressed into this step from the fact that cheap Eastern-made shoddy goods were being palmed off as our goods. We now sell our own goods, warrant what we sell, use no shoddy or inferior material of any kind, and can and do supply goods of the best quality 25 per cent. less than they can be bought elsewhere.

Everything Marked in Plain Figures. Only One Price.

CUSTOM DEPARTMENT.

Our arrangements are now complete in this department, and we can make to measure promptly either Ladies', Gentlemen's, or Children's Goods, in the Latest Styles, at little over half the price usually charged.

Business Notice.
During the past summer we have sent out a large number of accounts for subscriptions to THE EXAMINER, also accounts for Job Work and Advertising, accompanied by a request for prompt settlement. We have to thank a large number of our friends for their prompt response to the call. But there are still a great many accounts unsettled. We forbore pressing unduly during the summer, preferring to wait till harvest for those who had not the needful convenient at that time. Now the harvest has been secured, and it is a wonderful one. We have waited patiently until now upon our friends to come in and settle, and we trust that they will not be slow in doing so.

Song Before Death.

I.
Sweet mother, in a minute's span,
Death parts thee and my love of thee;
Sweet love, that yet art living pain,
Come back, true love, to comfort me.
Break, ah! come back; ah! wail-away!
But my love comes not my day.

II.
As roses when the warm west blows
Breath to full flower and sweeten spring,
My soul would break to a glorious rose,
In each wise at his whispering.
In vain I listen; wallaway!
My love says nothing any day.

III.
You that will weep for pity of love
On the low place where I am laid,
I pray you, having wept enough,
Tell him for whom I bore such pain,
That he was yet, ah! wellaway!
My true love to my dying day.
—A. C. Swinburne.

A Terrible Warning.
An American physician, who has given careful attention to the study of alcoholism, said, in the course of an address recently delivered before a learned society: "There are constantly crowding into our insane asylums persons fifty to eighty years of age, who in early life were addicted to the use of alcoholic liquors, but who had reformed, and for ten, twenty, or thirty years have never touched a drop. The injury which the liquor did their bodies seemed to have all disappeared, being triumphed over by the full vigor of their full manhood, but when their natural force began to decrease, then the concealed mischief showed itself in insanity, clearly demonstrating that the injury to their bodies was of a permanent character."

We are not constitutionally inclined to dwell upon the horrible, and would ask to be spared from presenting so terrible a fact as this, did we not feel that our duty to our neighbor and fellowman requires it. How many thousands of the bright and beautiful youth are to-day sowing in their own organisms the seeds of decay and misery by their daily visits to the wine-room and their social tippling! Oh that Dr. Chenery's declaration were pressed home to the conviction of each one!

How insidious and implacable that poison which lurks in the ruddy wine and the amber beer! The man may reform after a career of lax morality and intemperance. He may shake off the chains of a habit which rendered him often an object of ridicule to the careless, and of grief and shame to his friends, and may once more claim the place of honor and usefulness which was his before the fall. He may even exhibit the energy, ambition, and fire of his early years, and win fame and fortune in the business of life; but when old age is creeping on, all at once his brain gives way, and the living death of insanity supervenes. Thus we realize the truth of that wonderful Book which prophecies: "At the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder."

We are not surprised that the learned physician, in contemplating the widespread ruin attending the drinking habits of the public, is moved to say: "These things being so, we, as physicians and promoters of good health, are bound to set our faces against every species of dram-drinking, by both example and active precept."

What Stanley is Doing.
We have received the following important particulars with respect to Mr. H. M. Stanley, the African explorer, from a correspondent whose sources of information are thoroughly trustworthy:—"About nine months ago Mr. Stanley suddenly departed for the East Coast of Africa. He afterwards turned up at Zanzibar, in a chartered steamer, but no one could understand with what object the distinguished traveller had gone there, some supposing that he had gone for the purpose of ascending one or two small rivers. Now, advices have been received that Stanley sailed from Gibraltar for the West Coast of Africa three weeks ago, having come through the Suez Canal in the chartered steamer, full of carriers. The object of his journey to the East Coast, is therefore now disclosed—namely to supply the great desideratum of carriers, and no doubt he has all the men who accompanied him in his last journey through the heart of Africa. Having left Gibraltar three weeks ago, Stanley has now steamed down the West Coast of Africa direct to the Congo, with the intention of opening up the mighty river from the West Coast. A steamer laden with goods has been despatched from Antwerp within the last month, under the patronage of the King of the Belgians. This steamer, which will remain at Congo till Mr. Stanley's arrival, has on board two or three steam barges in sections, which confirms the supposition that it is Stanley's intention to ascend the Congo carrying these sections peacemeal around the Gellalla Falls. We wish him all success. He is doing a great work for the opening up of commerce; and although the Belgians have taken the lead, we have no fear that our English merchants will lag behind when the way has been opened up. The country is once more deeply indebted to the King of the Belgians for the energy he has displayed in connection with an important movement. —Liverpool Post.

The Depth of Niagara Falls.
The depth of water in the gorge below Niagara Falls has just been measured for the first time. The swiftness of the stream had baffled all previous efforts, but a corps of Government engineers accomplished the feat. They embarked in a small boat not far below the falls. An old guide accompanied the party. With great difficulty they approached within a short distance of the American falls, which darted great jets of water on them. The roar was so terrible that no voice or sound could be heard. The leadsman cast the line, which rapidly passed down 83 feet. This was near the shore Passing out of the friendly eddy which had enabled them to get so near the falls, they shot rapidly down stream. The next cast of the lead told off 100 feet, deepening to 192 feet a little further down. The average depth to the Swift Drift—where the river suddenly becomes narrow, with a velocity too great to be measured—is 153 feet. Just at the lower bridge the whirlpool rapids set in, and so violently are the waters moved that they rise like ocean waves to the height of 20 feet. At this point they computed the depth at 210 feet.

Woman's Strategy.
"Jack," said a pretty girl to her small brother the other day, "I want you to do something for me, that's a good fellow."

"What is it?" growled Jack, who is the brother of the period.

"Why, you know that wig and mustache, you used in the theatricals?"

"Well?"

"Well, won't you put them on and go to the concert to-night? Augustus and I will be there, and Jack, I want you to stare at me the whole evening through your glasses."

"What!—you want me to do that?"

"Yes; and as we come out you must stand in the door and try to slip me a note, take care that Gus sees you."

"Well, I declare!"

"Because you see, Jack, Gus likes me, I know, but then he is awful slow, and he's well off, and lots of other girls are after him, and he's got to be hurried a little as it were."

The Sarah Lovell Case.
The Stowe abortion case was resumed at the Toronto Court of General Sessions on Wednesday morning. After several Crown witnesses, principally medical testimony, had been called, the prosecution rested their case. At the afternoon session of the court, Mr. Dalton McCarthy, for defendant, held that no case had been established. His grounds were that no evidence had been adduced to show that his client had administered, or caused to be administered, noxious drugs set forth in the prescription. He acknowledged that his client had given the prescription, but held that it was optional with the person receiving it whether it was filled or torn up. Judge McKenzie sustained the counsel in his argument. The jury was instructed to return a verdict of "not guilty," after which defendent was discharged from custody. She was warmly congratulated by her friends in court, many of whom applauded when the Judge ruled in favor of an acquittal.

Toronto.
MR. JOLY'S PROSPECTS.—The Globe concludes an article on Mr. Joly's prospects as follows:—"The question to be decided first is not whether the Liberals or Conservatives shall rule the country, but whether the Council or the Legislative Assembly shall. Under the pressure of party exigencies the Conservatives have declared in favor of the former. Mr. Joly joins clear and distinct issue with them on this point and unmistakably intimates that the battle must be fought out on this line, though it should not only take this, but many more summers and winters as well."

THE expenditure on the late civic decorations and vice-regal reception is expected to be slightly below the appropriation. The accounts rendered so far amount to $5,368.30.

LIVE STOCK EXPORT.—During September the various live stock export firms in the city shipped 40,000 sheep and 15,000 head of cattle to the British market. The cattle export trade is assuming such dimensions that several Toronto firms have stationed some of their members in England to dispose of the stock as it arrives, and thus save commission and expense incurred through agents.

BISHOP Sweatman has written to the morning papers deprecating the the presentation of the proposed address to him in reference to his charge as unwise and calculated to aggravate feelings which those loving the Church would wish to allay, saying that he was content to believe in the loyalty and sympathy of the clergy and laity without any such public expression of them.

TORONTO, Sept. 25th.—Hanlan left in good spirits by the morning train for Chatauqua Lake taking the Louise, Toronto and Dufferin shells. He was accompanied by Mr. Coulson, of Montreal, who will advise him in his business, and Adair, a boat builder and sculler of local repute, who will accompany the champion ashore and afloat, and attend to his equipment.

Birth.
HOMŒOPATHY.—"Similia, Similibus Curantur."—A gentleman who suffered from palpitation of the heart was relieved by applying another palpitating heart to the region affected. Pellets of sugar indeed!

How many thousands there are who live out a whole life, and have nothing to prove it by, only that they have had the mumps, the measles, and perhaps the chicken-pox.

A fellow wrote to a down-town store as follows: "Dear sur: if vew hev gut a book called Daniel Webster on a brige, please send me a coppy by Pyser's express c. o. d.—I want to git it ter-morrer it i kin, cause my spellin-teacher says i oughter to hev it."

"There are too many woman; sixty thousand more women then men in Massachusetts," growled the husband. "That is the survival of the fittest, my dear," replied the wife.

An Irishman went to the theatre for the first time. Just as the curtain descended on the first act a boiler in the basement exploded, and he was blown through the roof, coming down in the next street. After coming to his senses, he asked: "An' what piece do yez play nixt?'

A good square kick will sometimes help a man farther along in this world toward independence and prosperity than a dozen pulls by the head.—Derrick. We know several men whom we would admire to help along toward independence and prosperity.

Mrs. Partington, in illustration of the proverb, "A soft answer turneth away wrath," says that "It is better to speak perspicuously of a person than to be all the time flinging epitaphs."

The leaves of trees, like summer boarders with bills unpaid, take their departure, leaving their trunks behind them.

"What's the matter my dear?" said a kind wife to her husband, who had sat for half an hour with his face buried in his hands and apparently in great tribulation. "Oh, I don't know; I've felt like a fool all day." "Well," said his wife, encouragingly, "you look the very picture of what you feel."

The Quiet Way the Best.
Boston Transcript.

The best administrative officers are those who make their authority felt with as few words as possible, and never display it unnecessarily. Men who are competent to command—"born leaders" as they are called—have no occasion to exact obedience from subordinates, for no one ever thinks of disobeying them; while those who do not possess the faculty only display their weakness in their efforts to appear important and impressive. The story is told of a man who had a number of pigs in a pen near his house, and made it his practice to go out every evening and "stir them up" with a club, to the great annoyance of the pigs and the disturbance of the neighbors. One of these remonstrated with him one morning, asking him why he treated his pigs in such a cruel manner. "Because," he answered, "I want them to know I am boss." There are too many men in every community whose idea of executive ability is exacily on a par with this. They bluster and splurge and "stir things up" generally, convinced that such foolish parade of authority will convince those unfortunate enough to be under them that they are "boss," whereas, the fact is that it serves to convince all concerned that they are fools. And the time comes at length when those who are over them find it out, and they are dropped. The quiet way is the best after all."

The Limekiln Club on Muscle.
From the Detroit Free Press.

Maj. Abbury Congreeve gained the floor and the recognition of the chair, and said he had a matter of great importance to communicate to the club. He had long been of the idea that Paradise Hall should be connected with a gymnasium for the use of colored people only, and he was willing for one to take a liberal amount of stock in a project of the kind and become a liberal patron. He believed that muscular development meant long life, and it had pained him to discover that the colored people of Detroit had of late years entirely neglected muscular development, and that death was busy in their ranks.

"Gem'len," replied Brother Gardner, as he pushed up his sleeve, "Ize got muscle 'nuff to throw a tramp ober two fences an' a row of 'tater-hills, an' I got it all at de wood-pile. Right in dis room are ober fifteen members who am above sixty y'ars ole an' in de' bes' of health. We hevn't los' but one member by death in ober two y'ars, an, green apples was the cause of dat. We don't want any better health, an' we don't want any mo' muscle. If we do we kin secure it at de wood-pile, in de garden, or by handlin' de brush. De man who keeps himself clean, goes to bed airly, has solid food an' lets whisky alone will live jist as long as de Lawd intended he should, an' dat's long 'nuff for anybody. If Brudder Congreeve wants more muscle I kin get him a job of unloading a sand-scow. We will now strike de triangle, raise our voices in song, an' den walk de sev'ral ways to our homes, grateful dat catfish hev got down to six cents per pound, an' thankful dat de price of whitewashin' remains firm an' de market steady."

Manitoba Notes.
The harvest of 1879 is secured, and will be about an average crop. Notwithstanding the unprecedented wet summar the area under crop this season was fully one-third more than any former year, and will be increased by about one-half next season, owing to the large influx of settlers this summer. Several large mill-owners in Ontario and Quebec are already making arrangements to have large quantities of wheat forwarded to their mills, being fully aware of the superiority of Manitoba wheat. The self-binding reaper reduces the labor of the harvest field to considerably less than seeding. There is a large number of self-binders in the Province, and the demand is still increasing. The cost of harvesting with the self-binder, does not exceed one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, including man and team, wire for binding, and a man to stook it up.

Manitoba is pre-eminently agricultural, and in the near future will contribute largely to the European market. The most pressing requirements of the country are roads and a proper drainage system. Up to the present time draining has been entirely overlooked. Such seasons as the past summer have set the people thinking, and I am credibly informed the Government intend to introduce an act based on the Ontario drainage law. The statute labor regulations require to be amended. So far this season, although the roads have been almost impassible, we hear of many farmers who have never been called upon to perform any labor. Taxes are very light. Outside of the city this year the writer paid twelve dollars for school purposes on assessment of six thousand dollars. In the parishes no other taxes are paid. In my next letter I will deal with the half breeds, giving their mode of life, peculiar characteristics, the position they occupy in social and in the administration in the affairs of the state.

I. O. F. Canadian High Court.
The annual meeting of the High Court I. O. F. commenced in Toronto, on Thursday, 11th inst., at 9 o'clock a.m. There was a large attendance of representative Foresters present. The very able report of Geo. Lindley, Esq., High Secretary, shows that the order is in a very prosperous condition. The following officers were elected:—

Dr. Oronhyatekha, P. R. W. H. C. R.
Rev. G. G. McRobbie, Tilsonburg, R. W. H. C. R.
Bro. Nelson Green, Waterford, H. V. C. R.
Bro. Geo. Lindley, Brantford, High Secretary, re-elected unanimously.
Bro. W. Williams, Napanee, High Treasurer.
Bro. E. Clark, Listowel, H. S. W.
Bro. Greenfield, Hamilton, H. J. W.
Bro. Field, Toronto, H. S. B.
Bro. MacBroom, London, H. J. B.
Bros. Geo. Gisasco and R. J. Halle, Auditors.

PETERBOROUGH, OCT'R 2, 1879.

SELLING AND BUYING AT FAIRS.

The display of mechanical products at the various Fairs, Provincial and others held throughout the country is greatly curtailed by the feeling among artizans that it does not pay to make articles for exhibition. They argue that when steadily working on articles for sale to their customers it does not pay them to manufacture articles, requiring great time and care in preparation, simply to send them for competition along side articles of similar character, by other makers. There is a great deal of force in this way of putting it; but it is not quite the fair mode of presentation. The articles made for exhibition are not necessarily made for that purpose merely, and indeed should not be. They are for sale also, and do not directly interfere with the usual trade of the maker. Instead, it is the fault of the exhibitors themselves if they allow such work to lie on their hands as so much stock. A very little energy will serve to effect the sale of such products, if not at prices to pay for every bit of careful work allowed therein, but sufficient to well reimburse the maker for material and mechanical skill—allowing that he has got the value of his other expenditure in the advertisements and prospective advantage to his future trade, involved in the public display of his work. The purchasing public are perhaps also entitled to some blame in not displaying a greater preference for the excellent articles shown at exhibitions, rather than for such rough and comparatively unfinished ones as will answer their purpose, and not cost quite so much on the start, though they may be dearer in the end. It is particularly desirable that our fairs should become more and more places of sale and purchase, instead of being so much as they have hitherto been, collections of curiosities shown for the primary purpose of drawing prizes. More of the idea of the bazaar should be infused into them. In fact if the correct idea of a fair were carried out there need be no money prizes whatever excepting those secured by bargain and sale. In such a case exhibitors would cease to look to profits from prizes, which can at most only fall to a very few, and the fair would become a great centre of business, while still giving marks of distinction to deserving exhibitors in the shape of honorary rewards and diplomas.

Another feature that frequently displays itself in connection with exhibits at Canadian fairs, great and small, is that articles and animals are got up too nice to be useful. Implements, carriages, furniture &c. is prepared in such exquisite, not to say airy fashion, that the ordinary spectator looks on it as for exhibition only, and too pretty to spoil by common use. Most persons and families in our comparatively new country cannot afford to buy things, however pretty, merely to look at; and hence it is that some of the most elaborate and magnificent exhibits remain on the hands of their makers, while the meaner and more evidently useful articles are bought. Doubtless in some instances this fear of the beautiful is carried too far, for beauty is not always incompatible with usefulness, while it is in itself a highly commendable quality. But there are cases in which too much nicety detracts from utility. This, we are happy to see begins to be recognized by exhibitors, and the discovery of the evil will very soon lead to its cure. There are certain departments in which beauty and artistic merit are the chief excellencies. In such departments let these qualities be given their proper position; but do not make them primary when they are far from being of first importance. Fat cattle for instance, are very well in their way; but fatness in breeding stock is a fault, instead of being a commendable feature, as some seem to suppose. Judges, and exhibitors as well, must look to the purpose rather than to the appearance of anything shown. That is the chief idea in the mind of the man who would make purchases from any class; and when all is said and done the display at fairs is for the buyer first; and afterwards—a good way—for those who only came to see and be seen.

FREE v. FEE MARKETS.

The town of Port Hope lately passed a by-law imposing heavier market fees on produce taken to that place for sale. It has had a pronounced effect on the business of the market there, and on the general business of the town as well; but the opposite of that intended. The purpose was to raise a larger revenue from an increased tariff of fees on commodities brought in for sale. This would be a good thing for Port Hops, could it be effected as easily as the passing of the by-law and without any attendant disadvantages. But such a thing is one of the impossibilities. While the farmer is made to pay higher fees for exposing his produce for sale on Port Hope market, the buyers in that town fail to give him such an improved price as will serve to reimburse him for the extra outlay. He consequently comes to Peterborough, or goes to some other market where there is less restraint put upon his trading. Instead of getting a big market fee from him Port Hope gets no fee at all; and the merchants of some other place get his trade. The householders of Port Hope also suffer on account of a curtailed supply of the commodities they seek on the market; and a limited supply soon leads to increased prices,—the demand being constant. No wonder the people want a lowering of the market tariff, and that the Council, convinced of the mistake made, have moved in the direction of lower fees. In the knowledge thus acquired of the evils of high market fees, is it not possible to discover the advantages of an entirely free market. Would not the people of market towns gain by the greater trade and cheaper purchases of a free market more than sufficient to compensate for the very slight extra tax the loss of market fees would necessitate? Besides time, trouble, and occasional squabbling with Police Court, with constables and magistrates, fees would be saved: and these of themselves are not to be despised. The town that by any means shuts out trade that would come to it naturally, need not be surprised that business languishes in its streets, and that stagnation soon effects all trade within—except that driven by the bailiff and official assignee.

THE CROP REPORT.

This year the general incorrectness of early crop reports is again exemplified in the actual yield of our chief cereal falling far below the anticipation; though happily it is still considerably beyond the product of late years. So much depends on an abundant harvest that not only the farmer, but the whole population look forward with bright hopes to the outcome of the yellowing fields. In this matter, as in most others, desire becomes belief; and consequently those with whom early reports of the crops originate in most instances overestimate the yield. They do not deliberately and with purpose deceive; but they are themselves deceived by their own wishes. Last year the early published reports were ridiculously far above the actual returns of the harvest. This was in great part owing to the harm wrought on the crops by change of weather after the first estimates had been made. The same circumstances did not weigh this year, at least to any considerable extent; yet the early estimates have for the most part been too great. In cases where forty bushels of wheat to the acre were promised the yield has not been more than thirty or thirty-five, and in some notable instances it has fallen to nearer twenty. There is also too great a habit of generalizing from particular cases, and applying one in common yield as the average of a district. In this way only can the exaggeration be accounted for. The mischief wrought by such unreliability can easily be understood. The experience of many farmers last year will show them how this is. Business transacted on false estimates is sure to result in loss to some one. This is well understood by speculators who try to encourage such incorrect reports early in the season; and later to originate all sorts of trade rumors for their own profit. The farmers now that the harvest has been gathered and threshed, can pretty correctly compare the Canadian yield with that of other countries, and intelligently estimate the probable worth of their crops. When once they have done this to their satisfaction they cannot sell too early.

BRITISH FARMER DELEGATES

A number of British farmers are now in this country, and others are on their way out, as commissioners to spy out the land and judge of the condition and capabilities of Canada from an agricultural point of view. These men will no doubt see much that is new and strange to them in this wide territory, where the soil is not so closely and carefully cultivated as in Britain, simply because there is so much more land—especially as compared with population. It is quite certain that they will find much to disparage in the actual condition of farming here, as compared with farming with them; yet it is equally plain that they must see the difference in circumstances; and also that they will be able to learn many useful things of which they were not formerly aware, even in means of application to farming in any part of the world. This is speaking generally of the condition of agriculture in the Dominion, as compared with the way it is carried on in the narrow limits of the British Islands. For in particular sections of Ontario they will find farming reduced to a science by certain men as prettily and much more extensively as in most farms in Britain. From these instances they will learn the great capabilities of this country, comprising the most of a wide belt from the Atlantic to the Pacific, as a mammoth garden for the raising of food for man and beast, of horses, cattle, and sheep, and of the various other products that go to the composition of textile fabrics. The condition of agriculture here may not be, and probably is not, such as will please these commissioners to the utmost, but they cannot with their views of both their own and this land, fail to be struck favorably with the capabilities of farming in Canada. Their report will undoubtedly be of advantage to the Dominion in two very important ways. It will induce the coming of just such classes of British farmers as are needed, and will be successful here; and its remarks and criticisms when made public, will be of advantage to Canadian farmers in teaching them where they can profitably improve their style of culture. If the coming of these men produce not all the good expected, it cannot do harm.

By the proverbial cleverness of the "intelligent compositor," the Strathroy Age is in a bad way, having promised that it (the Age) will be sent for only twenty-five cents until January 1880.

MANITOBA'S exhibit at the Ottawa Exhibition attracted general attention. The products of the Prairie Province are to be shown at a number of other fairs; and will no doubt do much to draw favourable notice to the fertile lands of the Red River Valley and the broader district to the west, where there are fortunes for those of strong hearts, heads and hands.

THE Ontario Ministers have had a conference with a Commission from New York State, concerning the establishment of an International Park at Niagara Falls. It is proposed that a strip of territory along both sides of the river, above and below the Falls shall be secured by the two governments, and made a reserve for the free admission of the public to the beauties of the locality. Everyone who has visited the Falls and paid the pecuniary penalty of sequestinage of a spot "where only man is vile," will appreciate the proposal.

THRESHING MACHINE ACCIDENTS.

The frequency of threshing machine accidents a few years ago led to the enactment of a law by the Ontario Legislature making compulsory the protection of the gear in shafting of such machines, so as to prevent their catching the clothing of those working about them. This salutary measure for a time had the effect of producing greater care on the part of owners of threshing machines in guarding the more dangerous parts of the machinery; but as time went on a good deal of carelessness was manifested in this regard, and in many instances the old state of affairs prevailed, apparently without any thought of its illegality. A case decided in Court at Toronto on Thursday last is likely to recall threshing machine men to a more vivid realization of their responsibility. A man named Curtis sued another called Craig for damages arising to the plaintiff from injuries received while attending the threshing machine of defendant. He was caught in an uncovered shaft and had his leg broken in two places; and laid in bed nine months from his hurt; and will be a cripple for life. The only evidence of negligence on the part of plaintiff, was the simple fact that the shaft was entirely unprotected, in defiance of the statute above alluded to. On this the jury returned a verdict for plaintiff, and damages were assessed at one thousand dollars. There are few, if any, who will say the verdict is not a just one.

New Feature at Exhibitions.

At the Toronto Exhibition a new feature was a walking match for horses. The winning horse, owned by Mr. Stevenson, of Guelph, did his mile, and a hundred yards extra, in ten minutes and one second and a half; and an animal owned by C. E. Ryreal, of Barton, came in thirty seconds later. This is more than six miles an hour, and may be considered very good walking for a horse. It would be well if similar contests were held at all our fairs, in order to cultivate this valuable quality in equine stock. Fast running and trotting is all very well for race horses; but fast walking is what farmers principally want in their horses. There seems to be no reason why fast trotters and runners should not also be fast walkers, with equal cultivation of the slower kind of gait. Very often an otherwise good driving-horse is a failure as a walker; and a driver cannot get along with any satisfactory degree of speed except he keeps the beast he is driving continually on the trot. Were horses generally taught to walk at a good rate of speed the change of gait would be a great relief to them. In farm horses fast walking could save many a valuable hour in hauling in crops, when time is often very much of an object. In driving to and from market, too, good walking teams would be a great profit to their owners. It is to be hoped that the training of horses in walking will receive greater attention than has hitherto been devoted to it.

EAST PETERBOROUGH FALL SHOW.

The annual Exhibition of the East Peterborough Agricultural Society will take place in Norwood, on Tuesday and Wednesday the 14th and 15th October, when a large number of prizes will be offered for competition. We hope to see a large turn out of the stalwart farmers of the East, and a good number of superior exhibits. In connection with this Exhibition the Norwood Register says:—

"The time is short now for the preparation of exhibits of any kind, and in order that there may be nothing lacking to make this event a memorable one, it is to be hoped that all classes of the community will take an increased interest in our Riding show, and send in such contributions, useful and ornamental, as will reflect credit on the Riding, and perhaps reimburse patrons for their trouble. Young Ladies particularly should not fail to become liberal patrons of this Exhibition, as it affords a splendid opportunity for showing to advantage their taste and skill in furnishing necessary articles of value and beauty for the comfort and adornment of the household. In former years a great deal has depended on the exertions and contributions of such gentlemen as Mr. T. Blezard, M.P.P. Mr. Jas. Miller, Mr. F. Birdsall, Mr. A. R. Kidd, Mr. P. Fitzpatrick, besides several other large contributors whose names we can not now remember, with the valuable aid of the hard-working Secretary of the Society, Mr. W. E. Roxburgh, to ensure a full display in the leading classes of exhibits, and these gentlemen certainly deserve praise for their unflagging interest in these shows year after year, and we hope they will never have any reason to withdraw their excellent support.

TRIALS FOR MURDER.

THE WEST WINCHESTER TRAGEDY.

At the Cornwall Assizes on Friday, commenced the trial of Clark Brown for the murder of his father and sister about a month ago. We have already given the particulars of the crime. Hon. Mr. Scott, for the prosecution, addressed the jury, telling them it would not be difficult for the Crown to establish the fact that the murder was committed by the prisoner; but they had to meet the plea set up by the prisoner's counsel, that the murder was committed by him under a fit of temporary insanity. After a careful trial he has been sentenced to be hanged on the 31st of October.

The same day at Barrie, Chester Munroe was tried for having on the 20th June, 1879, in the Township of Mulmur. It appears that on that evening the prisoner, Munroe, and his wife were on their way home from Mansfield, when the deceased, Thos. Cook, overtook them, and said he would go to their house and have some tea. While Mrs. Munroe was pouring out the tea, Cook put his hand on her breast. The prisoner told him that was enough of that work; that he was welcome to his tea, but must keep his hands to himself. Deceased wanted to know where he had his hands. Munroe said "you know yourself that they were on my wife's breast." Cook sprung from the table and said, "it is a lie." His fists were clenched, and he looked as if he meant fight. He was told to stand back, but he still advanced with his right hand drawn back, as if to strike a blow. It was then that the prisoner took down a double barrelled gun and shot Cook, as he (the prisoner) says in self-defence. After having committed the deed, Munroe went and told Cook's father, who had the body removed to his own house. The prisoner then left for Rosemount to give himself up. He was found guilty, and sentenced to be hanged on the 17th of October.

MURDERED ONE THOMAS COOK,

The Star-Nosed Mule.

(Belleville Independent.)

DEAR SIR,—I had brought to me this morning by my neighbour, Sober Barleycorn, a specimen of the star-nosed mule, or blue tailed Jerusalem pony. Its scientific name is Jabalorum-testbus. The animal is common enough. In fact I have never yet been in a house without one being present. But the animal in question was a remarkable one. It had a blue tail 7½ feet in length. This may seem long, but those who know me are so accustomed to my tales that they will accept the 7½ feet without hesitation, and be grateful that it is no longer. I am much interested in this species,—I have for it a fellow feeling. A person named Desberry once wished to be written down one. Indeed I have the utmost regard for the whole species of Jabalorum-asinus.

THE CENTRAL EXHIBITION.

A GRAND SUCCESS.

The Exhibition proving in Earnest the play of Agricultural Implements.

OUR HOME MANUFACTURERS HOLD THEIR OWN—CROWDS OF VISITORS.

(From Tuesday's Daily.)

The Fifth Central Exhibition in connection with the Agricultural Societies of the Counties of Peterborough, Victoria, Northumberland, and Durham, opened this morning at the grounds of the West Riding of Peterborough Agricultural Society, with every prospect of success In the summer of 1875 a Convention of the Agriculturists of the four Counties above named, was held with the object of propogating a scheme for the holding of a grand fair once in every four years in each of the County Towns. Peterborough having taken the initiative in the matter, and her representatives having confidence in the success of the scheme, she was awarded the honor of holding the first show. The local members of the Executive Committee labored assiduously in setting the machinery in motion, and arranging for the success of the undertaking. Those of our readers who were present at that exhibition, know how well their efforts were rewarded, not alone in the extent and variety of the exhibits, but in the financial result, for after paying all expenses they handed over to their successors the magnificent sum of nearly $1,200, to be applied to the funds of the Port Hope Exhibition. The fairs held in Port Hope, Lindsay, and Cobourg, during the succeeding years increased beyond the utmost expectations of those interested. The financial results of those last fairs however, were not so successful, for while Peterborough handed over the above large amount, she received from the Cobourg Committee very little over one hundred dollars. The result was naturally discouraging, and at first it was thought would prevent the holding of the shows in future, but those who had undertaken the work at the outset, and had surmounted many difficulties were not to be easily discouraged, and kept the agitation up until a sufficient guarantee fund was obtained, to secure the offering of $2,500 in prizes. By the time this was accomplished, the season had far advanced, and this together with the fact that a rumor had gone abroad that the show had fallen through, caused prompt and decided action necessary on the part of those who had the matter in charge. The posters and prize list were at once issued, and contract let for the fixing up of

THE GROUNDS AND BUILDINGS.

The Society's Grounds have been enlarged to almost double their former capacity by the addition of the Roman Catholic Separate School Grounds, the fence between the two having been entirely removed, giving thereby an area of nearly five acres. An office for the Secretary and the sale of tickets has been erected at the south-east corner, while another entrance has been made on George street, near the north-east corner. The sheds along the north side have been enclosed for the horses and numbered. On the east and south sides are the sheds for the cattle and sheep. A new shed has also been erected at the west end of the Drill Shed for sheep. The swine pens are located near the north-west corner. At the north end of the Drill Shed is the poultry building, filled up with a very large number of coops. Every thing in fact has been carefully considered and attended to, and the Committee certainly deserve credit for the work done.

THE ARRANGEMENTS FOR EACH DAY.

By one o'clock to-day (Tuesday) everything except the live stock is required to be on the grounds. During this morning all around the grounds was bustle and excitement,—exhibitors securing places and laying out their displays to the best advantage. During the afternoon, or as soon as the arrangement of the articles is completed, the Judges will go to work inside the Shed. The Exhibition will be open to the public from 9 to 10 p.m.

On Wednesday the Exhibition will be open to the public from 9 a.m., till 10 p.m. Stock will require to be on the grounds by 10 o'clock, so that the Judges may proceed with their duties.

On Thursday the Exhibition will again be open from 9 a.m., till 10 p.m., when it will finally close.

The splendid Band of the Fire Brigade, which recently carried off first prize at Toronto, will be present on the evening of Tuesday. Afternoon and evening of Wednesday, and from opening to the closing of the Exhibition on Thursday.

On Friday morning exhibitors will be allowed to remove their exhibits.

THE ENTRIES.

At the time of the closing of the Secretary's books, the total number of entries was upwards of two thousand.

(From Wednesday's Daily.)

At noon yesterday the greater portion of the exhibits, with the exception of the live stock, was on the grounds. Inside the Drill Shed, twenty-four hours had produced a marked difference. During the morning, the tables, stands, and platforms had been completed and set in order, and by the time exhibits arrived everything was in readiness. At the south end of the shed is arranged on a tier of elevated shelves, the plants, flowers, and vegetables, which make a very fine display. The east side is devoted to grain and roots. Around the Band stand are spaces for the display of sewing machines. The west side is occupied by miscellaneous exhibits, while the centre is devoted to fruits, the fine arts, domestic manufactures, &c., &c., with a table along the north end for the dairy exhibits. During the afternoon the Shed was closed to the public, during which time the Judges were attending to their duties.

THE AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

The display of Agricultural Implements is far ahead of anything of the kind ever seen in this section. It is pleasing to notice in this connection that our local manufacturers hold their own in every particular.

The largest and chief exhibitor is Peter Hamilton, who has a large portion of the grounds set apart for his use. A visitor would almost suppose he had "cleared out his warerooms from the variety and extent of the display made,—there being between twenty and thirty different implements and machines shown. Chief among those are the following: "The Louise," Thrashing Machine, with horse power, the cleaner being highly finished in black ash and walnut, tastefully and handsomely painted and varnished. A Peerless Fanning Mill, a Nonpareil Grain Crusher, Turnip Drill, which sows two rows at once, the "Boss" Gang Plough, two general purpose ploughs—one an iron beam, the other a wrought iron plate, with steel mould-board and steel landside. The Midland Harvester Reaper, finished in black ash and walnut, nicely painted and varnished. This machine has met with unprecedented success this season, and as several important improvements have been made, it is expected that a large demand will be made for them next season. The Humming Bird Mower also occupies a first position. A new machine shown is a Pea Thresher and Straw Cutter combined. (power.) There is also shown an eight horse power sawing machine, two sizes of hand straw cutters, and a power straw cutter, a broad cast seeder and grain drill combined, one ten hoe cultivator and broadcast seeder, and one twelve hoe cultivator All the power machines are in motion being driven by a seven horse power King Portable Engine from the machinery works of Mr. W. Hamilton of this town.

Mowry & Forsyth exhibit one of their Champion Thrashing Machines, a Dog Power Churn, a little Giant Sowing Machine, and a Turnip Slicer.

Others are put up in the ordinary fashion which does not detract anything from their appearance for service or durability. They will all be in motion to-day.

We next come to J. White & Co's exhibit, which embraces one sod and five general purpose ploughs, elegantly finished—in fact superior in appearance to any on the grounds. An Empire Fanning Mill finished in black ash and walnut, attracts considerable attention from its handsome appearance. This firm also show a land roller, a two horse cultivator, a Hanlan Reaper, a double mould-board plow and a horse hoe.

W. J. Hall, local agent for the Joseph Hall Manufacturing Company, makes a very fine display. He shows the Champion Reaper, combined and single; a Champion Light Mower, with steel frames and castings of malleable iron, each are supplied with a steel cutter bar. The guards are made from Lowmoor iron and case hardened. A threshing machine with a large number of valuable improvement is shown, (mounted) as well as a Pitt's horse power, (mounted.) The company's representatives claim they have manufactured over 1500 this year. An improved clover mill is also shown.

John Dunn, of Dundas, representing Gurney, Russell & Co., has a Harvest Queen Reaper and a Planet Mower on view.

W. J. Patterson, of Norwood, exhibits the Wrought Iron Harvester, made by Thompson & Williams, Stratford.

Cossitts' Agricultural Works, Guelph, is ably represented by Mr. Geo. A Morrison, general agent for Eastern Ontario. A special feature of this exhibit is the Cossits' No. 40 Chilled Plow. A single reaper, gang plow, lawn mower, and turnip seed drill is also shown.

W. Graham has a large exhibit of Kirby reapers and other implements.

Owens & Fowler exhibit a Maxwell reaper, Toronto mower, and a Buckeye seeder and drill.

To enumerate all the good qualities of of the machines shown, would be an almost endless task, but those interested can obtain all information from the attendants on the grounds.

PUMPS.

S. H. Firth & Co. have erected a large I. X. L. Windmill, which for farm dairy, and other uses has many qualities that must commend it.

Henry Owens has three-cone and one force pump on view, but not in operation.

Geo. Taylor has in operation a force, lift and cattle pump.

REFRESHMENT BOOTH.

A commodious refreshment booth is located at the north side of the grounds, where lunches from 5cts. up can be had. An excellent warm meal is given for 25 cents.

THE FODDER DEPARTMENT is situated at the west end of the horse stables, and is under the management of J. W. Flavelle. Fodder of every description for cattle can be had here at low rates.

INSIDE THE SHED.

The most conspicuous displays inside the shed are of the stove and hardware interests.

ADAM HALL'S EXHIBIT

is situated at the north-west corner of the shed, and consists of a large variety of wood and coal, cook and parlor stoves and ranges. There are between twelve and fifteen varieties shown. These are placed on a raised platform or rather platforms—the rear one being elevated about eighteen inches above the front, and both carpeted. The display is an exceedingly fine one—its attractiveness being much enhanced by the presence of a quantity of granite ware, lamp goods and shells. We believe Mr. Hall will find that the pains and expense taken in making this exhibit will liberally repay him through the number of orders taken for the popular lines which he shows, as the attendants are besieged with questions as to prices &c., and making sales.

THE HARDWARE DISPLAY

made by Messrs. McKee & Davidson is certainly far superior to anything ever attempted in this line at any of the Central Shows, and is equally good to that made at the Toronto exhibition. Their display consists of farming and garden utensils, such as forks, scythes, hoes and rakes, axes and saws of every description and variety. These are attached to a back ground of black cloth, placed against the wall and arranged in a very conspicuous manner. Two handsome glass show cases are filled with builder's hardware, table and pocket cutlery, razors &c., and placed on a neat shop counter. Over the exhibit on the wall is placed an illuminated glass sign with the name of the firm, the whole making a most decidedly handsome, and very creditable display, and one seldom seen beyond Provincial shows.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

Passing from this exhibit we next come to Mr. Pentland's display of Bell & Co's organs, of which there are three shown.

HARNESS.

In leather work, farm set, T. Billington shows two sets single harness, one gold plated, rubber mounted, and the other plain. The workmanship and finish were excellent and deservedly recieved first prize. W. J. Devlin also exhibits a fine set of farm harness.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Hanlan Fire Engine, a description of which we gave in the EXAMINER a few weeks ago, is on exhibition by Mr. H. W. Cox, who also shows two revolving grocer's stands.

Messrs. Carnegie & Urquhart display a selection of white brick and draining tile.

In canoes, J. S. Stephenson, of Ashburnham, shows one of his patent cedar rib canoes, and Richardson & Grylls, of Lakefield, a double hunting canoe.

A very handsome model of a man-of-war is shown by Mrs. W. J. Nesbitt.

In pottery, Messrs. Brownscombe & Goodfellow make an exceedingly attractive and fine display of both fancy and plain ware.

W. Toole shows two churns with Ellsworth's Pyramidically Atmospheric Improved Churn Dasher.

SEWING MACHINES.

The several sewing machine agents of this district exhibit largely. The Wheeler & Wilson is represented by Mr. G. A. Mitchell; the Osborne "A" by Mr. B. Shortly; the Williams Singer and Royal by W. A. King, and the New York Singer by Messrs Brainer & Norris.

GRAINS, SEEDS, ROOTS, &c.

In grains and seeds the entries it is to be regretted are small in number, but the samples shown excellent, and much above the average of former years.

In roots and vegetables a splendid collection is shown.

PLANTS AND FLOWERS.

The plants and flowers occupy one-half of the south end of the shed, and are nicely arranged on a range of elevated shelves. The display is a fine one and highly creditable.

IN DAIRY PRODUCTS

the competition is keen, especially butter—there being sixteen entries for table butter, and 18 for that in tinnets or crocks. In firkin Butter, however, there are but five entries. In cheese the display is limited, as is also that of the other sections.

PEREMPTORY NOTICE

All Notes and Accounts due the late JAMES PENGALLY, Harness Maker, etc., Peterborough, must be paid at once, to MR. SHORTLY, at the Old Stand, in order to save costs.

Auction Sale of Village Lots.

THE MIDLAND LAND Co. will offer for sale by Public Auction, on Thursday, October 16th, 1879,

a number of valuable Village Lots.

The Railway having been completed through to this place, the Management is taking the earliest steps to secure a portion of the Northern trade. With its fine harbour, the best on Georgian Bay, and with the most direct connection with Montreal, there is no doubt Midland will soon become an important city in part. A large ELEVATOR will be built and ready for work by the opening of navigation, and fine lots are already in operation, and capital and enterprise already at work.

The Company will give a number of lots to those who will build with the least possible delay to secure at all events.

President M. L. Co.

REFUTATION!

I deny the statement contained in the Circular issued by Mr. Henry Owens, that he has commenced proceedings in Chancery to restrain me from infringing on his rights, by making and selling the Cone Pump and its connections. No such proceedings have been commenced to my knowledge.

I deny and always denied that the alleged patent is of any value. For over five years Mr. Powell and Mr. Owens, who claims under him, have shown their want of belief in the validity of the alleged Patent as they have never, during all that time, taken any legal steps to assert their pretended rights, although a number of pump makers as well as myself have been making these pumps, and although Mr. Owens and Mr. Powell know that my solicitors have for long been instructed to defend any legal proceedings they or either of them might take to establish the validity of the alleged Patent.

I deny that the 23rd Section of Canada Patent Act is to the effect represented in the Circular referred to, and any interested may satisfy themselves of the correctness of my denial by reference to the Section for themselves.

I assert that the said Circular is issued for the purpose of damaging my business as a manufacturer of pumps, and at my expense increasing the business of Mr. Owens. Had it been otherwise, Mr. Owens has had ample time to establish his patent in an honorable and straightforward way through the Court of Chancery, which he has not done.

I assert that I have commenced AN ACTION against Mr. Owens, in the Court of Common Pleas, for $5,000, for the purpose of recovering against him damages for the injury said Circular is intended to do to my business as a pump maker.

I assert that all wanting GOOD PUMPS can be well and cheaply suited by me, and that I AM PREPARED TO STAND BETWEEN THEM AND ANY PRETENDING CLAIMS OF MR. OWENS.

An Honest Medicine Free of Charge.

Of all medicines advertised to cure any affection of the Throat, Chest or Lungs, we know of none we can recommend so highly as DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY for Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Hoarseness, Tickling in the Throat, loss of voice, etc. This medicine does positively cure, and that when everything else has failed. In most cases one dose will give relief. Two doses will convince any sufferer that a permanent cure can be effected by this truly wonderful remedy. For Asthma and Bronchitis it is a perfect specific, curing the very worst cases in the shortest time possible. We say try all means; give it a trial. Trial bottles free. Regular size $1.00. For sale by T. RUTTER, successor to P. LAVIS & Co.

Murder Will Out.

A few years ago "August Flower" was discovered to be a certain cure for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and a few thin Dyspeptic shades known to their friends how easily and quickly they had been cured by its use. The great merits of Gunter's August Flower have been heralded through the country by one sufferer and another, until without advertising, its sale became immense. Druggists in every town in the United States, Canada, Australia, and even in remote parts of Europe, have ordered it. Hop Bitters, Hop Bitters, Hop Bitters, Palmetto of the Hop, Jamaica Ginger spirits, etc., can take these doses without value to be sure, but you'll get a bottle for 75 cents sure if it. Remember bottles 75 cents.

MERE MENTIONS.

—"Lives there a man with soul so dead who never to himself hath said, 'I'll pay before I go to bed, the debt I owe the printer?'" "Yes, there are some we know full well who never such a tale could tell; but they, I fear will go to—well, the place where there's no whister."

—More settled weather may now be looked for.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, OCT'R 2, 1879.

Accident.—A portion of the ceiling in Messrs. Ormond & Walsh's drug store, yesterday fell down, breaking the hanging lamps in its fall.

Arrival of Stock.—Three fine horses from Port Hope, Bydersil, Oysterman jr., and Galway, arrived yesterday evening for the Exhibition.

"Flying Fisher."—This boat is running from Hastings to Peterborough during the Exhibition, and brings a large number of people up every trip.

The Boating Accident.—The body of Miss Clara Strickland was recovered on Wednesday evening last, about 5 o'clock. Mr. Clementi Smith is recovering.

Curious Express Package.—A black Shetland Pony, which was left behind here, by Pullman's Show, was forwarded by express to Port Perry. So says the Lindsay Post.

Millinery Opening.—Mrs. E. Brown's millinery and mantle show rooms are now open with a handsome assortment of goods. Call and examine the goods and see for yourself.

Dry Goods.—It will require a good deal of search to find a dry goods store where better satisfaction is given to customers than at Messrs. Hackett & Shirley's.—Call around there.

Personal.—The Rev. Vincent Clementi, of this town, was elected a member of the Executive Committee of the Mechanics' Institute Association at their last meeting at Ottawa.

Street Row.—On Monday evening a street row took place on the corner of George and Hunter streets. Some loud talking was indulged in by the parties, and a large crowd collected. No person was hurt very badly. No arrests.

The Late Fire.—We notice that Mr. Chas. Stapleton has repaired his fine stable, lately injured by fire, and it is now ready for occupation. He has put on a roof of corrugated iron, an improvement on the one destroyed.

The Weeds.—Farmers have brought in wheat freely during the week. A dollar a bushel is a strong inducement to part with their surplus bushels without delay. The pride might be more, but it might be less, during the winter and spring.

Police Arrangements.—Excellent police arrangements have been made for the Exhibition week, both at the Agricultural Park and in the town. A large number of specials have been sworn in to aid the regular police force in maintaining order.

"The Champion Rockaway" is a musical composition by Mr. A. Keber, of Toronto, published by Bencough Brothers, at the Grip office. It possesses great merit, and is illustrated with a portrait of Hanlan and a representation of the Sportsman's Cup.

Personal.—A correspondent from Winnipeg says:—"Capt. Jas. Kennedy, of Peterborough, Ontario, has now settled in Morris. His new residence on McMillan street is now about completed, and his family have just arrived from Peterborough."

Fire Tank.—The tank lately sunk for fire purposes, on the corner of Stewart and Dalhousie streets, is almost finished, and contains already 9 or 10 feet of water. It is a pity that it was not made larger, as in case of a large fire, the steamer would soon empty it.

Railway Traffic.—One of our reporters noticed yesterday at the Midland Station, a train of twenty-seven Grand Trunk box cars, besides a large number of Midland cars, waiting on one of the sidings to be loaded. A very large quantity of freight is being shipped every day.

Dog Fight.—A dog fight between two Newfoundland dogs on George street yesterday afternoon, attracted a large concourse of spectators, who seemed to take a delight in seeing the two brutes chew one another to pieces. One of our policemen was present but did not interfere.

Personal.—Mr. W. H. Scott is at present in Ottawa, looking after the interests of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company..... Mr. R. Romaine has been appointed one of the Judges of the steam fire engines at the competition at Ottawa, and is at present in that city.

Roadway Being Damaged.—The dam lately built by the Curling Rink Company for the purpose of flowing their Rinks in winter, is overflowing and washing away the roadway between the race and the Rink. Unless immediate steps are taken to repair the break, serious damage may result.

Uneasy.—Our con/rere, the Review, evidently feels sore on account of our publishing a daily during the show days. We have just learned that there will be any prizes for exhibitions of ill-humor, and hence the wisdom of entering other commodities instead, or we might be tempted to continue a daily permanently.

Personal.—Mr. Chas. Percy, for some time Secretary and Treasurer of the Midland Railway, has been appointed to a similar position on the North Western Grand Trunk Railway. During his residence in Port Hope Mr. Percy made many friends. No doubt in his new position he will give the fullest satisfaction.

A Good Joke.—In recommending itself to the public, the Review puts in the plea of impartial editorials. In common parlance, this is too thin. Every one who knows the editor of the Review will give him credit for many things, with impartiality last, if at all. Some will be cruel enough to say—to be himself, he cannot be impartial.

Look to Your Pockets!—As it is known that a number of the "light fingered gentry" are in town, it behooves every person to look well to their pockets, especially the ladies who are given to carrying their valuables, in those back, outside pockets, which are so tempting to the pickpockets. Again we say, wherever you may be, look to your pockets.

The Golden Boot.—Ever attentive to the wants and requirements of his customers, Mr. Samuel White has this season made special efforts to secure one of the best stocks of fall and winter boots and shoes shown by him. The stock being well assorted and embracing every line, those needing a comfortable and durable article should visit his establishment.

Fall Boots and Shoes.—During the past few days Mr. W. J. Larmour has been receiving large additions to his stock of boots and shoes for the fall trade, which is now very complete. Especially in the finer lines he is showing some very superior articles which have been purchased on very advantageous terms, and will be sold at prices that must commend the goods.

Bazaar, Dinner and Tea.—The members of the Murray-street Bible Christian Church, open a Bazaar, to-morrow and Thursday, for the sale of useful and fancy articles. For the accomodation of visitors to the Fair, meals will be served in the basement of the church (nearly opposite the Drill Shed) during both days. Meal tickets, 25 cents each. No doubt it will be well patronized.

The Markets.—The market place on Saturday presented a scene of unusual activity, being filled for the first time this season with farmer's teams. An enormous quantity of wheat has been brought into town during the last week, the market and George street in that vicinity being blocked with teams for some time during each day. 61 per bushel is the general price offered for wheat.

The Midnight Mill Fire.—The sawdust piles on the south and west ends of the mill lately destroyed by fire, have been burning ever since, gutting closer to the crib-work of the George street bridge, and the ruins of the mill every day. Yesterday afternoon the steam fire engines were taken down, the flame of the building having again caught fire. After playing on the burning embers for some time they were extinguished, let us hope finally, as this is the third time that the engine has been called out to this fire.

Attention.—Read the advertisement of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute in another column.

Caretaker of the Town Clock.—Mr. Malcolm having resigned his position, Mr. Jas. McClelland has been appointed caretaker in his place.

The Grain Market.—A large quantity of grain was brought into town yesterday, principally wheat, and was readily disposed of at fair prices.

Personal.—We have to thank Mr. G. Brooks, formerly of this town, but now of San Francisco, for a regular supply of papers from that territory.

Crowded Out.—Communications from "Junius," Harwood, and A. H. Rockcut, Kingston, have been crowded out this issue but will appear next week.

Shipments of Flour.—At present all the mills in this vicinity are running night and day, and a very large quantity of flour is being shipped, from 250 to 1200 barrels daily.

Lecture in Aid of Mission School.—The Rev. John Smith, of Erskine Church, Toronto, will deliver a lecture in the George Street Methodist Church, on Monday evening, 13th inst., at eight o'clock, in aid of the South End Mission School. Tickets 25 cents.

New Stable.—The fine new stable, erected on Hunter-street by Mr. Geo. Dunsford, for the use of the patrons of Morman's Hotel, was completed yesterday, and is now ready for occupation. No less than eleven carpenters being at work to finish it in time for the fair. Mr. Morgan keeps a good hotel and is a very genial host.

The Lock-Up.—We are informed by P. C. McGhee that the rear entrance to the lock-up is blocked by lime boxes and building material, being used in the construction of a small building in the rear of Mr. D. Hopkins' block. Evil-doers had better beware, however, as John will soon find another entrance to the "palace" for sinners.

The New Fire Tank.—On Monday afternoon the steam fire engine was called into requisition to empty the tank lately built for fire purposes in the South Ward. With only 10 lbs. of steam it was emptied in 21 minutes. With two good streams, such as are necessary at almost every fire, and 60 lbs. of steam, the tank would be emptied in a very short time. It is of no use whatever for fire purposes, and had better be enlarged at once.

Time Wasted is Money Lost.—Messrs. Gilbert & Moore have entered into partnership as auctioneers, land and general agents, valuators, etc., with the intention in all their engagements to attend to their business promptly and at reasonable rates. Farmers who are going to sell out will find ready agents in the above firm. Landlord's warrants and chattel mortgages are promptly executed. Office:—L. Fisher's Flour and Feed Store. They are also agents for first-class Fire and Life Insurance companies.

Gents', Don't Read This!—A thing of beauty is a joy for ever. Nothing looks so bad, on a state occasion, as a garment out of season. Gentlemen visiting Peterborough during the fair should remember this and leave their orders at Messrs. Madison & Green's, for any clothing they may require. The reputation of this firm for elegance of stock and perfect fit of garments can be easily attested by a glance at many of our well-dressed residents and nobby young men of the town. Messrs. Madison & Green have also a large stock of hats and fashionable gents' furnishings, at very reasonable rates.

Fine Furniture.—On passing up to the Exhibition Grounds, last evening, we noticed a large crowd in front of McKee Bro's Furniture Rooms, opposite the Post Office. Stopping to inquire the cause of the commotion, we soon saw what it was that attracted so much attention. The fine show windows had been filled up with carpets, curtains, furniture, and all the little details necessary to furnish a bedroom and parlor. The south window representing a bedroom with dressing case (marble top), bedstead, chairs, curtains, pictures, etc., the north one a parlor, with a fine parlor suite, ottoman, etc. Call and see it, it is well worth inspection. The furniture, here shown, is but a sample of what is daily turned out by this enterprising firm, and is all their own manufacture.

ST. LUKE'S CHURCH.

Rev. Dr. Hodgkin on Sunday Evening—The Home Mission Fund—Synopsis of the Sermon.

On Sunday evening last, Rev. Dr. Hodgkin Missionary Secretary to the Toronto Diocesan Board, preached in St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, to a congregation that comfortably filled the commodious auditorium of that edifice. The whole tenor and burthen of the preacher's remarks were in support of the Home Mission Fund of the Episcopal Church in the Diocese of Toronto, and his appeal for aid to it was an exceedingly interesting and—let us hope—effective one. The Rev. Gentleman took for his text the 9th verse of the 8th chapter of Second Corinthians: "For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though He was rich, yet for your sakes He became poor, that you through His poverty might be rich." After referring at some length to the capricious likes and dislikes of certain portions of many congregations to various descriptions of sermons—one part preferring one kind of sermon, and the other part another kind, and vice versa—the Rev. lecturer went on to say that he was not certain that the subject he had chosen for that night would be acceptable to every part of the congregation. He might have chosen another subject, he knew that his present subject was a most unpopular one, but he would not have been there that evening if the Church had not been in need of money. He was not wandering beyond the bible in presenting the matter. If they (the congregation) would look at the two chapters succeeding that from which his text was taken they would be surprised at the frequency with which the matter was urged by Paul. With regard to the Home Missionary work—he regretted to say there was no Foreign Missionary work—being done in this Diocese, he would say that there were churches in the Diocese of Toronto closed because they had not the wherewithal to conduct them. He felt satisfied that the people of the Diocese did not know the nature of the work to be performed, else they would support more liberally, the Home Mission Fund. The Rev. lecturer continued at considerable length in an able appeal, and we regret that the unusual pressure on our columns this week prohibits our following him throughout.

AN HARVEST HOME FESTIVAL

took place in this Church on Thursday evening last, and was well attended. The pulpit, windows, arches, and columns supporting the gas jets were gaily festooned with the "the golden grain," intermixed with mountain ash berries, which presented a very pretty appearance, and on the window sills were tastefully arranged fruit of various kinds, altogether giving the interior of the building a brilliant aspect. Addresses, singing, &c., made up the mental refreshment of the evening, and an extremely pleasant couple of hours were spent.

PERSONALS.

Mr. W. M. O'Beirne, of the Lindsay Post is in town, he makes a good representative, and apparently enjoys life.

Mr. J. T. Whyte, Agent of Canada Life Assurance Company at Brockville, is in town, looking hale and hearty.

Col. Deacon, Mayor of Lindsay, is in town.

Mr. W. B. Robinson, of the Ontario Commercial College, Belleville, is in town.

Mr. Matt. Williams, of Cobourg, the genial host of the Horton House, is in town.

Mr. R. Pringle, of Cobourg, a prominent member of the Ontario Horse Breeders' Association, is in town, attending the fair.

Mr. J. C. Glendinning, of Newcastle, formerly of this town, is visiting the Exhibition.

Asst. Chief Kelly, of the Cobourg Fire Brigade, is in town, looking at our Fire Apparatus. Cobourg has suffered severely from fire of late.

POLICE COURT.

D. G. HATTON, ESQ., P. M.

TUESDAY.—Jas. Nugent, jr., of the township of Smith, was charged with neglecting to support his wife and family on the twenty-third day of September, instant. Prisoner was brought into Court by Constable Craig.

Defendant was ordered to find sureties himself in $200, and two others in $100, each to appear at the next Court for trial. He could not get the sureties and was committed to gaol awaiting his trial.

HARWOOD.

CRUSHED TO DEATH.—About 3.30 on Thursday afternoon Ryerson Hart Piller, employed in Uffoyl, Sadler & Co's lumber yard, was jammed between two trucks heavily laden with green lumber, and died thirty minutes afterwards. Particulars of the accident state that Hart was between the trucks, and in the act of disconnecting the chain which connects the trucks, when a car drawn from the mill by the horses struck the trucks, causing them to collide suddenly. Dr. Burnett, of Cobourg, was immediately summoned, but too late. Hart's last and only utterance after receiving the injury were asking "God for mercy." He leaves a young wife and child to mourn his untimely end

PETERBOROUGH FALL ASSIZES.

Before Chief Justice Wilson.

The Fall Assizes of the County of Peterborough opened in the Court House on Monday last before Chief Justice Wilson. The docket comprised six civil cases. Thos. Hodgins, Q.C., was present to conduct the Crown business.

In addition to the members of the local bar, there were present: Hon. Sidney Smith, Q.C., Hector Cameron, Q.C., A. L. Colville, Esq., J. Frances, Esq., of Trenton, and Mr. McClelland of Campbellford.

JUDGE'S CHARGE.

His Lordship in addressing the Grand Jury, highly complimented the County from the very extraordinary absence of crime, and said as there was nothing of importance for the Grand Jury to act upon, he would dismiss them after they had examined the jail and made the presentment.

GRAND JURY.

The following gentlemen comprised the Grand Jury:—W. H. Clarkes, Foreman, W. W. Armstrong, Jas. Best, Jas. G. Choate, D. Costello, Jas. Campbell, Peter Connal, R. Davidson, S. J. Griffin jr. P. Hamilton, Jas. Hope, Jas. Hicks, W. B. Kelly, F. J. Lewis, J. McClelland, W. Maneon, T. Mather, J. McKee, E. Paterson, W. H. Reckless, J. Z. Rogers, W. E. Sherwood, J. Turner, and D. Ullyott.

R. N. RODDY DISCHARGED.

Mr. R. N. Roddy was arraigned and the prosecution being unsustained his Lordship discharged the prisoner from custody.

GRAND JURY'S PRESENTMENT.

The Grand Jury made their presentment after which His Lordship discharged them.

BARCHARD vs. MENZIES.—This was an action brought by the widow of the late Jas. Barchard against Thomas Menzies to recover $445 balance claimed to be due deceased at the time of his death for the drawing of the plans and specifications, contracts, and overseeing the erection of the dwelling occupied by the defendant at present. The defendant claimed that the agreement between the plaintiff's husband and himself was that he should be paid $50.00 for work done, but defendant had paid him from time to time sums which amounted in the aggregate to $307. Verdict for the plaintiff for $293 and costs.

D. W. DUMBLE, Esq., for plaintiff; MOORE & SAWERS and HON. S. SMITH, Q.C., for defendant.

Court then adjourned.

KEENE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Jack Frost paid us a visit on Wednesday night last, 24th ult. He was not invited to return for some weeks.

—The farmers in this vicinity are busy with their fall ploughing. Fall wheat is being sown in considerable quantities.

—A large number of people from this neighborhood have been visiting Toronto during the past three weeks, being attracted thither by the Exhibition, and also by the presence of our Governor-General and his Royal Consort.

—One of our villagers, Mrs. Dr. Harrison, had the honour of being presented to their Excellencies.

—The Relief and Extension Fund of the Methodist Church has been receiving attention on the Keene Circuit during the past two weeks. Over $180 have been subscribed, and it is confidently expected that before the close of the list $200 will be realized.

—Rev. R. McCulloch, pastor of the Methodist Church here, is at present engaged in holding special services at Zion Church.

—On Sunday evening last, 28th inst., a large congregation assembled in the Presbyterian Church here, to listen to the quarterly S. S. Review. The Review was conducted by Rev. F. Andrews in his usual interesting and instructive style.

Robinson's Phosphorized Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Lacto-Phosphate of Lime.

Is prepared with the finest Cod Liver Oil,—one of the most esteemed remedies in the catalogue of the "Materia Medica," —Lacto-Phosphate of Lime, which enters so largely into the formation of bone material and other important tissues of the body,—Phosphorous, the great brain and nerve tonic and invigorator, in a form and combination most desirable to obtain its fullest effects, together with other valuable remedial agents, not the least of which is iron, the great blood producing element. These are all intimately combined in one demulcent fluid of homogeneous appearance and delicate flavor, possessing remarkable power in arresting the decay and supplying the waste constantly going on in those abnormal conditions of the system effected by such diseases as pervert and impair nutrition, vitiate the blood, and sap the vital forces. It is highly recommended for Consumption, Chronic Bronchitis, Coughs, Scrofula, Scrofulous and Syphilitic Ulcers, Tumors, Diseases of the Bones, Joints and Spine, General Debility, Emaciation, and all impurities of the blood. It is particularly adapted to Delicate Females in those low states of the system that manifest themselves in so many of the ailments peculiar to their sex. To thy aged and infirm its nourishing and invigorating properties will give renewed strength and buoyancy of spirit; and to very young children its combined use will be found of incalculable benefit, as its basis and nutritive properties supply the blood with strength-giving materials for bone and muscle structure, and thus furnish the foundation for strong and healthy constitutions. It is very pleasant to take.

Prepared solely by J. H. ROBINSON, Pharmaceutical Chemist, St. John, N.B., and for sale by Druggists and General Dealers. Price $1.00 per bottle; six bottles for $5.00. 26-Sim.

VEGETINE.

GENERAL DEBILITY.

CHESTER, IOWA, Oct. 9, 1878.

H. R. STEVENS, BOSTON:

DEAR SIR,—I am happy to commend to the public, that I have found Vegetine in my family work after long trouble, and can recommend it to all those who wish a simple and effective remedy. It has been used in our family in the East for years as the best purifier for a "Blood Purifier." In my case it was used as a cure for General Debility and other wrong seemed maladies, found my health fully restored.

JACKSON, TENN., June 15, 1878.

H. R. STEVENS, BOSTON:

I take great pleasure in recommending your "Vegetine." I have lived in Jackson, Tenn., nearly 15 years, and am now an old man. About one year ago my health was very poor from Weakness, Rheumatism, and general prostration of the system. At that time, I commenced using the Vegetine. I am now enjoying a good health and feel that I have a new lease of life. I believe the Vegetine is the best medicine in the world. I cannot say too much in its favor. Please publish this, as I wish my friends to know that Vegetine is no humbug, but a great and good medicine.

Yours truly,
W. R. CALAWAY.

CATARRH.

Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Cures Catarrh.

T. J. B. HARDING, ESQ., BROCKVILLE, ONT.

DEAR SIR.—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me. I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as at first the happy effects seemed to me to be "too good to be true."

I was afflicted in my head for years before I commenced to use Catarrh. In order to get relief I gave my own dentist to many preparations. The inward "drop" from the head was become very disagreeable, and a choking sensation often prevailing on rising from my bed. I could not blow anything out of my head for long. My hearing and sight were seriously affected. When your Agent came to Walkerton in August 1877, I purchased three bottles. Before I had used a quarter of the contents of one bottle I found myself relieved, and when I had used two bottles and a third, I could believe it, and my cure was complete. I have had no return of the disease, and have not used a single bottle of late. I have much pleasure in thus testifying to my benefit.

A sense of duty to sufferers from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, prompts me to write you this. Consider, remember, with hope to relief, what one of 3 you may see prosper. Yours truly,

W. TINDALL, Methodist minister.

THE BACHELOR'S COMPLAINT.

Oh, dear! this quiet and shamnable,
I fear I shall go wild!
But, though I am a bachelor,
And lack my thick nor child,
I know that when I am no more—
Let folks say what they please—
Although I have no kith or kin,
I'll have my log-at-ees.

The Modern Cinderella.

When'er the whistle tooted,
Out from my nearest window,
There popped a pair of female eyes
To gather in a stocker.
So much for habit,
On the part of Apabella,
That they changed her name and call her
The modern cinder Ella.

—Atlanta Constitution.

Tom and Dick.

"To this night's masquerade," quoth Dick,
"I by this misery I am beckoned,
I think 'twould be a pleasant trick
To go as Charles the Second."

Tom felt for rapartee a thrust,
And then to Richard said;
"I'm'd better go as Charles the First,
For that requires no head."

—N. Y. Evening Post.

With Thee.

I'd rather walk through shower with thee
Than with another when the air
Is soft with Summer, and as fair
The heavens above us as are
Of dear, undefiled empyrean, where
Stars drifting on a liquid sky,
The white-robed angel of God float by.

Sweeter in storm to be with thee,
Dark waters round us, and the roar
Of breakers on the unseen shore
Resounding louder on the lee—
Than with another sailing o'er
A rippling lake, where angry gale
May never rend the silken sail.

Love's Hypocrisy.

Her lips said, "Go!" her shining eyes said, "Stay."
How half which was her meaning, which her will?
How read the riddle of her yes and nay,
And disentangle each, bewildered still?
Hearing her chilling tone, all hope expired;
Seeing her glowing eyes, despair took heart;
One moment certain of the good desired;
One moment turning, hopeless, to depart.
Then, as she stood, with half-averted face,
From hand to fear veiled from his ardent eyes,
Sudden she changed, and with triumphant grace
Flung off the mantle of her soul's disguise!
Sweet hypocrite! how false was all her feign-ing!
Turning for flight, yet, while she turned, remaining!

Treasures.

The rose, preserved with tender care;
The perfumed note, the tress of hair
That speak of boyish folly—
From every depths of every chair
I miss them all with shrugging air
Of cynic melancholy.
The "carte de dance," the crumpled glove;
The noted purse—"with Polly's love"—
(Confound it which was Polly?)

The posey ring I gave to Rose,
When softly came that whispered "Yes,"
Which seemed a dream of heaven.
We turtle-doves were wont to plan
(On sometime very small per ann.)
A dainty cote in Devon.
Ah, fickle Rose! she ran away
With Fuller, of the Guards, they say.
And died in 'Bl.

Ah, ripe of woman!—rosy, ripe—
The amber mouth-piece of my pipe
To me is twice as charming.
When one arrives at fifty odd,
The arrows of the archer god
Have lost their power of harming.
A wounded heart will ache, no doubt;
But then one finds a twinge of gout
A trifle more alarming!

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, OCT. 2ND, 1879.

JACQUEMINOT ROSES.

It all came about in this way. Of course it was wicked, and outrageous, and ungrateful, and all that, but then it was so sudden that she really did not know what had happened. And then, why in the world should the professor object to Adrian, in whom there was neither spot nor flaw? The man selfishly wanted to keep the child himself, and after him the deluge! Yes, it came about in this way. He had adored her so long. At first at such an awful distance—"the desire of the moth for the star," her uncle Redmond used to call it in his evil way; but another person might have said it was the pure and ardent passion of a young soul for its counterpart. And certainly that exquisite being, so fair, so frail, half human, half seraphic, was only the counterpart of this fiery, turbulent boy, so strong, and so tender, too, for all the vehemence of his impulses, so noble, and so lofty in his ideals. Of course no young girl of Ella's age could have looked at his face, could have heard his voice, and not have felt a strange attraction, for his beauty was as extraordinary as the sweetness of his tones.

"Beauty!" growled the uncle Redmond, when some one said so. 'He looks like the child of an organ-grinder. Doubtless he was filched by some padrone from some peasant.'

'And what of that?' said the aunt Redmond, fully in favor of the affair. 'Some people might prefer to be the children of Roman peasants, with all their Roman history and ancestry behind them, rather than to be the children of, parvenus here.'

'Tooral-looral!' was the reply—a customary one in such case.

But little did Ella care whether those long black lashes darkened the eyes of Roman or Saxon—they were Adrian's eyes, her lover's, the only eyes that had ever looked into hers, and the light of the world was in them. It was not his beauty, after all, that touched her heart; it was his personality—himself. If he had been born in a ruin on the Campagna, he would have been no more interesting than now as the son of a fishing merchant on the Jersey shore, an under-graduate of the college where her uncle Redmond was a part of the faculty, and, in his own conceit, a very important part.

As for Adrian, he had seen the girl coming into church, had met her at college festivals, had watched her walking in the gardens. He knew her name, and often strolled under her windows; once, indeed, he sent a band there to breathe out music in the soft dead dark of the night, and Uncle Redmond growled something about throwing the Revised Statutes at their heads, till the aunt propitiated him by wondering if the serenading were on account of his great work on the Civil Code. But all this was at a distance. He had not dared approach her; had not dared speak to her; had not dreamed of following her. 'Ella,' he softly said to himself. 'True. She is one of the Elle-people; she is not for me; she is of the fairy-folk, and I am of the earth, earthy.' And you would have said that he believed it, although it was but the expression of his reverence, of his sense of her separation from the greater things of life.

But one sunset, in crossing a public square, with the shadows of trees darkening the walks almost to twilight, he saw her moving hurriedly along just before him, themselves the only people to be seen in the square. 'She does not touch the earth, she floats,' he said. But as he thought it, a drunken creature started from the shadows and reeled up, leering into her face, while she shrank back with a slight sudden cry. With a bound Adrian was there; his arm fell, and the offender cowardly scrambled the earth, whatever Ella did. Then he bent with bare head before her half an instant, stood aside for her to pass on, and followed again, only at a respectful distance.

She was coming down the steps from the president's reception when he sent new her, her uncle waiting for her below—her aunt seldom going out in the college society. President Rex always gave splendid gorgeous receptions, though, as did so flowers and music went for fronted the greatest part, at any rate, and for the rest, his wife, his and lemonade go water as they would. Flowering plants lined the passages and stairways; and as in her pearly gauzes she descended all alone into the dark, she looked to him, ascending, like the spirit of the flowers and of the music bathed her. She held a spray of white roses in her hand. Who knew what that meant to her—the thought of flowers, drained and banished at herself, at her want of fashionableness and modesty, and her fancy continued, and her time started in the lonely night—how she held out the spray of white roses, and gave it to him with an enchanting smile, and went down as he went up. And he—he also never knew what became boldness what wild daring, possessed him when he stopped to her side as she walked home from church next day, and said, 'May I give you my name in exchange for your rose?' And although he had but introduced himself, he considered took to heart the literal interpretation of his words, and, in a wild, eager, silent way, considered himself engaged to her from that moment, whether she were engaged to him or not; and grown bold thenceforth, he always called her in his thoughts his Rose. One day, speaking with her—for after that they often met—he called her so aloud, and she was in no wise exhibited, it could so natur-ally, as if she had known, of course, that the sun was going to rise. And this was the first rosy gleam of dawn. Yet following it came little alternations of joy and terror, 'Perhaps he would not have dared to call me so,' she thought, in her shame-faced humiliation, 'if I had not been so forward. Perhaps he does not respect me, after all. And then, in spite of the trouble, her heart would bound with gladness to think she had given him the spray, to think he had called her his Rose.

It was winter as they came to that, and the skaters were making merry. She had come down to the lake with her uncle, who was a famous skater; had bound on her skates, and sped away with him; had left him to tighten a strap, had lost him, and had been found by Adrian, and together they had glided away; and then the late afternoon reddened into sunset and purpled into twilight, and they were skating up the stream, and leaving all the cries and fires and flashing forms behind them. How soft and fresh was the vigorous air! how rich the violet of the gathering night! how great the glow of the wind-shaken stars! Now it was no longer hand in hand that they went, but his arm was about her; they swept out on long curves together, and moved as if the pulses of one heart impelled them; and now they turned the corner of a bluff; now, far out of sight of all the world, they paused, and there, in the wintry dark, they were folded heart to heart and mouth to mouth. If the snows had fallen around them there and clothed them with a garment of death, if the ice had parted under their feet and plunged them into the drowning waters, they would hardly have asked any more. Their passion wrapped them, so like Dejanira's robe of flame, from all the frostiness of death, that the coming of eternity upon them in each other's arms would have seemed but its sacramental seal. And suddenly a rude, hoarse cry broke in upon the sphere where they were resting—the great rough voice of Professor Redmond, and Ella was snatched from Adrian's grasp, and a dozen stinging words were whirled at him, and the uncle had carried her off as the wind carries off a feather.

Adrian skated back alone. He seemed to move till the professor's heels cutting the ice could be heard no more. Where had all that splendor of the night gone? It was the darkness and coldness of desolation now. He took a terrible grind at mathematics that night, and the next day presented himself before the professor, and asked of him the promise of his niece in marriage, only to receive in return the flattest and curtest and most insulting of orders never to darken those doors again.

'For all that,' said Adrian, stoutly, 'I shall marry my wife.'

The professor looked at him, and burst into a furious, roaring laugh. 'Tooral-looral!' sang the professor. 'Begone!' he thundered.

The winter wore away at last, and if the professor kept the Rose from her lover, he could not keep the color from the velvet cheek if he were near, the glow from the darkling eyes if she were there, the smile, forgetful of all the rest of creation, on the kiss of both. He began to hate Adrian. He would have been glad to mark him out of existence, if marks could have done it—out of his college existence at any rate; but the boy gave him no chance. He deserved no reprimand, and none could be tortured into shape for him. He studied as a machine works. He covered himself with laurels—all the more he would rather they had been roses.

'Who is the beggar?' the professor growled, one spring day, when they met him in the square again, and, the bare-headed silent reverence ended, he had passed on without a greeting. To Adrian then it did not matter that redbud and laburnum and dogwood were in bloom, and that the rose itself would soon be here; it seemed to him as dead and burned out a world as the craters of the moon, till looking back he saw her, so long forbidden to speak to him, yet glancing over her shoulder with that smile. 'Who is the beggar,' growled then sole Redmond, 'to whom you choose to give a glance when I forbid it—I, who stand in your dead father's shoes?' Enormous shoes they were, judging by the professor's claim to authority, and perhaps their potency was stretched enormously by the wearer. 'A fishing merchant's son, indeed! One might suppose that, reared as you have been, the very thought of such connection would smell to heaven.'

'He never touches fish,' said Ella, feeling obliged to answer, although if he had been a fisherman on the Brador coast, it would have made no difference with her. 'He never sees them. He sits at a desk in a counting-room, miles away from the warehouses, and his clerks write in books all day. And Adrian will do so too.'

'He is rich, then, I suppose?'

'Is he?' she asked, innocently. 'I never thought, indeed.'

'He is not rich enough to have you,' was the reply.

'Yes, uncle, he surely will,' said the timid thing, solemnly, with her heart in her mouth, but ready to die for her faith. Then something in Greek exploded, loud and angry from the professor's throat; and he never again let his ward out of his sight when she had crossed the threshold. Love laughs at locksmiths without doubt; but this locksmith was very skilful. It was almost midsummer, and not one word had Adrian heard from the lips of his Rose, and letter after letter had been returned to him unopened. But his ardor was unchanged; his love burned with the same white flame, although there were only smiles and glances to feed the fire.

And now at last the college life was drawing to a close, and Adrian was the class poet. Perhaps his passion had warmed genius into life: there had never been such a poem uttered there before; but no other poet had had those tender, yearning eyes before him with the tears suspended in them, that face so like a flower in the fresh dew. 'More organ-grinding,' growled the professor.

The lovers met in the press, for one instant, not long afterward, as that portion of the exercises ended. And when he had left her side, a great bunch of red roses was in her hand, the most delicious dewy roses, whose perfume swept around her like an atmosphere. But the professor had relieved guard. His lynx eye had caught sight of a white gleam among the roses. He took them suddenly out of her hand, shattered a little note, and gave the flowers back to her. Then he slipped the note into his coat pocket.

It is a pity the professor did not read that note before next day. This is what was written there:

'My Rose,—If your affection for me is all it was, is all that my adoring love for you would claim, you will hold these roses in your hand to-night as you enter the reception-rooms of Rex. If at any time in the course of the night, when the band is playing the Lancier waltz, or when it is playing 'Lucia Buttercup,' you lift these sweet red roses to your rosier face, and keep your face there for one long moment, I shall know that you can no longer endure this tyranny that parts us. My heaven will await us at the gate, and when you are my wife, neither professor, nor uncle, nor any one on earth can part what God has joined together.'

But he didn't read it. There was not the Princess and Schoolmaster.

(From the Globe.)

A pleasing story is related of Her Royal Highness the Princess Louise as illustrative of her gracious and amiable manner. On Saturday morning Mr. Robert Rennick Coutts, a school teacher at Port Credit, was standing before the Royal Canadian Yacht Club House waiting to get a view of the Princess as she passed out to her carriage. In due time Her Royal Highness appeared, and, observing Mr. Coutts, gave him a very scrutinising look, as if trying to place him. Let it be stated here that Mr. Coutts' father, now deceased, was for a number of years an attendant at Balmoral Castle, where, as is well known, the Queen used to spend a great portion of her time with her family in their younger days. This fact led Mr. Coutts to think that the Princess might possibly remember his people if she heard his name, and so he approached the carriage and handed the Royal lady his card. Her Highness received the card with a bow, and immediately drove away in her carriage. On Monday Mr. Coutts was informed by note that the Princess desired to see him, with his brother and sisters, at Government House. Mr. Coutts' brother is Mr. Peter F. Coutts, of this city; Mrs. Smith, of 365 Yonge-street, if a sister of his, as also is Miss Marion Coutts, telegraph operator. According to invitation they proceeded to Government House on Tuesday morning, and were most graciously received by the Princess. Her Royal Highness explained that when she glanced at Mr. Coutts' card the name struck her as being familiar, and her mind unconsciously reverted to the days she had spent at Balmoral, and then she remembered his father distinctly. She ordered enquiries to be made concerning Mr. Coutts' address, and having ascertained it sent him an invitation to call upon her as above stated. The Princess shook hands with her visitors warmly, and talked familiarly with them of Balmoral, and the people living at the Castle, many of whose names she mentioned. The interview closed very pleasantly, and Mr. Coutts and his brother and sisters, departed from Government House, delighted with the Princess' condescension.

Unhealthy School-rooms.

The Medico-Legal Society of New York has issued a report on school hygiene which has more than a local interest. Some time ago this society appointed a committee, consisting of well-known physicians, to investigate health questions connected with the public schools, and its report contains many statements calculated to surprise the public. The committee find that during the vacation months there is a marked decline in the death rate from scarlet fever, but as soon as the schools open the disease increases its ravages. The Chairman of the Health Committee of the Brooklyn Board of Education remarks that over 2,000 children disappear from the time of entering the lowest grade and that of promotion to the next, and assigns the fate to the unsanitary condition of the schools. In many of our own schools, more in the country than in the cities, the want of ventilation is plainly apparent to any one entering them from the fresh out-door atmosphere. The class rooms are frequently crowded with children, many of whom, either in person or clothing, are not over cleanly; the windows are kept closed to prevent a draught, and a large stove, the exhalation from the children's persons, and the carbon from their breaths quickly convert the air of the room into a most subtle poison, and it is no wonder that delicate children succumb to such an atmosphere day after day die, and the weakest become delicate and have to resign or vacate. By drug on, hospitals of giving their best energy to their work.

The question of ventilation is beset with thinking, and to obtain absolutely pure air in a crowded room with our present architectural knowledge appears almost impossible. But the endeavour of these difficulties, instead of being a reason for culpable carelessness on the part of school boards, ought to be an incentive to extra exertion.

Of Interest to Farmers.

A Stock Food Steamer and Evaporator is to the farmer an article of necessity, or is fast becoming so, for the fact has been thoroughly demonstrated that as an article of economy it cannot well be dispensed with. What has brought about this revolution in the process of steaming food for animals has been the introduction among farmers of a Steamer and Evaporator that, strange to say possesses its work effectively, and affords no opportunity to question the fact. It is Newkirk's Stock Food Steamer and Evaporator, made at Cleveland, Ohio. It has been exhibited at a number of Fairs, and the opinion of all who have seen it at work, or are using it, is that its construction is perfect. The inventor demonstrates its power for combustion of green wood by using the greenest basswood procurable, boiling water without the slightest inconvenience. This was done for five consecutive days at the Michigan State Fair, held in Detroit, last week, and satisfied all who saw it of its adaptability to the work. Those who were appointed by the Society to judge in these matters, and award premiums, attached to it a first premium without a moment's hesitation, and it was well deserved.

Kidnapping Extraordinary.

A Little Girl of a Wealthy Citizen of Little Falls the Victim—Arrest of the Guilty Party.

BUFFALO, Sept. 25.—Charles H. Schuyler, of Little Falls, telegraph operator, called on a sixteen-year-old daughter of a prominent citizen, on Tuesday, while attending school, representing that her father had been injured, and he was sent to bring her. She accompanied him, and on entering a room he locked the door and forced her to copy a letter to her father asking that $500 be given for her release. The prisoner begged to be released, promising to raise the required sum and bring it to him. On her swearing secrecy, she was released, and told the story of her detention. Schuyler was arrested and confessed. On him was found a letter to the father of the young lady stating that he had had his son Willie, aged six, in custody, and would release him on payment of $500, and if not forthcoming the child would be drowned. Schuyler was held to bail for $5,000. The names of a number of children of wealthy residents were found on him.

The young lady's name is Miss Emily Davis, daughter of Townsend Davis, of Smith, Davis & Clark, insurance agents."

Mr. Willis, whose hotel was quarantined by the health committee of St. Mary's for about six weeks on account of small-pox, has, through his solicitor, "billed" the town for $656 damages. He claims that the corporation cannot collect license fees from him and at the same time close his place of business. He also charges for fumigating and cleaning his hotel, which, during the quarantine, was used as a town hospital, and for the clothing, etc., destroyed to prevent the spread of the disease. The case is likely to be an interesting one, as the Council seems inclined to fight it to the last.

As Surely as Effect follows Cause.

As surely as effect follows cause, so surely will disease eventually fasten itself upon a system deficient in vital energy, if tonic medication is not resorted to in time. The necessary tendency of a weak discharge of the functions of the body is to disorder its organs. Invigoration, prompt and thorough, is the only safeguard. No renovant of depleted physical energy, no restorative of lost flesh, nerve power and cheerfulness, has more clearly demonstrated its efficacy than Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine. In this preparation, associated with the salutary medicines which forms its basis, is pure sherry wine and certain romantic constituents, which impart an agreeable taste to the article, and give additional emphasis to its effects. In cases of general debility and dyspepsia it is invaluable and the desired effect is, in the vast majority of cases, remarkably prompt as decisive. That good natural appetite, which gives a relish for the coarsest fare is insured by the use of Quinine Wine, which also confers brain soothing and body refreshing sleep. Fever and ague and bilious remittent fever, are diseases to the eradication of which it is specially adapted; but it should be used only in the intervals between the seizures. The far-reaching effects of a good tonic, in all complaints involving loss of physical energy, are well understood by physicians, and the comprehensive influence for good of this preparation upon the system goes far to bear out the professional belief in the value of invigorants as opponents of disease. Be sure to ask for the "Quinine Wine" prepared by Northrop & Lyman, Toronto. Sold by all druggists.

PETITT'S EYE-SALVE.

An Infallible Remedy for all Diseases of the Eye (acute or chronic), Granulation of the Lids, Ulceration of the Lachrymal Glands, Film, and Weakness of the Vision from any cause.

THE AMERICAN EYE-SALVE is presented the public with the assurance of its efficacy as a curative of the most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflamation whether induced by scrofulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diminished tone of the optic nerve, or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ. Also for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the Salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, when weakness, pain, and misery may have long threatened a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe, and effective remedy ever discovered. The materials of which it is made are pure, perfect, and costly, compounded with elaborate care and exactness safe in its applications, being used externally, and, of course, lessening the pain and danger, which necessarily attends the introduction of minerals and eye-washes. RINGWORM and OLD CHRONIC SORES, of scrofulous origin, or resulting from whatever cause, yield to the AMERICAN EYE-SALVE. It is used successfully for Piles. Its soothing effect is immediate, permanent cure requires but a few applications. The proprietors of "Dr. J. PETITT'S AMERICAN EYE-SALVE," while making new and improved machinery for making a more perfect box for the Eye-Salve, have changed the Trade Mark on the cover so as to correspond with the Cut on the Wrapper, Circulars, Advertisements, etc. We call attention to this, as it might otherwise be regarded as counterfeiting.

Joy Among the Children.

COPELAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 600 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administering nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having them pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copeland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical condition as the ordinary Castor Oil, and while equally safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is boozy; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—'My children drink it like water;' another;—'We had to hide the bottle or they would have finished it right off;' another—'My little girl has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she hates the ordinary Castor Oil, and never would get her to take it without a fight; yet another—'I wish you manufactured your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—sure to take the place of all the common oil.'

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a simple household medicine has brought fraudulent imitations into the market, but the public can guard themselves against substitution (which unprincipled parties are attempting to sell on the reputation of this article) by ordering that the name of 'COPELAND'S Sweet Castor Oil,' is on both wrapper and directions label.

The undersigned having purchased Messrs. R. Copeland & Co.'s interest in the above patent, are now manufacturing it from the original recipe. NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto.

PETERBORO' BRANCH, - DIXON'S BLOCK.

Goods Sold Direct to the People at Wholesale Price.

The Only Business in Canada Conducted on the Same Principle.

Over $200,000 Worth of Boots and Shoes so Supplied Last Year.

The great loss annually sustained by selling to Dealers, first led to our establishing of Branch Stores, where we could supply direct to the people for Cash all the goods we could manufacture, thus giving to the people the goods less the dealer's profit, and saving to ourselves the annual loss. We were the more forcibly impressed into this step from the fact that cheap Eastern-made shoddy goods were being palmed off as our goods. We now sell our own goods, warrant what we sell, use no shoddy or inferior material of any kind, and can and do supply goods of the best quality 25 per cent. less than they can be bought elsewhere.

Everything Marked in Plain Figures. Only One Price.

CUSTOM DEPARTMENT.

Our arrangements are now complete in this department, and we can make to measure promptly either Ladies', Gentlemen's, or Children's Goods, in the Latest Styles, at little over half the price usually charged.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, OCT'R 9, 1879.

Lindsay and its Railway Accommodation.

Only lately Lindsay papers and Lindsay people, joined by the cynical journals at Fenelon Falls and Bobcaygeon, affected to sneer at Peterborough for being "behind the age" in railway matters; and Lindsay was pointed to as a bright and shining light in the way of proper railway enterprise. Well, this kind of thing did not hurt Peterborough, and folks in this town couldn't see the sense of noticing it seriously. But now we see how the proud are cast down, and the high minded humbled in the dust. Lindsay is actually lamenting the disadvantages under which it labors in the matter of railway communication. The "railway magnates," so lately patted on the back as friends of Lindsay and ministers to its future greatness, are now accused of neglecting that town and "leaving it to lack," while other towns are provided for in preference. The magnates aforesaid are remanded in a melodramatic manner that it will not do now to repeat the policy that brought on more competition. It is indeed hard on Lindsay. But the severest shock to those who sneered at Peterborough, and made comparisons intended to be invidious to this town, have now to admit that Peterborough, "behind the age" in railway enterprise, is actually better off in respect of railway accommodation than is the enterprising and rocket-like Lindsay. Hear the Post:—

"Another matter requiring early attention is the passenger rates to Toronto. It is, we understand, 25c. more from Lindsay than from Peterborough. The latter is just now a prospective competing point is a way; Lindsay is not. Fifty cents a rip per passenger with a considerable shorter distance is not a killing matter but people naturally object to paying it under the circumstances."

The Quebec Dead-Lock.

THE situation in Quebec remains practically unchanged, though there are growing indications that Mr. Joly has the long end of the lever, "by a large majority." He has been holding meetings at different points, at which gatherings he and his fellow-ministers explain to the people their position toward them on the one hand, and the Legislative Council on the other. Thus far, no Legislative Councillor who voted to with-hold the supplies has accepted the invitation to attend these meetings, and explain why he did so. It turns out that Mr. Chesuveau has no followers in his desertion of the Premier, under whom he accepted office on the plain issue of popular rights as against Ministerial usurpation; and it is not likely now that the people will submit themselves to a usurpation worse than Ministerial, because more absurd. Indeed, Mr. Chesuveau now begins to see his mistake, and shows signs of retracing his steps. It is said, too, that Sir John Macdonald on his arrival home from England, expressed his disapprobation at the action of the Legislative Council, in refusing the supplies. He could not at least have shown his approval; and if he has, as asserted, condemned in plain terms the action of the Upper House in Quebec, there remains but little comfort for those Tory minds that expected so great party advantage from it. The plain disapproval evinced on all sides for their strange proceedure, may indnce the Quebec Legislative Council to reconsider their refusal of the supplies. If not, Mr. Joly will secure an appeal to the people, in fairness to himself, the electors, and indeed to the Legislative Council as well. But probably that body does not want the exercise of fairness, being rather like the prisoner who, when told not to fear, as he would get justice from the Court, replied that it was just that which troubled him.

The Zulu King.

Cetewayo, the Zulu King, has been taken a prisoner to the Cape of Good Hope, and his territory has been divided among chiefs of tribes from which he and his father took it by conquest. This has the effect of pleasing the natives, who cling to the old tribal traditions, and may secure the British plans even against the attempts of a liberated Cetewayo. It is not probable that the British government would keep the brave Zulu king long a prisoner; if it could only be determined what other disposition could be made of him. Were there any guarantee that he would forbear to plot mischief in the territory so lately under his own iron rule he might be liberated at once. But what could he do, and cut himself entirely adrift from his position past? Among his people he is a king, and a king he must remain, or sink into utter contempt and oblivion. Hence, from policy of mercy as well as of prudence, it may be well to hold him in an honorable but well-guarded prisoner of war. Of course the Zulu tribes hold the country subject to British rule; but such distribution is made as far as possible on the old tribal lines. The [illegible] condition of things is that of the interference of one tribe with another.

Military Drill in Schools.

The Canada Gazette contains the following memo. in regard to military drill in schools:—"Memo.—If the university, college or school has adopted a special uniform to be worn by all students attending such university, college or school, such uniform, if suitable for use at military parades and exercises, will be accepted as the uniform of the company. For other companies the uniform need not be the same in all schools, but each member must wear that adopted for the company to which he belongs. This may be composed of a scarlet, blue, rifle green or grey tunic or Norfolk jacket, with blue, black, rifle green or grey trousers, and forage cap or shako, as may be preferred. Clothing of any pattern worn by cadets or soldiers in foreign countries will not be approved."

British Columbia.

BRITISH COLUMBIA is the "spoiled child" of the Canadian Confederation Things didn't go just as she wanted them, and she threatened to "run away from home" on the first of May. She didn't do it, however. But she was further cajoled by promises in relation to her much desired toy—a trans-continental railway—and flattered by sundry other attentions. As might have been expected she has again been disappointed, and again she threatens to cut her family connection. We're afraid she will again fail to carry out her threat. There are certain things worse than the loss of a Province to the Confederation; and one of them would be the fulfilment of the wild promises of politicians willing to say anything to secure place.

WHAT have Dominion Ministers, individually or collectively, to do with the revival of the lumber trade, anyway? The lumbermen can't see that the new tariff has done them anything but harm.

Lord Beaconsfield on Canada.

LORD BEACONSFIELD has been making a speech, in which he spoke of Canada in a very absurd way, giving as a basis for his grave nonsense "a very high authority." This is generally supposed to have been Sir John Macdonald, who has during his late visit to England, doubtless been indulging in his old propensity for humbugging, at the expense of the English Premier. Canada's prospects, though just now not over bright in themselves, will not become utterly black in comparison with other countries; and her hopes for the future are quite rosy enough without the necessity for lying about them. Sir John Macdonald when humbugging Lord Beaconsfield about the "fertile wilderness of the North West," was laying the foundation for future distrust of Canadian representations by the English Official mind; and that is a position in which no colony can afford to be placed. While the whole affair is decidedly funny as a joke on Beaconsfield, it may yet turn out a very serious business for Canada. The Asian Mystery can stand it much better than the Canadian Dominion.

Freeing the Slaves in Cuba.

THE Spanish Government having in contemplation a measure for the freeing of the slaves in Cuba, many of the planters in that Island, owners of slaves, have granted the latter their freedom, and bargained for their services for five years. This is an improvement on the method followed in the United States, of emancipating the negroes, and suddenly throwing them upon their own resources amid a population filled with old and deep-rooted prejudices against them as a race. The simple change from being slaves to becoming servants bound by agreement for a term will leave the emancipated ones the great advantage of following their usual work in their usual haunts, providing them with certain sustenance for five years, and, at the same time, yielding them all the benefits that flow from the knowledge that they are no longer slaves, but that they and their children are a free people, with rights and privileges equal to any other class of citizens. It only remains for them to commence the improvement of their new privileges while quietly and securely enjoying their rights.

The Rand Contest.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:—

DEAR SIR,—In your paper dated Sept. 25th, my attention is drawn to a paragraph which appeared in the Kingston Whig, in reference to the Band in Peterboro', who won first prize in Toronto, at the Amateur Band Competition, being Mr. Ruskett's old band, and the selection "Ernani" contributed towards that result, being that which was recommended and supplied by Mr. Ruskett—this is contradicted by you, in such a way, that it is necessary for me to say something. I always have fair, and do feel, a great interest in anything connected with Peterboro', and was glad to think that in the year '77, Mr. J. Fraser, Sec. of the F. B. Band, Peterboro', could write to me as an interested party, asking me to recommend a prize selection for their Band. In answer, I recommended the selection "Ernani," and they, the F. B. S., sent me a cash order for the same, which I filled. In evidence of this—when my eldest son was in Peterboro' in August '78, Mr. Miller asked him (my son) to attend a rehearsal and conduct the selection, as he was not sure they were playing it right, this was the same copy I sold to the Band. It is far from my thoughts to detract from Mr. Miller any credit, at the same time, in whatever capacity the band of Peterboro' may be engaged in connection with my name, the honor is certainly on the side of the band in having it so.

Yours truly, A. B. RACKETT.

Kingston, Sept. 28, '79. B. M. 'A.' B.

[In reference to the above we can only repeat what we stated in our last issue, that the selection "Ernani" arranged by Mr. Ruskett, was discarded after a few practices by the band, and the "Ernani" published in Distin's Brass Band Journal taken up instead. Mr. Rackett is correct in his statement that Mr. Miller, Band-Master, purchased a selection named "Ernani" from him, but incorrect when he asserts that it was the same selection played by the band in Toronto. Mr. R. apparently is not cognizant of the fact that the band purchased another selection of the same name.—Ed. Ex.]

THE CENTRAL EXHIBITION.

A HIGHLY SUCCESSFUL FAIR.

The success attending the Fair yesterday afternoon, evening and this morning, was far beyond the most sanguine expectations of its promoters. Besides the very large number coming in from various sources during the morning, the noon train was laden, the "King Fisher" also landed a large cargo of human freight and people from the immediate vicinity of the town arrived by different means of conveyance till the number of people in the town reached nearly 10,000. That the greater portion of these attended the Exhibition was manifest from the crowds in all parts of the grounds and buildings, passage through the greater portion thereof being almost impossible.

THE HORSE SHOW

was the great feature of the afternoon, and the most interest was centered near the ring. The exhibit in this department was far superior to any yet seen in the Midland counties, both as to numbers and quality of the stock shown. Competent judges affirm that several of the carriage horses shown were superior to those exhibited at Toronto. The greater portion of the afternoon was taken up with the exhibition of stallions and colts, but as the directors believed that many were anxious to see the carriage horses, it was wisely determined to bring them into the ring before the close of the afternoon. No prizes, however, were awarded—the final judgement being left over till this morning. In the both classes of carriage teams there were altogether seventeen entries; in single carriage horses, 20; and in saddle horses, 14 That the judges will have a difficult task to determine on the relative merits of those shown, there can be little doubt, as the animals generally are of superior appearance.

CATTLE.

The vicinity of the cattle sheds was also crowded, and during the afternoon the most of the prizes were awarded.

In Durhams, Mr. Pratt, of Cobourg, took the lead, and carried off the principal prizes. Besides him, Messrs. McKibbon, H. Collins, James Campbell and H. Bertram, each took prizes.

In Devons, Joseph Walton and Samuel Harper, of Hamilton Township, were the chief exhibitors.

In Ayrshires, T. Guy & Son, of Oshawa, exhibited a herd of fifteen, while J. Ledgate and Alex. Scott showed in lesser numbers.

In Grades, the entries were limited, Messrs. Jackson, Croft, A. Scott, and G. Lee being the exhibitors.

SHEEP.

In Leicesters, Albert Tamblyn, of Orono, is the principal exhibitor, having a flock of eighteen on the ground. G. Staples, of Manvers, T. & J. Graham, of Cavan, and Robert Vance, of Cavan, are also very large exhibitors, the last gentleman showing an aged ram that took third prize in Toronto, and a pair of ewe lambs that took second prize at the same place.

In South Devons, Joseph Walton, Jos. Redmond and James Campbell carried off the prizes.

In Cotswolds, the exhibit was but meagre, Messrs. Redmond and Staples being the only exhibitors.

SWINE.

In Improved Berkshire (small breed) Robt. Vance, of Cavan, took the lead in prizes. A ten months old Boar, entered in the aged class, took second prize, the same animal took second in Toronto.—The first prize in this class was awarded to a fine specimen belonging to W. J. Westington. Besides this Mr. Vance took two first prizes for young Boar and Sow, and third for aged Boar. Messrs. John Ludgate, Jos. Redmond, T. E. Bell, E. Davidson and D. E. Boulton, of Cobourg, also exhibited and carried off prizes.

CARRIAGE MAKERS' DISPLAY.

In this class Mr. T. E. Fitzgerald is the only exhibitor, and makes a display creditable to this long established and well known carriage works. The chief article in the exhibit is a handsome hearse ordered by Mr. A. Comstock, of this town, and essentially speaks well for the maker, being fully up to these manufactured in the cities. It has large full plate glass sides, oval ends, and is finished with the best English varnish, and has been nineteen months in painting. The drapery is of broadcloth, with gold fringe. A side bar Whitney spring buggy, ordered by R. Morrow, Esq., was much admired. This buggy was shown as it came from the blacksmiths, without paint or varnish. It is built of second growth American hickory, with fine Bessemer steel axles, and when completed is not to exceed 80 pounds in weight. There is also shown a single covered buggy, a two-seated carriage, two-bloo oak carriage waggons,—one highly finished and the other in ordinary finish. Samples of the raw material in hubs, spokes and rims were also shown in profusion. The excellence of the work shown was manifest from the interest displayed in the exhibit and the number of orders taken during the day.

STUMP MACHINES.

Mr. John Moore, of Peterborough, has on exhibition one of Mason's stone and stump extractors.

Mr. Geo. Shields, of Lakefield, also exhibits one of his stone lifting machines.

SEWING MACHINES.

The several sewing machine agents of this district exhibit hereby. The Wheeler & Wilson is represented by Mr. G. A. Mitchell; the Osborne "A" by Mr. B. Shortly; the Williams Singer and Royal by W. A. King, and the New York Singer by Messrs Brainse & Norris.

GRAINS, SEEDS, ROOTS, &c.

In grains and seeds the entries it is to be regretted are small in number, but the samples shown excellent, and much above the average of former years.

In roots and vegetables a splendid collection is shown.

PLANTS AND FLOWERS.

The plants and flowers occupy one-half of the south end of the shed, and are nicely arranged on a range of elevated shelves. The display is a fine one and highly creditable.

IN DAIRY PRODUCTS

the competition is keen, especially butter—there being sixteen entries for table butter, and 16 for that in tinnets or crocks. In firkin Butter, however, there are but five entries. In cheese the display is limited, as is also that of the other counties.

DOMESTIC MANUFACTURES.

The exhibit of domestic manufactures is like most of the classes inside the shed, limited in quantity, but what is shown is of excellent quality.

THE ANCHOR WOOLEN COMPANY'S EXHIBIT.

The Anchor Woollen Company of Peterborough, make a very fine exhibit of Canadian tweeds, in Scotch and English TWEEK. Altogether there are some twenty-five pieces shown, being nearly the same exhibit which took second prize at the Industrial Fair held last month in Toronto. The finish on all these goods is very fine, and only the cheapest and coarsest wools are used. The Company have turned out this year [illegible] of goods has compelled [illegible] tarers to more than meet themselves in bringing their productions to perfection. Especially in the finish, was the difference between foreign and Canadian goods apparent, and it is pleasing to note the improvement that has taken place, in which we are glad to see that the Anchor Company have not been standing still, but advancing with the times, and occupying a front place among the woolen manufacturers of the country. The designs of the several pieces shown are very pretty, especially those in knotted yarn, one of the latest novelties now being introduced in Canadian manufactured goods. That we have such a manufactory amongst us, the people of Peterborough should feel proud. The present management are to be congratulated on the energy and perseverance which they have displayed in acquiring for their goods a provincial fame.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Haslan Fire Engine, a description of which we gave in the EXAMINER a few weeks ago, is on exhibition by Mr. H. W. Coz, who also shows two revolving grocer's stands.

Messrs. Carnegie & Urquhart display a selection of white brick and draining tile.

In canoes, J. S. Stephenson, of Ashburnham, shows one of his patent cedar rib canoes, and Richardson & Grylls, of Lakefield, a double hunting canoe.

(From the DAILY EXAMINER of Friday, Oct. 3.)

The Directors and management of the Peterborough Central Exhibition are to congratulated upon the success attending the Exhibition. While the entries may not, perhaps, bear comparison with former shows, yet the circumstances connected with this year's one, and which have been alluded to before, may largely be suspensible for this. In every other respect it was undoubtedly a success, especially so in a pecuniary point of view. During the three days the weather could not be more desirable, in fact everything tended towards a successful issue. The great crowd of visitors was, as expected, on the second day, although the attendance yesterday was very fair, it being estimated at from two to three thousand. Last evening the attendance at the shed was very limited, and the exhibition closed to the public at 10 o'clock. This morning the exhibits are being removed, and the grounds will shortly bear a deserted appearance. Everything has passed off very orderly and creditable to the large crowds assembled, and without any accident of account to notice. During the afternoon of yesterday the competition in carriage horses took place and resulted as follows:—For team not less than 15½ hands high, 1st, W. B. Kelly, Bridgenorth; 2nd, W. Westington; 3rd, James Gray.

For 15½ hands high and under, 1st, Alex. Elliott, Peterborough; 2nd, A. B. Stephenson, Cobourg; 3rd, P. J. Lightbourne.

Single Horse, 15½ hands high and over, 1st, Jas. A. Cathcart; 2nd, J. A. Galvin; 3rd, W. Sandercock.

Single Horse, 15½ hands high and under, 1st, M. B. Williams; 2nd, H. Read; 3rd, D. Ferguson.

Below we give a synopsis of the classes not yet noticed.

POULTRY.

The show of poultry was very good—the number of entries large and the birds of superior quality. Arrangements had been made for a large display in this class, and good accommodation accordingly provided.

For the best lot of poultry of any one variety, John McClelland carried off first prize with a fine collection of Buff Cochins. Comparing for this prize was a really splendid collection of White Brahma Chicks shown by Isaac Dormer.

In Brahmas, some very pretty birds were shown, the principal exhibitors being Messrs. McClelland, Dormer, B. Hall, M. Hall, and Hope.

In Brahmas, the several varieties were largely and well represented.

In the Silver Spangled, Porter, of Bowmanville, Baptie, of Cavan, and Graham, of Cavan, were the largest exhibitors. In Silver Pencilled, Jas. Saulter, of Peterborough, and Geo. Hope, of Yorkville, each exhibited fine specimens. In Golden Spangled, Messrs. Graham and Hope were the chief exhibitors.

In Plymouth Rocks the collection was very limited and not up to the other varieties.

In the different varieties of Bantams, an extensive exhibit was made, and the collection a really fine one.

In Pekin Ducks, Geo. Stothers carried off a first and second prize; and in Rouen Ducks, a handsome pair shown by James Saulter took first prize.

In Geese, H. Collins was the chief exhibitor, and in Turkeys, T. E. Bell.

A very choice and numerous collection of Pigeons was shown by Geo. Hope, and took first prize. They was very much admired by spectators. Andrew Wilson and T. E. Bell were also exhibitors in this class.

FRUITS.

In Fruits, the display, though not large, is excellent, and the varieties shown are of the finest qualities.

In apples the fruit growers of the County of Peterborough carry of nearly all the principal prizes. Conspicuous among the names of the exhibitors are those of Messrs. Geo. Fitzgerald, Jas. Campbell, Jas. Edwards, W. Collins, Geo. Hope, Hugh Nelson and Jas. Harper.

In Plums, James Wallis, Jas. Campbell and M. Porter, are the chief exhibitors.

In pears, R. Z. Rogers, exhibits fine samples of Flemish Beauties. They are really beauties, both in size and appearance. The other exhibitors are James Campbell and W. Mills.

In Grapes, a fine collection is shown by T. Beall, of Lindsay—the same which took first prize and bronze medal at Ottawa. James Gest also shows a fine collection of out-door grapes. In out-door grapes James Stevenson takes first prize.

All the exhibits in this class are really fine.

CANADIAN MINERALS.

Mr. H. T. Strickland, of Ashburnham, makes a very interesting exhibit of native minerals as well as a number of rich foreign specimens. In gold is shown, specimens from the Getting and other Marmora mines, both in the raw state and in the different processes of treatment. Also specimens from New Zealand and the Black Hills.

In silver, some interesting specimens from Silver Islet, Lake Super

PETERBOROUGH, OCTR 9, 1879.

Lindsay and its Railway Accommodation.

Only lately Lindsay papers and Lindsay people, joined by the cynical journals at Fenelon Falls and Bobcaygeon, affected to sneer at Peterborough for being "behind the age" in railway matters; and Lindsay was pointed to as a bright and shining light in the way of proper railway enterprise. Well, this kind of thing did not hurt Peterborough, and folks in this town couldn't see the sense of noticing it seriously. But now we see how the proud are cast down, and the high minded humbled in the dust. Lindsay is actually lamenting the disadvantages under which it labors in the matter of railway communication. The "railway magnates," so lately patted on the back as friends of Lindsay and ministers to its future greatness, are now accused of neglecting that town and "leaving it to luck," while other towns are provided for in preference. The magnates aforesaid are reminded in a melodramatic manner that it will not do now to repeat the policy that brought on more competition. It is indeed hard on Lindsay. But the severest shock to those who sneered at Peterborough, and made comparisons intended to be invidious to this town, have now to admit that Peterborough, "behind the age" in railway enterprise, is actually better off in respect of railway accommodation than is the enterprising and rocket-like Lindsay. Hear the Post:—

"Another matter requiring early attention is the passenger rates to Toronto. It is, we understand, 25c. more from Lindsay than from Peterborough. The latter is just now a prospective competing point in a way; Lindsay is not. Fifty cents a trip per passenger with a considerable shorter distance is not a killing matter but people naturally object to paying it under the circumstances."

The Quebec Dead-Lock.

THE situation in Quebec remains practically unchanged, though there are growing indications that Mr. Joly has the long end of the lever, "by a large majority." He has been holding meetings at different points, at which gatherings he and his fellow-ministers explain to the people their position toward them on the one hand, and the Legislative Council on the other. Thus far, no Legislative Councillor who voted to with-hold the supplies has accepted the invitation to attend these meetings, and explain why he did so. It turns out that Mr. Cheauveau has no followers in his desertion of the Premier, under whom he accepted office on the plain issue of popular rights as against Ministerial usurpation; and it is not likely now that the people will submit themselves to a usurpation worse than Ministerial, because more absurd. Indeed, Mr. Cheauveau now begins to see his mistake, and shows signs of retracing his steps. It is said, too, that Sir John Macdonald on his arrival home from England, expressed his disapprobation at the action of the Legislative Council, in refusing the supplies. He could not at least have shown his approval; and if he has, as asserted, condemned in plain terms the action of the Upper House in Quebec, there remains but little comfort for those Tory minds that expected so great party advantage from it. The plain disapproval evinced on all sides for their strange proceedure, may induce the Quebec Legislative Council to reconsider their refusal of the supplies. If not, Mr. Joly will secure an appeal to the people, in fairness to himself, the electors, and indeed to the Legislative Council as well. But probably that body does not want the exercise of fairness, being rather like the prisoner who, when told not to fear, as he would get justice from the Court, replied that it was just that which troubled him.

The Zulu King.

Cetewayo, the Zulu King, has been taken a prisoner to the Cape of Good Hope, and his territory has been divided among chiefs of tribes from which he and his father took it by conquest. This has the effect of pleasing the natives, who cling to the old tribal traditions, and may secure the British plans even against the attempts of a liberated Cetewayo. It is not probable that the British government would keep the brave Zulu king long a prisoner; if it could only be determined what other disposition could be made of him. Were there any guarantee that he would forbear to plot mischief in the territory so lately under his own iron rule he might be liberated at once. But what could he do, and cut himself entirely adrift from his condition as a [illegible] people to [illegible] or sink into utter contempt and oblivion. Hence, from [illegible] of policy as well as of prudence, it may be well to hold him in an honorable half-captivity [illegible] of war. Of course the Zulu chiefs hold the country subject to British rule; but such discipline is made as far as possible on [illegible] their tribal [illegible] condition of the country is [illegible] interference of one tribe with another.

Military Drill in Schools.

The Canada Gazette contains the following memo. in regard to military drill in schools:—"Memo.—If the university, college or school has adopted a special uniform to be worn by all students attending such university, college or school, such uniform, if suitable for use at military parades and exercises, will be accepted as the uniform of the company. For other companies the uniform need not be the same in all schools, but each member must wear that adopted for the company to which he belongs. This may be composed of a scarlet, blue, rifle green or gray tunic or Norfolk jacket, with blue, black, rifle green or gray trousers, and forage cap or shako, as may be preferred. Clothing of any pattern worn by cadets or soldiers in foreign countries will not be approved."

British Columbia.

BRITISH COLUMBIA is the "spoiled child" of the Canadian Confederation Things didn't go just as she wanted them, and she threatened to "run away from home" on the first of May. She didn't do it, however. But she was further cajoled by promises in relation to her much desired toy—a trans-continental railway—and flattered by sundry other attentions. As might have been expected she has again been disappointed, and again she threatens to cut her family connection. We're afraid she will again fail to carry out her threat. There are certain things worse than the loss of a Province to the Confederation; and one of them would be the fulfilment of the wild promises of politicians willing to say anything to secure place.

WHAT have Dominion Ministers, individually or collectively, to do with the revival of the lumber trade, anyway? The lumbermen can't see that the new tariff has done them anything but harm.

Lord Beaconsfield on Canada.

LORD BEACONSFIELD has been making a speech, in which he spoke of Canada in a very absurd way, giving as a basis for his grave nonsense "a very high authority." This is generally supposed to have been Sir John Macdonald, who has during his late visit to England, doubtless been indulging in his old propensity for humbugging, at the expense of the English Premier. Canada's prospects, though just now not over bright in themselves, will not become utterly black in comparison with other countries; and her hopes for the future are quite rosy enough without the necessity for lying about them. Sir John Macdonald when humbugging Lord Beaconsfield about the "fertile wilderness of the North West," was laying the foundation for future distrust of Canadian representations by the English Official mind; and that is a position in which no colony can afford to be placed. While the whole affair is decidedly funny as a joke on Beaconsfield, it may yet turn out a very serious business for Canada. The Asian Mystery can stand it much better than the Canadian Dominion.

Freeing the Slaves in Cuba.

THE Spanish Government having in contemplation a measure for the freeing of the slaves in Cuba, many of the planters in that Island, owners of slaves, have granted the latter their freedom, and bargained for their services for five years. This is an improvement on the method followed in the United States, of emancipating the negroes, and suddenly throwing them upon their own resources amid a population filled with old and deep-rooted prejudices against them as a race. The simple change from being slaves to becoming servants bound by agreement for a term will leave the emancipated ones the great advantage of following their usual work in their usual haunts, providing them with certain sustenance for five years, and, at the same time, yielding them all the benefits that flow from the knowledge that they are no longer slaves, but that they and their children are a free people, with rights and privileges equal to any other class of citizens. It only remains for them to commence the improvement of their new privileges, while quietly and securely enjoying their rights.

The Band Contest.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:—

DEAR SIR,—In your paper dated Sept. 25th, my attention is drawn to a paragraph which appeared in the Kingston Whig, in reference to the Band in Peterboro', who won first prize in Toronto, at the Amateur Band Competition, being Mr. Rackett's old band, and the selection "Ernani" contributed towards that result, being that which was recommended and selected by Mr. Rackett—this is contradicted by you, in such a way, that it is necessary for me to say something. I always have felt, and do feel, a great interest in anything connected with Peterboro', and was glad to think that in the year '77, Mr. J. Fraser, Sec. of the F. B. Band, Peterboro', could write to me as an interested party, asking me to recommend a prize selection for their Band. In answer, I recommended this selection "Ernani," and they, the F. B. S., sent me a cash order for the same, which I filled. In evidence of this—when my eldest son was in Peterboro' in August '78, Mr. Miller asked him (my son) to attend a rehearsal and conduct the selection, as he was not sure they were playing it right, this was the same copy I sold to the Band. It is far from my thoughts to detract from Mr. Miller any credit, at the same time, in whatever capacity the band of Peterboro' may be retained in connection with my name, the honor is certainly on the side of the band on having it so.

Yours truly,

A. H. RACKETT.

Kingston, Sept. 26, '79. B. M. 'A' B.

[In reference to the above we can only repeat what appeared in our last issue, that the selection "Ernani," arranged by Mr. Rackett, was discarded after a few practices by this band, and the "Diamond" published in Distin's Brass Band Journal taken up instead. Mr. [illegible] is invited in his statement that Mr. Miller, Band-Master of the [illegible] selected "Ernani" for him, but however when he reported that to who the same selection played by the band in Toronto. Mr. R. apparently is not cognizant of the fact that the band practised on another selection of the same name.—Ed. Ex.]

The Central Exhibition.

A HIGHLY SUCCESSFUL FAIR.

The success attending the Fair yesterday afternoon, evening and this morning, was far beyond the most sanguine expectations of its promoters. Besides the very large number coming in from various centres during the morning, the noon train was laden, the "King Fisher" also landed a large cargo of human freight and people from the immediate vicinity of the town arrived by different means of conveyance till the number of people in the town reached nearly 10,000. That the greater portion of these attended the Exhibition was manifest from the crowds in all parts of the grounds and buildings, passage through the greater portion thereof being almost impossible.

THE HORSE SHOW

was the great feature of the afternoon, and the most interest was centered near the ring. The exhibit in this department was far superior to any yet seen in the Midland counties, both as to numbers and quality of the stock shown. Competent judges affirm that several of the carriage horses shown were superior to those exhibited at Toronto. The greater portion of the afternoon was taken up with the exhibition of stallions and colts, but as the directors believed that many were anxious to see the carriage horses, it was wisely determined to bring them into the ring before the close of the afternoon. No prizes, however, were awarded—the final judgement being left over till this morning. In the both classes of carriage teams there were altogether seventeen entries; in single carriage horses, 20; and in saddle horses, 14 That the judges will have a difficult task to determine on the relative merits of those shown, there can be little doubt, as the animals generally are of superior appearance.

CATTLE.

The vicinity of the cattle sheds was also crowded, and during the afternoon the most of the prizes were awarded.

In Durhams, Mr. Pratt, of Cobourg, took the lead, and carried off the principal prizes. Besides him, Messrs. McKibbon, H. Collins, James Campbell and H. Bertram, each took prizes.

In Devons, Joseph Walton and Samuel Harper, of Hamilton Township, were the chief exhibitors.

In Ayrshires, T. Guy & Son, of Oshawa, exhibited a herd of fifteen, while J. Ludgate and Alex. Scott showed in lesser numbers.

In Grades, the entries were limited, Messrs. Jackson, Croft, A. Scott, and G. Lee being the exhibitors.

SHEEP.

In Leicesters, Albert Tamblyn, of Orono, is the principal exhibitor, having a flock of eighteen on the ground. G. Staples, of Manvers, T. & J. Graham, of Cavan, and Robert Vance, of Cavan, are also very large exhibitors, the last gentleman showing an aged ram that took third prize in Toronto, and a pair of ewe lambs that took second prize at the same place.

In South Devons, Joseph Walton, Jos. Redmond and James Campbell carried off the prizes.

In Cotswolds, the exhibit was but meagre, Messrs. Redmond and Staples being the only exhibitors.

SWINE.

In Improved Berkshire (small breed) Robt. Vance, of Cavan, took the lead in prizes. A ten months old Boar, entered in the aged class, took second prize, the same animal took second in Toronto.—The first prize in this class was awarded to a fine specimen belonging to W. J. Westington. Besides this Mr. Vance took the first prizes for young Boar and Sow, and third for aged Boar. Messrs. John Ludgate, Jos. Redmond, T. E. Bell, H. Davidson and D. E. Boulton, of Cobourg, also exhibited and carried off prizes.

CARRIAGE MAKERS' DISPLAY.

In this class Mr. T. E. Fitzgerald is the only exhibitor, and makes a display creditable to this long established and well known carriage works. The chief article in the exhibit is a handsome hearse ordered by Mr. A. Comstock, of this town, and certainly speaks well for the maker, being fully up to those manufactured in the cities. It has large full plate glass sides, oval ends, and is finished with the best English varnish, and has been nineteen months in painting. The drapery is of broadcloth, with gold fringe. A side bar Whitney spring buggy, ordered by R. Morrow, Esq., was much admired. This buggy was shown as it came from the blacksmiths, without paint or varnish. It is built of second growth American hickory, with fine Bessemer steel axles, and when completed is not to exceed 80 pounds in weight. There is also shown a single covered buggy, a two-seated carriage, two-blue oak carriage waggons,—one highly finished and the other in ordinary finish. Samples of the raw material in hubs, spokes and rims were also shown in profusion. The excellence of the work shown was manifest from the interest displayed in the exhibit and the number of orders taken during the day.

STUMP MACHINES.

Mr. John Moore, of Peterborough, has on exhibition one of Mason's stone and stump extractors.

Mr. Geo. Shields, of Lakefield, also exhibits one of his stone lifting machines.

SEWING MACHINES.

The several sewing machine agents of this district exhibit largely. The Wheeler & Wilson is represented by Mr. G. A. Mitchell; the Osborne "A" by Mr. B. Shortly; the Williams Singer and Royal by W. A. King, and the New York Singer by Messrs Brainer & Norris.

GRAINS, SEEDS, ROOTS, &c.

In grains and seeds the entries it is to be regretted are small in number, but the samples shown excellent, and much above the average of former years.

In roots and vegetables a splendid collection is shown.

PLANTS AND FLOWERS.

The plants and flowers occupy one-half of the south end of the shed, and are nicely arranged on a range of elevated shelves. The display is a fine one and highly creditable.

IN DAIRY PRODUCTS

the competition is keen, especially butter—there being sixteen entries for table butter, and 16 for that in tinnets or crocks. In firkin Butter, however, there are but five entries. In cheese the display is limited, as is also that of the other sections.

DOMESTIC MANUFACTURES.

The exhibit of domestic manufactures in this section of the shed is a fine one, and highly creditable, but what is shown is of excellent quality.

THE ASHBURY WOOLLEN COMPANY'S EXHIBIT.

The Ashbury Woollen Company of Peterborough, make a very fine exhibit of Cheviots, Tweeds, in Scotch and English Cloths. Altogether there are seventy-five pieces shown, being nearly the same exhibit which took second prize at the Industrial this fall but smooth in Toronto. The cloths on all three goods are very fine, and only the finest wool and machinery could produce such results. The [illegible] Company [illegible] the past few years [illegible] grade has completed [illegible] turers to more than start themselves in bringing their productions to perfection. Especially in the finish, was the difference between foreign and Canadian goods apparent, and it is pleasing to note the improvement that has taken place, in which we are glad to see that the Ashburn Company have not been standing still, but advancing with the times, and occupying a front place among the woollen manufacturers of the country. The designs of the several pieces shown are very pretty, especially those in knotted yarns, one of the latest novelties now being introduced in Canadian manufactured goods. That we have such a manufactory amongst us, the people of Peterborough should feel proud. The present management are to be congratulated on the energy and perseverance which they have displayed in acquiring for their goods a provincial fame.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Hanlan Fire Engine, a description of which we gave in the EXAMINER a few weeks ago, is on exhibition by Mr. H. W. Coss, who also shows two revolving grocer's stands.

Messrs. Carnegie & Urquhart display a selection of white brick and draining tile.

In canoes, J. S. Stephenson, of Ashburnham, shows one of his patent cedar rib canoes, and Richardson & Grylls, of Lakefield, a double hunting canoe.

(From the DAILY EXAMINER of Friday, Oct. 3.)

The Directors and management of the Peterborough Central Exhibition are to congratulated upon the success attending the Exhibition. While the entries may not, perhaps, bear comparison with former shows, yet the circumstances connected with this year's one, some of which have been alluded to before, may largely be responsible for this. In every other respect it was undoubtedly a success, especially so in a pecuniary point of view. During the three days the weather could not be more desirable, in fact everything tended towards a successful issue. The great crowd of visitors was, as expected, on the second day, although the attendance yesterday was very fair, it being estimated at from two to three thousand. Last evening the attendance at the shed was very limited, and the exhibition closed to the public at 10 o'clock. This morning the exhibits are being removed, and the grounds will shortly bear a deserted appearance. Everything has passed off very orderly and creditable to the large crowds assembled, and without any accident of account to notice. During the afternoon of yesterday the competition in carriage horses took place and resulted as follows:—For team not less than 15½ hands high, 1st, W. B. Kelly, Bridgenorth; 2nd, W. Westington; 3rd, James Gray.

For 15½ hands high and under, 1st, Alex. Elliott, Peterborough; 2nd, A. R. Stephenson, Cobourg; 3rd, P. J. Lightbourne.

Single Horse, 15½ hands high and over, 1st, Jas. A. Cathcart; 2nd, J. A. Galvin; 3rd, W. Sandercock.

Single Horse, 15½ hands high and under, 1st, M. B. Williams; 2nd, H. Read; 3rd, D. Ferguson.

Below we give a synopsis of the classes not yet noticed.

POULTRY.

The show of poultry was very good—the number of entries large and the birds of superior quality. Arrangements had been made for a large display in this class, and good accommodation accordingly provided.

For the best lot of poultry of any one variety, John McClelland carried off first prize with a fine collection of Buff Cochins. Competing for this prize was a really splendid collection of White Brahma Chicks shown by Isaac Dorner.

In Brahmas, some very pretty birds were shown, the principal exhibitors being Messrs. McClelland, Dorner, R. Hall, M. Hall, and Hope.

In Brahmas, the several varieties were largely and well represented.

In the Silver Spangled, Porter, of Bowmanville, Baptie, of Cavan, and Graham, of Cavan, were the largest exhibitors. In Silver Pencilled, Jas. Saulter, of Peterborough, and Geo. Hope, of Yorkville, each exhibited fine specimens. In Golden Spangled, Messrs. Graham and Hope were the chief exhibitors.

In Plymouth Rocks the collection was very limited and not up to the other varieties.

In the different varieties of Bantams, an extensive exhibit was made, and the collection a really fine one.

In Pekin Ducks, Geo. Stethem carried off a first and second prize; and in Rouen Ducks, a handsome pair shown by James Saulter took first prize.

In Geese, H. Collins was the chief exhibitor, and in Turkeys, T. E. Bell.

A very choice and numerous collection of Pigeons was shown by Geo. Hope, and took first prize. They was very much admired by spectators. Andrew Wilson and T. E. Bell were also exhibitors in this class.

FRUITS.

In Fruits, the display, though not large, is excellent, and the varieties shown are of the finest qualities.

In apples the fruit growers of the County of Peterborough carry of nearly all the principal prizes. Conspicuous among the names of the exhibitors are those of Messrs. Geo. Fitzgerald, Jas. Campbell, Jas. Edwards, W. Collins, Geo. Hope, Hugh Nelson and Jas. Harper.

In Plums, James Wallis, Jas. Campbell and M. Porter, are the chief exhibitors.

In pears, R. Z. Rogers, exhibits fine samples of Flemish Beauties. They are really beauties, both in size and appearance. The other exhibitors are James Campbell and W. Mills.

In Grapes, a fine collection is shown by T. Beall, of Lindsay—the name which took first prize and bronze medal at Ottawa. James Best also shows

PETERBOROUGH, OCTR 9, 1879.

POLICE REFORM.

The prevalence of crime, and the difficulty of detecting and punishing criminals in the rural districts has been lately thrusting before the public the necessity for some change in our system of police to meet the evident requirements of the case. To say nothing of the many murders that have of late years been perpetrated in country parts, and the delay, difficulty and dissatisfaction that has frequently occurred in working up the cases, we may rest our argument on crimes of lesser degree. In nearly all parts of the Province robberies from houses have been quite the commen thing for months past, and in very few instances have the perpetrators been discovered. Highway robberies too, have lately been frequent, and the foot-pads seem to carry on their operations with perfect impunity, so far as arrest and punishment are concerned. Tramps, too, scour the country in all directions, among peaceable people and commit depredations, none molesting them or making them afraid. Now and then we hear of the escape of prisoners from County gaols, and their getting completely away. Instance the case of the two who nearly killed the Turnkey at Napanee, and are said to have afterwards worked at farm labor in this County, then made for Port Hope, thence to Charlotte, and are now reported as being in the far western portion of uncle Sam's domains. Such things should not be. Criminals should not be able to pass through the country undetected, robbers and thieves should not escape prompt punishment, and tramps should not infest highways and by-ways as they do at the present time. But how prevent them?

The proper way to find a remedy for any evil is to try and discover the cause. Our first care then is to find, if possible, why so many crimes are perpetrated throughout the country without the discovery of the perpetrators. The fault principally, if not wholly, lies in the public system—or rather, want of system,—outside the cities and perhaps some of the larger towns. Only where a municipality is large enough in population and therefore rich enough to pay a pretty extensive police force, is there anything like prompt and efficient police work done. In cities and the more compactly built towns the area is so small and the force of constables so large as to give a general surveillance to all parts of the municipality. How different in smaller towns, villages and rural municipalities? In which one or two constables are supposed to keep watch over miles of territory. Like other officers in such municipalities these men get little or no salary as constables, but depend largely on fees to reward them for official activity. Most of them pursue some other avocation to provide sustenance for themselves and their families, and none of them like to leave their regular work to watch suspicious characters, the actions of whom an efficient peace officer should be well acquainted with. Most crimes are not done directly under the nose of a constable, and in the majority of instances, especially in rural parts, it is a long time before a constable is acquainted with the fact that a crime has been perpetrated. Even then he is hedged about with difficulties, for without a warrant from a magistrate his search for an offender if fruitless, is a loss to himself, or if he make a mistake by arresting the wrong man he gets into trouble himself. Such considerations as these render constables chary of acting without some authority other than their own official position. The procuring of such authority, even in the best of cases causes further delay, during which an offender has a chance to leave the neighborhood, and probably to get beyond the limits of the primary jurisdiction. Descriptions of criminals, unless of notorious scoundrels for whose capture a reward is offered, are, we are sorry to say, but little heeded by constables in localities other than that in which a crime has been perpetrated. They are beyond the influence of local interest in the affair, and indeed they have no incentive to engage in a hunt for a fugitive who may or may not be in their locality. In too many instances the constables are actually discouraged from making arrests on suspicion lest they bring expenses on the municipality. This will account for the immunity from molestation enjoyed by tramps. If they are at all troubled it is only that they may be sent away, as their arrest and imprisonment would entail a certain amount of expenditure on the county. This seems to be more considered by magistrates and others in authority than are the safety of property and life. In fact the whole system is at fault, and a reformation is urgently required.

It is doubtful if any adequate remedy can be found while the police of the country are left to the governance of the municipalities. Even in the cities the operations of the constabulary are hindered by a higher authority closely connected with Councillors and the prerogative votes at municipal elections. What is needed then is the formation of a government police force, paid to perform certain well-defined duties, and on the members of which will devolve the business of arresting not only those who actually commit crimes, but also of looking after and obtaining a knowledge of all those who prowl about the country without any steady occupation. Such a force would be ready at all times, and have an intelligent idea of where to look for criminals; as acting in concert from one end of the country to the other they would have reports of persons likely to have been concerned in any offence, and their whereabouts before the fact, with personal description and other particulars. They would also act in concert in the pursuit and arrest of suspected parties, and would not be long in capturing the right parties, especially were the force mounted, as would be advisable. The cost of such a police force is of course the first consideration, after that of the safety of the life and property of Her Majesty's liege subjects in the Dominion. The expenses, of course, would be defrayed by general tax, like those of all other set of departmental officers. The municipal constabulary being done away with each County could afford something toward the support of a Government police force. Then much Government work now performed by distinct sets of officials could be done by such police; as, for instance, inspection of licenses, weights and measures, and possibly the work of revenue officers, and that of coroners. In view of the good that would be affected by such a force as that proposed we do not know but it would be advisable, rather than not have it, to devote to its establishment and support the amount now voted as militia estimates; for however proud we may be of our volunteer force, it must be admitted that it is not nearly so necessary nor can it be so efficient as would a properly trained and always active mounted police.

This subject is of such importance that we should like vastly to hear the opinions of some of the bigger guns of the journalistic world and the sphere political upon it. Of one thing we are certain our view of it will bear the liveliest and best discussion.

Editorial Notes.

The Exchange Bank will resume business on Nov. 3rd.

Trouble seems to be brewing in Ireland over the rent question; and agrarian outrages loom up.

The boot and shoe manufacturers in Montreal have raised the price of their goods by 20 to 25 per cent. So much for the operations of the N. P.

The news that the shareholders of the Great Western Railway have resolved not to amalgamate with the Grand Trunk will be received with pleasure in Canada.

The English Agricultural Commissioners had quite a reception in Winnipeg, where a banquet was given them. They expressed their favorable impressions of the wheat-producing resources of the Red River valley.

The Afghan campaign still drags on amid formidable difficulties to the British troops; but they all must be overcome. There is much reason to suspect that Yakoob Khan has not been so faithful to the British cause as he pretends.

The number of Nova Scotians leaving their homes to seek employment in the United States is unprecedentedly large. This, taken with the large decrease in the value of property in Halifax, is a sad comment on the Macdonald-Tupper-Tilley policy of Canada for the Canadians.

The rumored discrepancy between the crowds in the grounds and the money receipts at the Ottawa show enforces the necessity for a more business-like method of attending to the financial department of a Fair. Every man is honest, no doubt, but most people would prefer that there should be an efficient check.

Ottawa votes on the Toronto and Ottawa Railway By-law on the 8th inst., and the favour with which it is received gives promise that the money asked will be granted by a handsome majority of votes. The townships in Lennark are also moving toward the voting of bonuses to the project.

The dry goods merchants are grumbling very much at the new regulations respecting the duties on wincys. The prevailing opinion among wholesale men is without respect to politics, that the tariff is a sorry muddle in so far as it relates to the importation of dry goods, and with a strange unanimity all join in condemning the appointment of Mr. Fraser to the position of dry goods valuator as that of a most unfit and incompetent man. It is understood that before long, strong pressure will be brought to bear on the Government to remove him to some other position.

The Bobcaygeon Independent wants the Senate abolished right away. There are very few things the Independent doesn't cry out for once in a while. But the Senate being abolished how would the single Chamber and the Governor-General get along without liability to a rattling collision at almost any time. We should like a rational discussion of Senate reform or abolition if that be advisable; but we decidedly object to revolution without remedy. The Independent would do well to remember, and to impress upon its talented, but excitable, Smiff, the importance of Carlylis advice to "cease shrieking and begin considering." "Would doubtless prove a refreshing change.

The Quebec Chronicle is showing from the Confederation debates what views were held by Sir John Macdonald in 1865 on the probabilities of a deadlock in the Local Legislatures. Sir John then felt assured that the Upper House would never set itself in opposition to the wishes of the people, because its members will be "men of the people and from the people." Sir Antoine Dorion's prediction when speaking in reply is a striking one in the light of present events.

How long will the system work without producing a collision between the two branches of the Legislature? I venture to prophesy that before a very short time has elapsed a deadlock will arise, and such an excitement be created as has never yet been seen in this country. The composition of the Legislative Council becomes of more importance when we consider that the Governors of the Local Legislatures are to be appointed by the general Government, as well as the Legislative Council. Their appointment is to be for five years, and they are not to be removed without cause. I will venture upon another prediction, and say we shall find there will be no such thing as responsible Government attached to local legislation.

But the other day the people of Mitchell lamented over the failure, with $70,000 liabilities, of the A. M. Gibson Manufacturing Company of that town. The concern started on the strength of a huge bonus ($10,000 we believe), voted some three years ago, by the verdant townspeople, with a great flourish of trumpets. The factory was not a necessity; it was examined on the hot-house principle; and when the bonus gave out down it came, and the people of Mitchell are left to mourn over their folly, but of a substantial kind of which many similar examples could be cited in other parts of the Province. That its predictions are not much in request may be gathered from the fact that the stock in the Company's warehouses at Toronto, sold last week, only realized 25 cents on the dollar! while one machine, valued at $1,100, put up at auction fetched the miserable pittance of $70!

South Monaghan Agricultural Society's Show.

Fine Weather and a Moderate Attendance.—A falling off in Many Departments.—The Prize List.

(By our own Reporter.)

On Tuesday last, the South Monaghan Agricultural Society held their 15th annual exhibition, in the Village of Centreville, and, taking everything into consideration, it may be considered a success. The weather was fine throughout,—a matter on which always hangs the success or failure of an agricultural show, for if the weather turns out inclement, no matter how great the exhibit may be, the exchequer of the Society must suffer. The day would not have been finer, and this, with the attractions, called out a very good attendance of the well-to-do, neatly dressed and contented farmers, together with their wives, sons, daughters, sisters, cousins and aunts, of that wealthy neighborhood, besides a number from the adjoining Townships. The village presented quite a lively appearance, the sides of the road being lined with teams. The grounds were well patronized, but the number of exhibits fell short of last year by about two hundred. The display of grain and seeds was fully up to that of last year. The shed containing the articles of domestic manufacture, fruit, dairy produce and other articles is entirely inadequate to the annual requirements of the show, and people who desire to see these exhibits are squeezed and jostled to such a degree as to test their good humor to the uttermost. The ladies' work, although not up to previous years as regards the number of articles exhibited, was well up to the standard of former years, and reflected much credit on the fair maids of South Monaghan, whose handiwork it was. The wax work and embroidery were good. The display of butter, home-made bread, &c., was excellent, and must have given the judges no little trouble to decide concerning their relative merits. The show of fruit was also good, and in the building occupied by roots there was a good exhibit. The stock, with the exception of horses, was not—in our opinion—up to that seen in former years; but there was, nevertheless, a large number of excellent cattle, pigs and sheep presented; and the display of poultry was fair. The stock and implements was exhibited in a field in the rear of the general store of Messrs. Fair & Tate. The greatest interest centred in the horse ring, and not only farmers, but their wives and daughters, appeared to select favorites while the judges were determining which animal possessed the best general appearance coupled with soundness of wied and limb. The show of implements was not large. Messrs. Whyte & Co., of Peterborough, had on exhibition an assortment of their first prize ploughs; and the Fair Manufacturing Company, of Millbrook, were represented with a couple of reaping machines. It would, we think, expedite matters very much as it has shown if all entries were made the day before, and thus avoid confusion and delay on the day of the exhibition. The following are names of those who were successful in obtaining prizes:—

The Hanlan-Courtney Race.

The excitement over the coming race is increasing daily. The hotels at Jamestown, N.Y., are arranging with private houses for rooms. Courtney is much pleased with his new paper boat, made in Troy. He does not seem to like company, and keeps at a distance from all boats. Hanlan is quite the opposite. Their presence on the lake attracts large crowds daily.

The West Winchester Murder.

THE WIFE OF THE VICTIM.

OTTAWA, Oct. 3.—It was currently reported in Metcalfe yesterday that the mother of the murderer Clark Brown had attempted to take her own life at West Winchester. Much indignation is undoubtedly manifested against this woman in connection with this recent horrible murder, many residing in the locality openly expressing their belief that the worst has not see the light of day. If all they say be true a chapter in crime is soon likely to be written that will be without a parallel in Canadian criminal history.

BARLEY RECEIPTS.

The receipts of barley here on Saturday covered 14,000 bushels, and prices ranged from 55 to 63 cents. This is the largest delivery of barley ever known here. The new mode of paying according to the weight per bushel is working very satisfactorily. The barley on the whole is very good, an occasional load weighing as much as 52 pounds per bushel. One of our buyers has already sold 100,000 bushels.

The Montreal Orange Case.

The Orange case, Grant v. Beaudry, came before Mr Justice Mackay in the Superior Court, Montreal, on Wednesday morning. The action is taken by Mr. David Grant, Grand Master of the Orange Order in Quebec, against ex-Mayor Beaudry for $10,000 for illegal arrest on the 12th of July, 1878. Mr. Doutre opened the case and the complaint of the plaintiff setting forth the grievances and distresses to which he was put on the 12th of July, 1878, and subsequently thereto of a certain false arrest and diverse acts of injustice committed at the instance and with the consent of the Hon. J. L. Beaudry, then Mayor of Montreal, and for which the plaintiff claims damages to the amount of $10,000. The complaint occupied about twenty minutes in the reading. It may be termed a complete history of the Orange case, commencing with the death of Hackett, in 1878, until the time of the discharge of the plaintiff, with others, at the recent trial, in which the plaintiff, with others, was charged with belonging to an illegal Society, and of the establishment of which there was no evidence to sustain. A number of witnesses were examined, among others Mr. Wm. Johnson, a district officer in the Orange Order, and Messrs. A. Allen and F. Hamilton. The examination chiefly turned upon the character of the Orange Constitution as rendering it a secret society.

The suit is defended on the ground that Mr. Beaudry, in making the arrest, only exercised a public right which was vested in him in his official capacity as Mayor.

The case is now under consideration.

RICE LAKE ITEMS.

From our own Correspondent.

—The Indians are busy harvesting the wild rice. The crop this year is a very good one.

—Fall ducks are beginning to come in, we noticed several large flocks lately.

—Farmers are getting excited over the price of grain which has an upward tendency, and are sending their orders to the front for bars so as to forward before navigation closes.

There is another single scull race this fall. Mr. Pattin, of Harwood, has sent a challenge to Mr. Griffin of Bewdly, to row him for the champion flag and twenty five dollars. Griffith's reply is anxiously looked for.

Picnics are about over for the season. The last being Mr. McClelland's school picnic from Fenella, and Mr. Heaslip's from Baillieboro, both of which went by steamer Fairy. They seemed to enjoy themselves, notwithstanding the cool weather.

The lake is still falling, the water being lower now than at any time last year. Mr. Edington of the Fairy informs us that if it falls much lower the Fairy will not be able to make her trips to Keene, it being very dangerous now on account of the great number of sunken logs in the river.

Testimonial from Capt. Joshua Harper.

SACKVILLE, N. B., Feb. 13, 1877.

J. H. ROBINSON, Esq., St. John, N. B.

Dear Sir:—Early in October last I took a severe cold which settled on my lungs. After having a bad cough for about six weeks, I had a severe attack of bleeding from the lungs, while on a voyage from Queenstown to Dover. I had daily spells of bleeding for some days, until I lost about two gallons of blood, and was so weak as to be scarcely able to stand. I put back to Queenstown, where I received such medical assistance as enabled me to get home.

I saw an advertisement of your Phosphorized Cod Liver Oil Emulsion in a paper. I immediately sent and got a half dozen bottles, after taking which I feel myself a well man again. My weight which was reduced to 120 pounds, is now up to my usual standard of 152 pounds. Seeing what it has done for me, I can confidently recommend it to others afflicted with lung disease.

Yours very truly,

(Signed.) JOSHUA HARPER,
of the barque "Mary Lowerison."

Robinson's Phosphorized Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Lacto-Phosphate of Lime is prepared solely by J. H. Robinson, Pharmaceutical Chemist, St. John, N. B., for sale by Druggists and General Dealers. Price $1.00 per bottle; six bottles for $5.00 41-2ins.

HAGYARD'S PECTORAL BALSAM is composed of the most healing balsams and gums. The Balsams, which enter into its composition, were used by the natives when America was first discovered, and are combined with other vegetable tonics, so blended together, that it is a specific for all affections of the throat and lungs. Thousands of bottles are used annually, and it is considered one of the most valuable preparations of the day. 41-2ins.

FENELLA.

(From our own Correspondent.

EXCITEMENT.—There has been considerable excitement around Fenella, caused by the elopement of an Indian named Black, with a young girl named Tailor, aged 16, of respectable parents, with whom it is a serious trouble. The girl left her home about a week ago, proceeded in company with Black to Orangeblifford, where the happy couple were married, just before the arrival of a neighbor and the girl's mother. They were taken at once and brought home and he lodged in Cobourg gaol to await a trial.

ACCIDENT.—On Saturday, 4th instant, while Mr. Thos Isaac was taking a load of barley into Cobourg, and when very near the town, while saving his team so as to have a position a little more forward at the Stone-House, he was crowded off the street and his load upset into a ditch, burying him underneath. The others in his company went to his rescue and found him seriously hurt. He is recovering under treatment of Dr. Waters.

Improving Navigation.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER :—

SIR,—Some time ago there was a petition in circulation here for the purpose of asking our enterprising N. P. Government to have the navigation of the Trent waters made passable. Why is this not done? Surely the limited amount of money that this would require might be expended on this the most beautiful inland water communication in the Dominion,—more particularly as any outlay on these waters will go so much towards the completion of the Trent Valley Canal. Now, Mr. Editor, why is all this fine weather allowed to pass over without some steps being taken to carry out the prayer of the petitioners? Is our N. P. Government fallen back to their old fossil ways? or has the superintendent of those works gone to sleep? or is there such an officer? or is he only a myth that looms up on the pay-list semi-annually? It is really a disgrace that, after our anxiously waiting for years to get the Grand Junction R.R. through, as soon as it arrives one of its main feeders is cut off by the neglect of the Department whose business it is to see navigation kept in proper shape. Missing the steamer "Golden Eye's" welcome whistle, on enquiry I was informed she was unable to leave Peterborough, as she could not get over the "Yankee Bonnet," and if she did she could not get within a mile of here. Why is this allowed? Won't your people help the enterprising proprietor of these boats through? or is the Government down on him because he was not successful in carrying their standard last June?

HASTINGS.

October 4, 1879.

LAKEFIELD.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER.

DEAR SIR,—In your issue of Sept. 25th, I find the following from your Lakefield correspondent:—

"Some discussion took place in reference to the removal of the crossing opposite Mr. J. Griffin's, which was finally decided on, and the Road Inspector instructed to remove it at once:—[The above is an contemptible piece of spite as has ever been sanctioned by a corporate body, and I only hope our ratepayers will remember it next January, and that it will be well ventilated through the press in the meantime."]

Now, sir, I am happy to inform you that the above is regarded up here as a piece of very strong talking. But that is not its worst feature, there is not a word of truth in it, so far as the imputation is concerned. In the first place, I observe that your correspondent is very careful to withhold all the circumstances in connection with this "crossing," and in the second place, he fails to produce the slightest tittle of evidence in support of his fierce charge. The gentleman evidently believes in bold assertion. I cannot help but think he wrote from high latitudes, perhaps about the elevation of a hay loft. Having said so much, I might here close, but for the prayer of your correspondent to have the matter ventilated, and being of an obliging turn of mind, with your permission, Mr. Editor, I will endeavor to answer the gentleman's petition, as no other person seems to have thought it worth their while to do so. The facts are simply these:—Last year Mr. Griffin (for the first time) managed to secure his election to the Council, and also succeeded in inducing that body to assist him in placing a private crossing to his residence, whilst there was no public crossing at the intersection of Albert and Regent streets, just the breadth of Mr. Griffin's house eastward. Now, sir, although this was one of those little dirty tricks that degrades every department of public life from the highest to the lowest, it did not create the least surprise, as not a soul in Lakefield ever expected Mr. Griffin to signalize his reign in any more respectable way. The council have now determined to remove the position of this private crossing from the west end of Mr. Griffin's house to the east end, where it will be a public crossing, just where it should have been put in the first place, and where it will accommodate ex-councillor Griffin as well as it does now. And this, Mr. Editor, is what your correspondent has waxed wroth over.

FROM THAT OLD AND WELL-KNOWN CITIZEN, George G. Sickles, Esq., father of Major General Sickles, U. S. A., late Plenipotentiary to the court of Spain.

I have resided for the last seventy-five years in the city of New York, and during that time have seen and tried a great variety of remedies. Of all that I have met, Giles' Liniment Iodide Ammonia excells. Have not only used it myself, but a great many with whom I am acquainted speak so highly of it in headache, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatism, pains in the shoulder, back and loins. It is equally serviceable in the stables. I therefore pronounce it the best combination I know of

The woman Susan Kennedy, found guilty of the brutal murder of Mary Gallagher in Montreal a few months ago by chopping off her head, was last Saturday sentenced by Judge Monk to be hanged on the 5th of December. The City Recorder is firm in the conviction that the woman is insane, and steps will be taken to invoke the Executive clemency.

THANKS.

Our Sale during the Exhibition was a great success. Never in the history of Peterborough were so many customers seen in any store at one time, as were crowded at our store all day Thursday, the 2nd inst. Although we placed on an extra staff of salesmen, still we were unable to attend to over three-fourths of the people, and in consideration of this, we have concluded to keep the following lot open for two weeks, in order that every customer may be supplied. To those who were unable to get waited on during Thursday, we have an opportunity of saying Thank You, and the following articles are just a sheet thes not up for the occasion, but Good Goods, at Low prices, as will be seen on inspection:—

An Honest Medicine Free of Charge.

Of all medicines advertised to cure any affection of the Throat, Chest or Lungs, we know of none we can recommend with such confidence as Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Hoarseness, Tickling in the Throat, and all Throat Affections. The medicine does positively cure, and those who try it once are our friends. In many cases one dose will relieve. In every case a single bottle will be found to do much good. Many have been changed by its use from chronic invalids to healthy people. We say by all means give it a trial. Trial bottles free. Regular size $1.00. For sale by T. RYDER, successor to W. LAMB & CO.

Hunted Will Out.

A few years ago "Allpen's Flower" was discovered to be a certain cure for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaints. A few thin Dyspeptics made known to their friends how easily and quickly they had been cured by its use. The great merits of Gamer's Avenue Flowers became heralded through the country by one sufferer telling another, and the sale of Allpen's Flower became immense. Druggists in every town in Canada and the United States are selling it. No person suffering from fever, Ague, Bad Stomach, Constipation, Palpitation of the Heart, Dyspepsia, Low spirits, etc., can take three doses without relief. Go to your Druggist and get a bottle for 75 cents and try it. Sample bottles 10 cents.

BIRTHS.

MENZIES.—In Peterborough, on the 3rd instant, the wife of W. Hall Menzies, Sheriff's Office, of a daughter.

DIED.

MADILL.—At Smith, on the 2nd instant, Annah, wife of Mr. Robert Madill, aged 41 years.

MARRIED.

McDONNELL—FOSTER.—At Asburn, the residence of Mrs. Robert Foster, by Rev. Father Lennon, Mr. Thomas McDonnell, of Peterboro', to Miss Mary Foster, of Asburn. Also, at the same time and place, Mr. Thomas Foster, of Peterboro', to Miss Margaret Foster, of Asburn.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, OCT'R 9, 1879.

Lumbering.—Mr. T. Cavanah last week sent a large number of men off to Belle Ewart, for lumbering operations in that vicinity.

Prize Lists.—We have supplied our readers with a supplement containing a full list of the prizes awarded at the Central Fair with to-day's issue.

Our Daily.—Our Daily has been pronounced by advertisers to be the best medium for advertising ever offered during an Exhibition here. It was on time, looked for and read.

Dry Goods.—It will require a good deal of search to find a dry goods store where better satisfaction is given to customers than at Messrs. Hackett & Shirley's.—Call around there.

Fine Weather.—We are now getting Vennor's "fine spell," a few weeks of such fine weather as this will be thankfully received, and will have a tendency to restore the Prophet to public favor.

Bazaar.—The Bazaar held in the Murray Street Bible Christian Church, on Wednesday and Thursday of last week, was very successful. Those who patronized it speak highly of the courtesy extended to all visitors.

Improvements.—The new board fence lately placed around Dr. Burnham, Sr's., property on George and London streets, and noticed in the Daily Review at the time, has lately received a coat of red paint. Review, why don't you notice?

Collision.—On Thursday night last, as a buggy and waggon were passing each other at the corner of George and Hunter streets, the front wheels of both vehicles came together, two or three spokes were broken in the wheel of the buggy.

Brahma Chickens.—A coop of this year's chickens, of the light brahma variety, exhibited by Mr. Isaac Dormer, of Ashburnham, attracted great admiration, on account of their great size, many people mistaking them for last year's birds. They were awarded a prize.

Medical Council.—The Medical Association of the Newcastle and Trent District, met on Wednesday at Colborne, with Dr. Herriman presiding. A considerable amount of important business affecting the interests of the medical community was transacted. The next meeting of the Council will be held at Port Hope.

Accident at the Fair.—On Thursday last, about half-past five o'clock, while the horses were being shown, a man riding on horseback, came into collision with a buggy. He was thrown from the horse and the buggy upset, breaking off two of the wheels. Fortunately none of the parties were seriously injured.

First Prize.—Peterborough has carried off the first prize for carriage horses for three consecutive years. This year the handsome bay team, the property of Mr. A. Elliott, of the firm of Rush & Elliott, carried off the honors. The grey team of Mr. E. Phelan brought the prize to Peterborough last year from Cobourg.

The Golden Rest.—Ever attentive to the wants and requirements of his customers, Mr. Samuel White has this season made special efforts to secure one of the best stocks of fall and winter boots and shoes shown by him. The stock being well assorted and embracing every line, those needing a comfortable and durable article should visit his establishment.

"No Bouquets."—The Lindsay Post of Friday last, contains the following:—

"The DAILY EXAMINER appeared on the streets for the first time. It was a bright, neat little quarto-royal sheet, full of news of the day and exhibition "ads." Its general appearance was creditable to the enterprise of the genial—and handsome—young editor and proprietor, Mr. J. R. Stratton.

"No Bouquets 'please.

Rifle Association.—On Monday evening last at a meeting of the Peterborough Rifle Association it was decided to hold the annual matches on Monday and Tuesday, October 20th and 21st. A committee were appointed to make the necessary arrangements. Practice commences at once, and a marker will be at the butts to-day, Saturday and each day next week.

Sale of Tickets.—The arrangements made by the managing Committee with Wilson and Davis for the sale of tickets for the fair ground, gave general satisfaction to the public. Ticket selling at Exhibitions of this kind is no small task, and to give satisfaction is a high recommendation for civility, courtesy, and business capacity.

Fall Boots and Shoes.—During the past few days Mr. W. J. Larmour has been receiving large additions to his stock of boots and shoes for the fall trade, which is now very complete. Especially in the finer lines he is showing some very superior articles which have been purchased on very advantageous terms, and will be sold at prices that must commend the goods.

The Marrie Cup.—The challenge cup, won at Barrie by the Peterborough four-oared crew, was on exhibition at the Fair, near Mr. Little's fine display of portraits, on each side of the cup, large photographs, in different attitudes, of the crew were placed, and the whole decorated with flags. A card in front contained the names of the crew, and date and place where they won the cup.

The Kennedys at the Cape.—The Kennedy family of Scottish vocalists, who will be remembered by many in this town, had a pleasant and successful tour through South Africa. Wherever they appeared crowded and enthusiastic audiences greeted them. They were to leave Cape Town on the 8th ult., for Great Britain, and intend starting on a tour through India about the middle of October.

A Man Without an Advertisement.—Talk about a woman without a baby, a man without a wife, a ship without a rudder. What is the look of them individuals or things without an advertisement? He is a helpless cuss, a "goner in the community. Talk of being successful in business. You might as well talk of ascending to the moon on a greased moon-beam. People point at him in the street and say, "Poor Cassius hath a lean and hungry look." It may, however, be consoling to him to reflect that when he dies he will be advertised.

The Belle of the Fair.—There were several brides on the fair ground, on Thursday; but the belle of them all was one Miss Manvers, so at least our reporter was informed. She was a fair country flower, dressed in blue satin splashed with spangles, or flowers, and pink and yellow ribbons for decorative purposes, with a duck of a bonnet on her head, and a young man on her arm—no! there's wrong; she was charming so dashily to the young man's arm. If this fair one was not the belle of the Central Fair, she was at least monopolized the bulk of public attention, as the fellow went around the grounds a portion of the time chewing away at a chunk of raw turnip.

Hymeneal.—The Lindsay Post says:—"in another column will be found the announcement of a wedding ceremony at "Asburn," near Peterborough, the residence of the Hon. Robt. Hamilton, that will be read with pleasant interest by a large circle of the friends and acquaintances of the happy couple—Mr. Wm. McDonnell, jr., of Lindsay, and Miss Fortye, a young lady of Peterborough, known to many in this town. The families brought together over fifty friends and relatives, and pleasant "Asburn" was the scene of fitting festivities. The traditional slippers were thrown after the happy couple as they left on their wedding tour. In connexion with many Lindsay friends we extend congratulations to Mr. McDonnell, and wish him and his bride many long years of happiness and prosperity."

The kidneys are subject to a variety of dangerous and painful diseases arising from causes unknown. By the use of Hop Bitters you receive a remedy and UVA URSI, those celebrated kidney remedies, Buchu & Juniper, in a pleasant, tasteful combination, and not a worthless drug or poison. Hop Bitters is the only medicine in which you can rely in case of kidney disease. Try it. Sold by druggists. Send for circular to the sole proprietors, HOP BITTERS MANUFACTURING CO., Rochester, N.Y. 47-6mos Lecture.—Mr. W. Aldridge returned on Wednesday last from the old country, where he had gone to visit his friends. The passage home was somewhat severe on him, but he is rapidly recovering.

Shipments of Flour.—The shipping of flour from Peterborough during the past few weeks has received very large proportions, the average shipments from each of the five mills being 600 barrels per week.

"Sam Williams."—We understand a petition is now being circulated for signatures, asking for the release of Sam. Williams, who is in Penitentiary serving out a sentence for burglaries committed in this town some two years ago.

"The Bright House."—This is the name of a new store opened out this week in Lundy's block, by Mr. Thomas E. Pope, with an extensive bankrupt stock of dry goods, groceries, boots, shoes, etc. Read his advertisement in another column.

Lacrosse.—A general meeting of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club will be held on Friday evening next, in the Chemic House. It is earnestly desired that a large meeting of members should be convened, as business of more than usual importance will be produced.

Telegraphic Rates.—The Montreal and Dominion Telegraph companies have reduced their rates to twenty cents for a message of ten words. The reduction will no doubt lead to a very material increase in the business of both companies.

Masquerading.—The gentlemen (?) who lately has several times disguised himself in female apparel, and who promenades the streets flirting with "Innocence" and others, was out again Wednesday night last. He had better beware as he is known to the police, and is liable, if convicted, to a heavy penalty.

Prospectus.—The Standard is the name of a new patron for public favor in the town of Kinmrdine, County Bruce. It will support the present Dominion Government. It is a thirty-two column royal sheet, neatly got up, newsy and well printed. Mortimer Bros. are the publishers.

Increased Traffic.—The freight traffic on the Midland Railway is increasing very rapidly, and it is with difficulty the Company are able to provide sufficient cars for transport of grain, flour and lumber. The earnings of the road last week are said to exceed those of any previous week.

Dupree & Benedict's Minstrels.—The advance agent of the famous Dupree & Benedict Minstrel Company was in town yesterday arranging the preliminaries for an entertainment to be given by this Company about the end of the month. This Company is acknowledged the best minstrel organization travelling, and we feel sure they will be greeted with a large audience in Peterborough.

Something New.—There is now on view in the windows of T. & W. McKee's furniture warerooms, a handsome upholstered parlor suite, in raw silk black ground and gold flower—with ruffle of blue silk. The whole of the work, from the manufacture of the frames up, is done on the premises, and reflects much credit on the enterprise of the new firm. With such an establishment in town there is little necessity for those wishing to purchase first class furniture going to the cities.

Election of Officers.—The annual meeting of the Gosling Gold and Silver Mining Company was held in Belleville recently. Some arrangements are being made, it is said, for working the mine. The following directors were elected:—George D. Dickson, Belleville, President; H. T. Strickland, Peterborough, Vice-President; Gen. J. M. Tuttle, Des Moines, Iowa; W. J. Gosling, Belleville; John Burn Ham, M. P., Peterborough; John Thomas, Indianapolis, Ind.; Wm. Sutherland, Belleville Secretary.

An Enlightened Community.—A recent number of the Port Hope Guide contains the following:—

"The town of Peterborough appears to be actively interested in everything that conduces to the exercise of both body and mind. The people of that town have their boating, cricket, lacrosse and other athletic clubs, which usually give a good account of themselves when they go abroad. For the winter months they have an excellent gymnasium, and they are at present organizing a literary and debating society. They take an interest in their band, which is constantly improving, and in many ways they appear to be an enlightened and enterprising community."

T. E. FITZGERALD'S CARRIAGE WORKS.

A LOOK THROUGH THE COMMODIOUS AND WELL ARRANGED PREMISES.

What We Saw.

During the past twenty-five years the advance and improvement in all kinds and classes of trades and manufactures in the town of Peterborough has been most marked and perceptible. In none has it been more so than in carriage making. As the country became more settled, better roads and highways followed, and the old-fashioned ox cart and clumsy farm waggon gave way to the neatly constructed carriage, or the more substantial and well-built waggon. To meet the requirements of the times none of our carriage-builders have striven harder, and succeeded better, than Mr. T. Fitzgerald. Commencing business on quite a small scale, at the old shops located at the foot of Smithtown Hill, the excellence of his work soon brought him prominently before the community, and as his business increased, larger premises were obtained on the corner of Brock and Water streets. These, too, soon gave way before his persevering enterprise, and were replaced by the large brick buildings owned by the Birdsall Estate, where, for a number of years he carried on the largest business in this section. Some two years ago he commenced the erection of new works on his own property, on the corner of Charlotte and Aylmer streets, close to the Midland Railway Station. Facing on Aylmer street are the commodious ware-rooms, a two-storey building with Mansard roof, extending 75 feet in length and 110 feet in depth. The first flat is used as warerooms, office, and store room, and the top flat as a paint shop, trimming and finishing room. On Charlotte street is the workshop proper—a neat two-storey brick building—the under portion being used as a blacksmith shop, and the upper part as a wood working room. This building is connected with the other by a large platform from the second storey of each. Commodious sheds for the accommodation of farmers' teams are also on the premises. On the opposite side of the street is the lumber yard, where a large quantity of timber is always kept on hand, seasoning.

At all times the show rooms are well filled with the finest vehicles, but just now some of more than ordinary merit are shown. The first to attract attention is a handsome new hearse, of the same pattern as that which took gold medal at the Centennial Exposition, in Philadelphia, in 1876. The drapery is of broadcloth, trimmed with heavy gold fringe; the railings, inside, are octagon shaped, of heavily silver-plated metal; the raised portion of the bottom being of walnut. The finish throughout is of the very best, and competent judges who examined it at the Central Exhibition state there was nothing equal to it shown at either Toronto or Ottawa. A novelty in the buggy line is one (a Whitney side bar spring) in the course of finish, ordered by R. A. Morrow, Esq., which when completed, is not to exceed 80 pounds in weight. It is a real piano box, with cane seat. The body is made of the finest American white wood, and the wheels of the choicest second growth American hickory. The axles are of the finest Bessemer steel, purchased from Deisell, of New York.

The canopy-top phaeton shown in just the carriage for ladies when driving. It don't catch the wind and does away with the necessity for using parasols. It must surely become a favorite with the fair sex, as well as with gentlemen. It is finished in black and very handsome.

A very elegantly finished blue cab waggon also comes in for a share of attention. It is made of the best seasoned and choicest timber, the pole, axles and wheels being of this oak, something not generally found in waggons. This wood will not dish nor rot in the iron of the patent arm, as will maple or other wood. The box is of oak, and the whole finished in oil and varnish, which shows the clearness and excellence of the material used. It is fitted with patent spring seat and shelving.

There are also a host of other vehicles in all styles, plain and elegant, for a description of which we have not space. We feel confident, however, it will well repay any one who is in need of a superior article to call and inspect those shown, as the prices are very low, in fact, we should say cheap, considering the quality of the work.

SCHOOL BOARD.

An Unimportant and Quiet Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the School Board was held in the Council Chamber on Tuesday evening last. Present,—the Chairman, James Stevenson, Esq., and Messrs. Ervott, Shaw, Semmens, Wrightson, Towle, Hindmarsh and Saunders.

During the absence of the Secretary, Mr. Monahan was appointed Secretary pro tem.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.)

From Miss Sarah Jane McLeod, asking for a position as teacher as soon as a vacancy should occur.—Received.

From J. Fifth Judson, Principal, transmitting a statement of the number of scholars studying in the several branches in the high school department.—Received.

From the Principal, a statement of the attendance during the month of September. In all the Schools the number on the roll was 1031, the average attendance being 753.

From the Minister of Education, a circular in reference to Drill instruction in connection with Schools.

From Jas. Stanton, Inspector of Schools, a statement of the legal standing of the teachers employed.

ACCOUNTS.

W. H. Robertson & Co., $2; S. Johnston, $25.65.

The first account was ordered to be paid, and the last referred to the Property Committee with power to act.

DRILL INSTRUCTIONS.

Mr. Shaw asked if the Principal had received any communications in reference to the Drill in connection with schools.

Mr. Edmison stated a company had already been formed, and were under the instruction of the Principal.

COMMITTEE ON APPOINTMENTS.

The Committee on Appointments presented a report recommending that as soon as Miss Beasley had obtained a 2nd Class certificate, she be placed on the staff of teachers on the first suitable vacancy; that Miss Beckett be appointed to fill the place vacated by Miss Ellsworth; that Miss Brent be appointed to fill Miss Brown's place; Miss Irwin to fill Miss Bagnley's place, and that Miss Gamble be appointed temporarily to fill Miss Irwin's place.

A motion by Mr. Ervott for the adoption of the report, brought forth an amendment from Mr. Monahan, who strongly objected to the appointment of Miss Gamble in the South Ward School.

The amendment was ruled out of order, and the report on motion carried.

Mr. Ervott drew the attention of the Board to a change in the School Law, whereby children of non-residents, whether ratepayers of the Section or not, must now pay a fee not exceeding 25 cents per month in advance.

The Board then adjourned.

The Late Drowning Accident.

An adjourned coroner's inquest on the body of Miss Clara Strickland, whose melancholy death by drowning in Kashawanuch Lake on Tuesday 23rd September last, we gave an account of in our issue of the 25th ult.; took place in the Council Chamber Lakefield, on Monday evening last, before Coroner Bell.

The following is the evidence of Mr. Eugene Clementi Smith, who was the companion of Miss Strickland at the time of the accident:—

Being sworn, he deposed:—Remember the 23rd September, Tuesday; was out with the deceased Miss Strickland in a canoe, about 4 p.m.; I left Mr. Grieve's boat house with deceased for a troll; we paddled between the weeds and the shore; deceased got a bite, and I asked her to take in the troll; we heard the steamboat coming, when we kept in the bay opposite Mr. Grieves'; after the steamboat passed we again resumed trolling, and in going up the bay I noticed some ducks flying on the Smithtown shore; a sudden gust of wind blew off my hat; deceased made a sudden grasp at it and we went over; I came up with my back to the canoe; I swam to where I saw deceased had gone down, and dove and caught her by the wrist and brought her to the canoe; she made no struggle until I got her to the surface of the water; I encouraged her all I could, and retained my presence of mind having no fear that I could not save her; she made no effort to take hold of the canoe, but got one arm around my neck which held the canoe out, and helped to prevent my breathing; I tried to remove her arm and in doing so I at hold of the canoe and we both went under the water; on coming up I took breath and swam to the spot I had noticed her come up, but she at once sank again; I dove and caught her by the shoulder and again took her to the canoe; she made no effort to take hold of it, although I encouraged her to do so; I again dove and brought her to the surface but let go immediately, as I was exhausted; I do not know how I reached the canoe; after doing so and recovering breath, I called for help, and remember seeing people on the shore, and soon after a boat with two men coming towards me, and recognized Mr. Grieve; I also remember another boat coming up, and between them being taken ashore; when I started from the boathouse I was on my knees, and so paddled through the rice, but at the time of the accident I was sitting on the thort, with my legs drawn up almost to the gunnel;—my usual way of paddling, owing to a lameness in my leg; I was going up the lake when the accident happened; my boat was bottom up when I first came to the surface, and continued so; cannot say how long I was hanging on the canoe; the trolling line was out at the time, and I felt it once when in the water; I left coat, vest, gun and ammunition in Mr. Grieve's boathouse, intending to come for the flight shooting of ducks as I have done other evenings after I left deceased; cannot tell how long after I hallowed before assistance came; deceased was gone then; I may have been half an hour in the water; I used to be a good swimmer, but cannot do so since I met with the accident at Sandy Lake; I had every confidence that if she assisted me I would be able to save her as I did not loose my presence of mind; I must have swallowed some water; the only word deceased spoke was the exclamation, when we first went over, "oh, uncle."

Evidence was also taken from Thos. A. Gordan, and George Bell, of Lakefield; William Dugas, of Smithtown, Thomas G. Grieve, and others, the evidence of each in all essential particulars being corroborative of that of the others, and went to show that, having been attracted by cries for help, coming from the lake, they pushed out in boats, finding Mr. Smith clinging to the up turned canoe, in a state of great exhaustion, from which position they rescued him.

The jury returned a verdict of accidental drowning.

STONY LAKE.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—Most of your readers will remember the awful crime that was committed in Dummer about seven years ago, when Mrs. Payne and the boy Doughty, were so brutally murdered by William Brenton, alias James Fox. At the time a quantity of bed clothing was missing from the house, as well as a good rifle, the caps of which were found on the person of the prisoner when arrested, and it was generally believed he had taken both, although the most diligent search was made, no trace of them could be obtained, until last Saturday evening when the rifle was found by Mr. Abraham Tighe, in a fallow on the adjoining lot, which he was cleaning up. It is supposed that it was secreted under a large birch top that had been there for years. The barrel of the rifle was not much the worse, but the stock has been almost destroyed by the fire. The remains of an umbrella were also found at the same place. They must have been well concealed, as they were not more than fifteen rods from Mr. Payne's clearing, and where the woods had been carefully searched. The bed clothes have since been found by Mr. F. Miles, (father of the murdered woman,) and Mr. Joseph Nixon. They were lying close to where the gun was found, and were covered with moss, they appeared out they appeared in their natural state, but as soon as they became exposed to the air they fell to pieces.

Yours &c.,
JAMES ROBB.

VEGETINE.

HEROLD ME A WELL WOMAN.
CANCER.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., June 30, 1879.

H. R. STEVENS, Boston:

DEAR SIR,—There for years been a cancer from a glandular tumor in my side which caused me much anxiety, and as I am a widow with a family dependent upon my exertions for a support, my pain of body was only equalled by my pain of mind, as nothing but children went for bread. I was presented by a kind friend in Cincinnati with half a dozen bottles of Vegetine, and although one bottle is still undressed, behold am a well woman, completely restored in body and mind, and able to perform my accustomed duties. Long may you live! and may the history of my wonderful cure lead other like sufferers to purchase your valuable medicine, if it is with the last cent they own.

Yours gratefully,
MRS. FULLER SUTT

I write this to certify that I have known Mrs. Fuller Sutt from childhood, and have seen the tumor of cancer, that her physicians pronounced incurable, and that she suffered untold agonies and now she bends as in perfect health with her child upon her knee. The prayers of this grateful woman will ever be yours, my noble sir, and we add our testimony to the thousands that favor the greatest of all modern discoveries, "Vegetine."

Yours respectfully,

PILES, RHEUMATISM.

GOSHEN, Miss., May 6, 1879.

H. R. STEVENS, Boston:

I have been suffering for 25 years with the Piles and found but little relief from any medicine that I have taken for many years past. Last winter I suffered considerably worse than ever before, also in connection with Rheumatism, I was confined to my bed for several weeks. Having procured a bottle of Vegetine I took it with good effect. I continued the use and after using four or five bottles, find myself comparatively cured. I can cheerfully recommend it for the benefits I have received from it.

Yours respectfully,
J. W. TAGGART.

Blood Cleanser and Purifier,

Has Not Its Equal.
LUNG DISEASE.

SPARTA, Wis., May 12, 1879.

H. R. STEVENS, Boston:

I take great pleasure in recommending your Vegetine. I have been suffering for a long time with the Lung disease and tried every kind of medicine that I could get, but none seemed to do me any good, until I tried your great Vegetine Remedy. I had used it only a short time before I could discover a very great change in my health for the better. I don't consider that your medicine has its equal, for any disease for which you propose to cure, especially the disease that I have been afflicted with. JOHN THOMAS.

Blood Purifier.

H. R. STEVENS, Esq.:

DEAR SIR,—Your Vegetine has performed some wonderful cures in our town, and is esteemed superior to all other Blood Purifiers.

ROBERT WESCOTT,

"Be Thy."

You will? Well, that's a good resolve:
Now keep it, little man,
In many things you undertake—
Just do the best you can.
Once never knows what he can do,
Until he sets to work;
If you determine, accomplishment
The faster then it will.

All honor to the resolute boy!
Who tries to do his best;
A heart of principle may beat
Beneath a time worn vest.
Not always does the outward man
Reveal the hidden worth
That goes to make up character,
And form the brave of earth.

JACK'S GREAT PERIL.

A RAILWAY ADVENTURE.

I never saw such a change in a man in my life! When we last met, Jack—well, I must not give his real name, considering what I am going to relate, so I'll call him Jack Pallant—was, as he had ever been since I knew him, one of the lightest-hearted, cheeriest fellows in the world, full of fun, and up to everything, and as gentle and tender as a woman, with the courage of a lion. And now, what did I find him? Even though but three months had elapsed, he had become a grave, dejected, saddened man—in a word, hardly recognizable, either mentally or physically. I was shocked, and of course he saw that I was. He came to see me, indeed, the moment he heard I was in town, that I might learn from his own mouth what had happened, instead of at second-hand.

Jack had always been more or less a spoiled boy—only sons are always more or less spoiled—and having, lost his mother when quite a child, it was not wonderful that his poor old dad made much of him. But he had taken the spoiling kindly, and beyond making him perhaps a little idle and thoughtless it had done him no harm. There was no harm in the fellow; he spent more money than he should, but many young soldiers do that without coming to much grief in the long run, and his father, a soldier before him, regarded the failing leniently, paid his bills, and looked pleasant. Beyond adding that he was a rather short, dapper little fellow, I need not say much more about him; I have only to try and put into coherent shape the strange and tragical business which has so fearfully altered him.

He was coming to town one autumn evening for a few days' leave from Gunnersholt, where he was quartered. I can see him as plainly as if I had been there, springing into the first carriage that offered room, without regard to who was in it; for he was the least fastidious of men, without the slightest particle of 'how-how' pride and nonsense, or that stand-off-ishness of manner too usual with men in his position; ready to make himself happy wherever he was, or in whatever company.

But it so happened, it appears, on this occasion that he got into an empty carriage; at least he thought so, for it was twilight, and he did not observe for the first moment the figure of a woman, seated in a further corner, dressed in dark clothes, and thickly veiled.

The sudden discovery that he was not alone rather startled him for a moment, and it may be, as he said, that the evening before having been a gushet night at mess, his nerves were not quite up to the usual tone. He was not the lad, however, to be long in such a situation without making some remark to his fellow traveler, though in this case an unusual hesitation to do so came over him, owing to her mysterious appearance and extreme stillness. The between-lights of the carriage lamp and the evening sky prevented him from discerning details; but there she sat, perfectly rigid, and with not a vestige of her face visible through the thick black veil.

'Absurd, absurd!' he said at last, shifting one seat nearer to her and nearly opposite; 'I hope I have not intruded on you; I thought the carriage was empty. I may be disturbing you, I fear.' He would say anything, in a random sort of way, to break the ice, as he called it.

No answer. A long pause. 'Very singular,' he thought; and he moved to a seat exactly opposite the figure, making another commonplace observation. No response, or any movement.

'Asleep, I suppose,' he said to himself; and he sat, quietly watching her, while the train rattled on for a mile or two. A station was reached and a stoppage made, with the usual accompaniments of screech, and whistling, and slamming of doors, but without producing any change in the posture of the occupant of the opposite corner. The train again moved on. 'Can't be asleep,' he muttered. What's the matter with her?'

The window was shut close, he let it down with a tremendous clatter and bang, remarking that he hoped, as the evening was fine, the weather warm, and the carriage close (for he declared to me there was a peculiar odor hanging about which struck him from the first), she would not object to a little air.'

Still no reply. Then he said he feared she was not well; would she like him to pull the bell for the guard and have the train stopped again?' But nothing he could say or do elicited any sign of life from her.

Jack now became seriously uncomfortable and alarmed on her account. He thought she could not be asleep, but had fainted. Suddenly it crossed his mind that she was dead. Night had now closed in, but as the last twinge of twilight faded from the sky the carriage lamp gained its full power, and revealed every object more plainly than hitherto.

Jack leaned toward the motionless form. A long black veil, falling from a close-fitting hat-like bonnet, enveloped nearly the whole upper part of her figure; indeed on close inspection, it hardly looked like an ordinary veil, but more like a large thin black silk handkerchief. Her dress was of common black stuff, much worn and frayed, from amid the folds of which there appeared the ends of a piece of rope that must have been fastened round her waist, and one hand, encased in an old ill-fitting black glove, lay placidly on her lap.

Full of uncomfortable sensations, Jack was about to lift the veil, when, for the first time the figure moved; its other hand stole slowly from beneath the folds of the dress, and the veil was gradually lifted and thrown up over the head.

Involuntarily my friend shrank back into the corner of his seat, for a face was revealed to him which no one could have looked upon without a sense of awe. It was that of a woman somewhat past middle age, thin, haggard and pale to a degree which only death could parallel. The features, finely chiselled and proportioned, showed that at one time there must have been supreme beauty, while, though the iron-gray hair looked a little disheveled and unkempt, the glance of the eye was steady, calm, and determined.

In this glance lay, chiefly, the awe-in-spiring expression of the face, for, in addition to the penetrating look, there was a persistency in it, and at the same time a fascination, quite terrible. It fixed itself upon Jack from the first moment that eye met eye, and for several minutes not a word was spoken on either side. Presently, however, he tried to pull himself together, and to assume his usual light-hearted manner, which had then for a minute been so strangely and unusually disturbed, and he said, briskly:—

'I beg your pardon; I was afraid you were ill.'

She slightly bent her head, but spoke not a word, nor withdrew her glance.

He felt more and more that it was costing him an effort to be himself. Her slow, stealthy, albeit lady-like demeanor added greatly to the effect already produced, and a curious sensation was gradually creeping over him, that—impossible as it might seem—that face was not strange to him. Little as he, with his temperament, was given to speculation or introspection, he found himself striving to look back for some event or circumstance in his life which might give him a clew. Had he ever dreamed of such a face, or had he seen it in childhood? He was puzzled, affected, quite put out. And still the deep penetrating appearance fixed on his, pinning as it were into his very soul. And the hand! what were they doing? Taking off the gloves as with a set, deliberate purpose; and the long, white, thin, almost claw-like fingers worked strangely and nervously, slowly closing and opening upon the palm, as if preparing to grasp something.

Again he strove to throw off the unpleasant nervous sensation which had crept over him.

'I can't stand this,' he thought; I was never so unconsciously in my life! I must do something, or say something to put a stop to this, to make her take her eyes off me!'

He moved abruptly to the further end of the carriage, and to the same side on which the woman sat.

'I'll try and dodge her in that way,' he said to himself; 'she shall not sit and glare at me in this fashion!'

But, she too, immediately shifted her place, and, rising to her full height, which was very great, went over to the seat exactly opposite to him, never for one single second dropping her eyes from his. He looked out of the window with a vague notion of getting out of the carriage; when suddenly, passing a little station which he recognized, but at which the train did not stop, an idea struck him—an idea after his own heart—a comic idea! He availed himself of it on the instant, and assuming an e-cee which doubtless sat ill upon him, and which he was far from feeling, he pointed with his thumb back toward the station they had just passed, as he said mysteriously in a hollow voice:—

'Do you know that place?'

She seemed to answer in the affirmative by a slight inclination of the head as before.

'Ah! you do. Good! Longmoor,' he went on; 'then I don't mind telling you a secret.' He paused. (I'll frighten her,' he thought,) 'Criminal lunatics,' he said aloud; 'I am one of them. I have just escaped from there!'

He leaned forward, as if to impress her with his words; she also bent forward until her lips almost touched his ear, as she hissed into it:—

'So have I!'

With what had already gone before, this put the finishing touch to Jack's uneasiness of mind. It was not, as he said, the mere presence of the woman, or the revelation which his joke had elicited, which scared him, though the circumstance in itself might be unpleasant enough.

'I should have faced it right away from the first, as any man would have done, had it not been for the remarkable influence her face and look had upon me; that unaccountable feeling that she was no stranger to me, it was that unnerved and even appalled me.'

No sooner had she uttered the words, 'So have I,' than Jack sprang to the cord communicating with the guard's van, for he felt their truth, and saw in them a key to the whole mystery. But ere his hand had reached the cord, she had seized him round the waist with one arm as with the grip of a vice, and at the same instant he felt one of those terrible hands at his throat.

Every effort to release himself was fruitless; her strength seemed superhuman, and was as far beyond his as was her stature. Her face glowed close down upon his now, still with the same full expression.

'The only thing I could have done,' was it on Jack, in describing the scene to me—and just here he shall speak for himself; 'the only means by which I might perhaps have made her relax her hold would have been by aiming one or two tremendous blows with my right fist (which was at liberty) at her face. Had it been a man's there would have been no hesitation; had it been indeed that of an ordinary woman, at such a pass I should not have hesitated to strike her, to stun her, if I could, by any means; but that face, that I seemed to know so well, yet so mysteriously, I could not raise my hand against it, and as my arm swung up with the first impulse, to deal her a blow, it fell helpless by my side. Vain were my efforts to get her hand away from my throat; there was a terrible swaying to and fro for a minute or two, I felt the grip of the long fingers tightening, and myself choking. Suddenly we fell, the whole carriage seemed to be falling—there was a fearful jerk or two, a strange upheaving of the floor, a tremendous rattle and crash—I appeared to be thrown headlong to some great distance, and—all was darkness!'

The termination of that deadly struggle was brought about in a manner as marvelous and unlooked for as could well have been imagined.

Some fifty souls, say, were travelling in that train; all, save one, in apparent security. Jack's life alone was in danger, when, lo! by one of those marvelous coincidences which do happen at times in the supreme moments of existence, the rescue came, but at the cost of many a life, which, but just before, would have seemed worth treble the purchase of Jack's.

At the very instant that his might have depended upon another tightening grip or two from the hand of a maniac, a frightful catastrophe occurred to the train. The tire of an engine wheel broke, and half-a-dozen carriages were hurled down a steep embankment. The scene that succeeded is, unhappily, of too common an occurrence to need more than a word of reference here. Seven passengers were killed outright; double that number slightly or badly hurt; the remainder escaping, as by a miracle, with nothing else than a severe shaking.

My friend was among the shaken. He had been thrown clear of the debris, on to a soft grassy spot, half-bank, half-hedge; emphatically, his life was saved!

But what followed it was that which caused the suffering, that wrought the terrible change in Jack.

In the darkness of that soft autumn night he strove, foremost among those who had been spared, to render such help as was possible to the less fortunate. When the official assistance came, and fires were set blazing to give light, almost his first care was to try and seek out his dangerous fellow-traveller. In the confusion nobody was prepared, of course, to listen to Jack's account of her, even if he had been prepared them to give it. She was not, evidently, moving about among the crowd, he assured himself of that; but supposing her, like himself, to have escaped injury (and he concluded that this was likely), might she not, with the stealth and cunning incidental to her malady, be hiding, and by thus further eluding detection, become, with her homicidal mania, as dangerous to the community at large as some fierce, wild animal would be? The thought made him shudder; he must lose no time in assuring himself of her fate.

As soon as an approach to order could be evolved out of that awful chaos, he had convinced himself that she was not among the injured. Then he turned to the dead. His eye fell upon several mutilated and motionless forms, which had been laid in an ominous row at the foot of one part of the embankment. Here was not among them; he could find no trace of her.

At length, as a sickly dawn was beginning to make the search easier, he endeavored to discover the spot where the carriage he had occupied had fallen, and to retrace his steps (quite to the rear of the train, by the way) to the place where he found himself lying after the catastrophe.

By this time he had made known briefly to some officials that a woman was missing who had been in the carriage with him, and one or two of them followed him in his quest. Presently he realized pretty well where he had been thrown; he all but identified the spot. Then he scrambled through the hedge, and there, on the opposite side, on the sloping bank of a ditch, he beheld, lying quite still, her dark, unmistakable form.

He ran forward, and bending over her and looking down upon the marble, upturned face, saw at a glance that there was nothing dangerous about her wounds—the terrible eyes were closed—though by a slight wound on one temple, whence a little blood had trickled, and the distorted but now rigidly closed hand, which had been so lately at his throat also bathed in calm and undisturbed as if she were merely sleeping while dreaming, but natural from a half-parted mouth of that beauty the traces of which had struck him when her veil was first lifted.

One of the surgeons here came hurrying up, in answer to summons.

'Good heavens!' he exclaimed; 'here she is then, at last! Why, she must have been in the train. How on earth did she manage it?'

'Who is she?' inquired Jack earnestly, with a strange return of the old, incomplicable sensation. 'Who is she? You appear to know her. Pray tell me.'

'Oh, one of our inmates; she got away yesterday morning; no one knows how,' was the answer.

'You are from Longmoor, then. How long has she been there? What is her name?'

'Oh, she has been there upward of twenty years, I believe; long before my time.'

'And her name?'

'Upon my word, at this moment, I can hardly,' went on the doctor mechanically passing his fingers over one of the palseless wrists before him, and with a calm hesitation that contrasted strangely with Jack's earnest, impetuous manner, 'I can hardly remember. I think she was committed for the murder of her own little girl. It was a sad case, I know. Ah! her name; I have it,' went on the doctor, suddenly; 'her name was Pallant—Rachel Pallant.'

Jack sprang from the kneeling posture to which he was, as if he had been shot. Why, that was his own dead mother's name! But, pshaw! what of that? Well, it was rather a startling coincidence; that was all! Ay, but was it all? Indeed, no.

The inquest led to a revelation. That inquiry fully explained what had been the nature of the influence which the weird pale face and strange presence had had upon my friend.

The strong but subtle link which no time or absence can quite sunder, existing between mother and son, had made itself felt the instant those two sat face to face, for the unhappy woman was indeed none other than Jack's own mother!

He had never been told—in fact, it had been carefully kept from him; why run the risk of clouding for life that happy temperament? He was only four years old when the dreadful business happened. Hence he had scarcely known a mother's care, she was lost to him to the world, as completely as if she had died. Nay, death would have been a mercy by comparison, and it was generally assumed that she was dead: only a few very intimate friends knew the truth.

The poor lady's mind had given way suddenly after the birth of a child, who, did not live. Within a week the homicidal mania possessed her; by the merest chance she had been prevented from committing some frightful outrage upon her little boy, my poor friend Jack; and restraint not having been put upon her in time—for her malady had hardly been suspected, so unlooked-for was its appearance—she consummated her deadly propensity upon her eldest child, a girl of fifteen years of age—killed her, in a word, as she lay asleep.

And here, after a lapse of twenty years, was the climax and end of the tragedy, as dreadful as anything that had gone before. The order for release, when it came, brought with it as much suffering (to all but one) as had the order for captivity. No wonder that Jack was an altered man. I have never seen a smile on his face since—though I trust that time with its healing influence, may at least soften the blow.

Evading the Duties.

(From the Hamilton Times.)

The authorities at Ottawa evidently believed that the snatch verdict of a year ago was a thorough condonation of all the jobs perpetrated by the Pacific Scandal Cabinet, for the 'Chieftain' at once surrounded himself with the remnants of the wreck of 1873, and as many other of the talented crew as he could make room for. It is not therefore surprising that a Cabinet conceived and shapen in iniquity should fly at once to their old employment as 'Honorable Bilks,' the moment they got the change. There is probably no better instance of the manner in which the members of the Tory Government are again, quietly and cautiously, creating opportunities for jobbery than that evidenced in their action in regard to the importation of supplies for the Intercolonial Railway. It has already been pointed out that Sir John Macdonald and his colleagues no longer hold fast to their extraordinary doctrine that the producer pays the duty, else why should the business men in the States not be made to pay duty on the supplies bought by the Government for its railways? Instead of that the stores are brought free into Canada in mockery of the tariff, and the loss to the revenue of the country has to be made up in some other matter.

The Glasgow Bank Directors Released Amidst Meetings.

The Directors of the City of Glasgow Bank who, at the conclusion of their trial for misappropriation of the funds of the institution, and for publishing false reports of its condition, were sentenced to imprisonment some months ago, were on Wednesday released a mitigation of the sentence having been obtained through the influence of their friends and families. News of the approaching release had circulated through the city, and considerable crowds of persons had assembled in front of the prison doors. When the released prisoners appeared, they were greeted with groans and exclamations of contempt and hatred, and it was with some difficulty that the large force of police who had been ordered to the place in anticipation of a disturbance, protected them from personal violence. The released prisoners were conducted to carriages, which were awaiting for them, and driven to the railway station, whence they immediately took their departure from the city.

The Indians Again.

A Fight with the Utes in Colorado.

Thornburgh's command was attacked in Red Canon, on Monday, mile south of Milk River, Colorado, on the march to the agency.

The following particulars are obtained from the courier who brought the despatches from Capt. Payne after the fight: On the arrival of Rankin on the top of the hill he discovered the Indians in ambush on either side of the canon, through which the road passed Thornburgh formed his men in line and awaited the coming attack. He was repeatedly urged to fire upon the Indians, but persistently refused to do so, saying his orders would not justify an attack. Two Indians now rode up to within 100 yards, dismounted, and with savage yells fired, shooting Captain Payne through the arm. At this signal the Indians gave a war whoop, and the battle commenced. Thornburgh now found he was surrounded, and ordered a charge, which he gallantly led in person, and succeeded in cutting his way out, and, when within 500 yards of his waggons, he fell dead, with two bullets through his brain. Payne now took command, and the battle was carried on until 6 p.m., the troops using the waggons and animals as breastworks. The Indians fell back a short distance and went into camp. During the engagement Lowrey was killed. The casualties are about as follows: Major Thornburgh, Lowrey, and 13 enlisted men. Waggon Master McElhenny and one teamster killed; Captain Payne, Captain Thompson, Surgeon Grimes, Lieuts. Paddock and Wolf and 35 men wounded. A hundred and fifty head of mules and horses were killed by Indians. The report that Agent Meeker and family and all employees are murdered, and the agency buildings destroyed, lacks confirmation.

Pertinent Clubs.

The United States has many institutions which, if copied here, would produce invaluable results to the agricultural community. For instance, in New England alone there are 220 farmers' clubs, to which seventy-two thousand active members belong. There are over twenty thousand volumes treating on agricultural subjects in their libraries. It is just on this point of agricultural libraries that we fail in this country. Every distinct farming community ought to have its reading room, with the best agricultural journals, and a library of the most important works on scientific farming, stock-keeping, &c. If such were the case, we would see the good effects of the system, in Peterborough especially, where scientific farming is not greatly practised.

PORT HOPE.

CURLING.—At a meeting held on Monday evening, the following were elected officers of Port Hope Curling Club, for the season ending March, 1880:

Patron—Col. A. T. H. Williams.

Vice-President—Edwin Philp, Esq.
Representative Members—G. C. Ward, H. H. Burnham.
Chaplain—Rev. R. J. Beattie.
Committee on Council of Management—W. Renwick, H. H. Burnham, G. Roddick, J. Gamble and G. F. Hall.
Honorary Members—J. M. Irvin, H. Aylwin, Rev. C. W. Paterson and Col. A. T. H. Williams.

The Dominion Exhibition.

The Exhibition virtually closed on Friday. The attendance, though not equal to that of either of the two preceeding days, was still large enough to show that the interest was well maintained. With the exhibition as a whole the Directors of the Association must for many reasons be satisfied, though, as some even of its most sanguine friends expected, there will probably be a financial deficiency. The Dominion medals were distributed in the Senate Chamber in the evening. At that time the Vice-Regal party and the principal officers of the Association were convened. The gold and silver medals were distributed by the Princess Louise, and the bronze medals by the President, after the vice-regal party had retired. As the name of each successful competitor was announced he advanced, and bowing to both the Princess Louise and the Governor-General, received from the hands of the former the valued douceur. The medal is rather pretty in design. On the obverse side a figure of victory, surrounded by the words "Dominion of Canada," appears; on the obverse side the Dominion's heraldic arms, supported by a wreath of maple leaves with a beaver at the base. As several of the most prominent competitors advanced, they were greeted with hearty applause.

After the medals had been distributed, the President, Mr. Wilmot, thanked the Governor-General and Princess Louise, for the interest they had taken in the Exhibition. His Excellency in reply said:—Mr. President and gentlemen,—I desire to express to you our high gratification on the part of the Princess and myself, in having been able to assist at the opening of this exhibition, as well as in this, the closing scene. I only ask now, Mr. President, that you will close the proceedings by distributing the remainder of the prizes.

The Ottawa papers greatly exaggerate the gate receipts. The following figures are supplied by the Treasurer's department:—Tuesday, 6442; Wednesday, 83,762; Thursday, 60, 587—or for the three days only $7.761, or 31,044 paid admissions. On Friday about 8,000 paid to enter. The financial returns compare very unfavorably with those for Provincial shows at Toronto, Hamilton and London.

Mitchell's Belladona Improved India Rubber Porous Plaster.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been treated by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

The principal ingredients used in making these Plasters are Gum Olibanum—or better known as the Frankincense of the Bible—Rubber, and Burgundy Pitch which, when scientifically compounded, is full of electricity and when combined with the pure medicinal gums, is found to be one greatest healing mediums ever brought before the human race.

They are acknowledged by all who have used them to act quicker than any other Plasters they ever before tried, and that one of these Plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other Plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure, but with these it is entirely different; the instant one is applied the genial will feel its effect.

They possess all the soothing, warming, supporting and strengthening qualities of all other Plasters. Many who have been relieved of RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, of and various other pains in the KIDNEYS, BREAST or SIDE, and believe it is solely done by the electrical qualities which the Porous Plasters contain, and which is imparted to the system, thus restoring them to a healthy condition.

They are very soft and pliable, still very adhesive; and a sure cure for WEAK BACKS PAINS IN THE SIDE AND BREAST, and are invaluable to those who have a COLD of long standing, and often prevents CONSUMPTION. Some even tell us they believe they were entirely cured by the use of them of a long fasted Consumption.

ELECTRICITY.

Thomas' Eclectric Electric Oil—Worth Ten Times its Weight in Gold—Pain Cannot stay where it is used.

It is the cheapest medicine ever made. One dose cures common sore throat. One bottle has cured Bronchitis. Fifty cents worth has cured an old standing cough. It positively cures catarrh, asthma, and croup. Fifty cents worth has cured crick in the back, and the same quantity lame back of eight years' standing. It cures swelled neck, tumors, rheumatism, neuralgia, contraction, of the muscle, stiff joints, spinal difficulties, and pain and soreness in any part, no matter where it may be, nor from what cause it may arise, it always does you good. Twenty-five cents worth has cured bad cases of chronic and bloody dysentery. One tea-spoonful cure colic in 15 minutes. It will cure any case of piles that it is possible to cure. Six or eight applications is warranted to cure any case of excoriated nipples or inflamed breast. For bruises, if applied, often and bound up, there is never the slightest discoloration of the skin. It stops the pain of a burn as soon as applied. Cures frosted feet, boils warts, and corns and wounds of every description on man or beast.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.—Ask for Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. See that the signature of S. N. Thomas is on the wrapper, and the names of Northrop & Lyman are blown in the bottle, and take no other. Sold by all medicine dealers. Price, 25 cts, NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto, Ont., Proprietors for the Dominion.

NOTE—Eclectric—Selected and Electrised

Joy Among the Children.

COPELAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 600 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administering nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having them pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and while equally safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is honey; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—'My children drink it like water;' another—'We had to hide the bottle or they would have finished it right off;' another—'My little girl has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she knows the ordinary Castor Oil and we never could get her to take it without a fight;' yet another—'I wish you success of your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—quite to take the place of all the common oil.'

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a staple household medicine has brought fraudulent imitations into the market, but the public can guard themselves against substitutes (which unprincipled parties are attempting to sell on the reputation of this article) by seeing that the name of 'COPELAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL,' is on both wrapper and direction label.

The undersigned having purchased Messrs. T. Copland & Co.'s interest in the above preparation, are now manufacturing it from the original receipe. NORTHROP & LYMAN, TORONTO.

PETERBORO' BRANCH, - DIXON'S BLOCK.

Goods Sold Direct to the People at Wholesale Price.

The Only Business in Canada Conducted on the Same Principle.

Over $200,000 Worth of Boots and Shoes so Supplied Last Year.

The great loss annually sustained by selling to Dealers, first led to our establishing of Branch Stores, where we could supply direct to the people for Cash all the goods we could manufacture, thus giving to the people the goods less the dealer's profit, and saving to ourselves the annual loss. We were the more forcibly impressed into this step from the fact that cheap Eastern-made shoddy goods were being palmed off as our goods. We now sell our own goods, warrant what we sell, use no shoddy or inferior material of any kind, and can and do supply goods of the best quality 25 per cent. less than they can be bought elsewhere.

Everything Marked in Plain Figures. Only One Price.

CUSTOM DEPARTMENT.

Our arrangements are now complete in this department, and we can make to measure promptly either Ladies', Gentlemen's, or Children's Goods, in the Latest Styles, at little over half the price usually charged.

The Peterborough Real Estate Investment Co.

(LIMITED.)

CAPITAL - $2,000,000.

This Company is now prepared to Make Loans upon Security of Improved Farm Property on the following Terms:

Interest at 8 per cent. half yearly, or 8½ per cent yearly; when principal is repayable at expiration of term, or by fixed instalments.

Interest at 8½ per cent. half yearly; or nine per cent. yearly; when the whole or any part of the Principal is repayable at any time without notice.

Both Principal and Interest are repayable by instalments of the same amount every year according to the following table:—

Each $100 will be Repaid by	5	Equal Annual Instalments of	$25	00	Each.
"	6	"	21	66	"
"	8	"	17	75	"
"	10	"	15	85	"
"	15	"	12	05	"
"	20	"	10	60	"

In every case the borrower has the choice of day on which to pay both Principal and Interest; and even when he agrees to pay the Principal by instalments, may allow the instalments to remain unpaid to the end of the term, without extra charge.

As this is the only Company having its management in Peterborough, loans can be procured from it more expeditiously than with any other Company.

A Hermit on Life.

This curious compilation is said to have occupied a Poor in searching through Shelley's library for thirty-eight lines from thirty-eight different English and American poets. The author's names are appended:

Why all this toil for triumphs of an hour? 1
Life's a short summer—Man a flower: 2
By turns we catch the vital breath, and die—3
The cradle and the tomb, alas! so nigh. 4
To be is far better than not to be. 5
Though all man's life may seem a tragedy; 6
But light is quick when mighty griefs are heavy— 7
The human is but shallow wherein they come. 8
Your fate is but the common fate of all: 9
Unmingled joys, here, to no man fall. 10
Nature to each allots his proper sphere. 11
Fortune makes folly her peculiar care. 12
Custom does not often reason overrule. 13
And throw a cruel sunshine on a fool. 14
Live well—how long or short permit to heaven: 15
They who forgive most shall be most forgiven. 16
Sin may be clasped so close we may not see his face—17
Vile intercourse where virtue has not place. 18
Then keep each passion down, however dear. 19
Thou partakest between a noble and base: 20
The cumbrous elements are disunited, and dust to dust must go. 21
With earth's wet chill, spreads and hastens. 22
Sage rest you then, age calls to age: 23
We mastered grace of all that we do crave. 24
Oh! then renounce that impious self-esteem. 25
Riches have wings, and grandeur is a dream. 26
Think not ambition wise because 'tis brave: 27
The paths of glory lead but to the grave. 28
What is ambition? 'Tis a glorious cheat. 29
Only destruction to the brave and great. 30
What all the gaudy glitter of a crown? 31
The way to bliss lies not on beds of down. 32
How long we live, not years, but actions, tell; 33
The man lives twice who lives the first life well. 34
Make, then, while yet ye may, your God your friend. 35
Whom Christians worship, yet not comprehend 36
The trust that's given, guard, and to yourself be just; 37
For, live we how we may, yet die we must. 38

Death of Rev. Alex. Topp, D. D.

THE LIFE OF A LEADER OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Monday last Rev. Alexander Topp D. D. of the Presbyterian Church, died suddenly of heart disease, at the residence of Mr. William Galbraith, Maitland Street, Toronto, where he was making a call. The deceased was born in Scotland about sixty-five years ago, and was educated at St. Andrews University, Fifeshire, where he won great honors and his degree of D.D. He was pastor of Elgin Church in Scotland, for some years, and, on the resignation of Rev. Dr. Bains, in 1846 he received a call to the pastorate of Knox Church, Toronto, and has held the position ever since. About a year ago, owing to the heavy work involved in having the superintendence of a very large congregation, steps were taken to have a colleague appointed, and the Rev. Dr. Inglis, of Brooklyn, was selected, but the death of the latter prevented the project being carried out. He was appointed Moderator of the General Assembly in 1876 and prior to that was Moderator of the Toronto Presbytery. About the end of June he visited Scotland to attend to family matters and while there symptoms of heart disease manifested themselves. This lead him to seek the advice of Dr. Keath and Dr. Balfour of Edinburgh, who warned him of the precarious state of his health. The labor of preaching to his old congregation at Elgin aggravated his disease, but he recovered sufficiently to return to this country about the end of August, and since then he resigned his position as pastor of Knox Church congregation. He was a prominent delegate to the Pan-Presbyterian Assembly held in Edinburgh. He leaves a widow and four daughters, two unmarried, one married in Scotland, and one the wife of Mr. William Donaldson, of Toronto. By his death the Presbyterian Church in Canada loses one of its oldest and most intellectual members and his loss will be greatly felt. He was one of the strongest advocates of the late Union which resulted very much from his forethought and Christian zeal.

Quebec Affairs.

Affairs in the Province of Quebec are getting more and more complex. Ministers are holding meetings in various constituencies and, wherever they go, appearances indicate that public opinion is on their side. Many Conservatives openly express disapproval of the action of the Legislative Council, and there seems little doubt that in the event of a new election the Joly Government will receive fresh endorsation at the polls. In view of a contingency so dangerous to their party's interests, Messrs. Chapleau, Angers & Co., are striving might and main to detach some of Mr. Joly's supporters in the House, so that he may not, on the reassembly, be in a position to demand a dissolution on the strength of his having a majority. Messrs. Chauveau and Paquet are now openly claimed by the Opposition, while there are rumors that one or more of the Eastern Township Conservative members are disposed to support Mr. Joly. The only thing certain at present is that a coalition is impossible. Mr. Joly will not, at any cost, throw in his lot with the same cabotins, who have tried to degrade him to their own level and failed. If necessary, he will go into Opposition, uphold his cours in honor, and bide his time. His following is sufficiently strong to prevent the corruptionists from again fastening their talons on the vitals of the Province.

DEFINITIONS OF WORDS AND PHRASES.

"Relate the following anecdote."—to tell the following short story. (Anecdotes are told as matters of private history, and are always reported to be true, stories may be either true or fictitious.)

"Latin grammar,"—a grammar of the language spoken by the Ancient Romans.

"It was dull and I hated it,"—the grammar was difficult, and I did not like to study it.

College,—a school in which the higher branches of education are taught.

"Opposing his wishes,"—acting against what he hoped for, or desired.

Ditching,—the forming of narrow channels in the earth for the passage of water.

'Put by Latin,'—literally, stop studying Latin and try ditching.

"This seemed a delightful change,"—ditching appeared to be more agreeable work than studying Latin.

"The first forenoon was the longest I had ever experienced,"—the first forenoon I was ditching, seemed longer than any previous one.

"Ate the bread of labor,"—literally, I earned or worked for all I ate that day.

Comparison,—the placing of one thing with another to show their resemblance.

"Comparison between Latin and ditching,"—studying Latin was easier than digging ditches.

"But said not a word about it,"—I did not tell my father that I thought ditching harder than studying Latin.

"Toil conquered pride,"—work subdued self-respect or esteem.

"Gained any distinction,"—obtained any elevation of rank or character.

"Several important lessons,"—various instructions of great use.

"Appreciate their privileges,"—to set a just value on their advantages or benefits.

"Hardship needlessly imposed,"—hard labor without need placed on them.

Pursuing,—going after, following for some end.

"Liberal course,"—such a course as would enable them to know the various branches of knowledge.

Continued,—Remained in the same state.

Probably,—Likely, with appearance of truth.

"Path marked out,"—the course they wished him to follow.

"Highest honors,"—the highest public mark of respect.

"Country can bestow,"—which can be given in that country.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

John Adams, the second President of the United States, was born at Braintree, Massachusetts, October, 1735. He was descended from a Puritan family which had settled in Massachusetts in 1640. He was sent by Massachusetts to the Congress which commenced its sittings in Philadelphia in 1774, and took a very active part in procuring the Declaration of Independence. Adams and Thomas Jefferson had been appointed to draw up the Declaration, but it appears that Jefferson was the sole author of it. Adams was afterwards employed in many important negotiations with European powers, and was one of those who assisted in settling the conditions of peace with England. In 1785, he was sent to London, as the first ambassador from the Union. On his return, he was elected as vice-president of the United States, and in 1797, on the retirement of Washington, became President. During his administration which lasted only four years, a land tax was passed, an alien law, ridding the country of French emigrants was enacted, and a seditious law was carried. In 1801, Adams retired to his estate of Quincy, near Boston, where he occupied himself in agricultural pursuits. He died on the 4th of July, 1826, on the fiftieth anniversary of the day when he had proclaimed in Congress the Independence of the United States.

SYNOPSIS OF THE LESSON.

John Adams, when a boy, did not like to study Latin, and became so tired of it at last, that he requested his father to give him some other employment. His father complied, although against his wishes, and set him digging ditches. At first John thought this would be a delightful change, but at the expiration of two days, ditching, he was glad to return again to college.

From this lesson we can learn how much better qualified our parents are than we, to mark out the course we should pursue.

If John Adams had continued ditching, he would not probably have obtained the office he did, which was owing entirely to the wisdom of his parents in preparing him for the functions of an office of the sort.

QUESTIONS ON THE LESSON.

State briefly all you know about the office of a President, and name the countries governed by Presidents!

Where and what is the United States!

Who was the author of this piece! Is it a story or an anecdote! Assign reasons for your answer.

Name the number of quotations, and by whom spoken? Also, explain the difference between the two kinds of quotation marks used in this lesson.

Name the quantity of the vowels in the words beginning with "John Adams" and ending with 'employment!'

"If John Adams had continued this ditching instead of his Latin, his name would not probably have been known to us. But following the path marked out by his parents, he rose to the highest honors which his country can bestow."

State briefly what you infer from the foregoing passage, with reasons for your statements!

The Prince of Wales has skill in the theatrical art of "making up," acquired from the late Mr. Fechter. On one of the Prince suddenly presented himself before his mother attired as a beggar, his dress tattered, his face dirty, and his hair—or rather wig—in supreme disorder. The Queen, not recognizing him by some means or previous suggestion got into the passage, flew in great alarm to a bell-pull before the attendants could reach her, and was found by them in a state of [illegible] at his appearance. [illegible] the Queen, and [illegible] was allowed to [illegible] and [illegible] the Queen, and [illegible] was allowed to [illegible] and [illegible] the Queen, and [illegible] was allowed to [illegible] and

HIGH SCHOOL WORK.

Educationists in various quarters have sustained a rude shock in the results of the late Intermediate Examinations in High Schools and Collegiate Institutes. It is not that schools generally have done somewhat less than was expected of them; but that a considerable number have failed in passing a decent percentage of the pupils sent up for the ordeal. The High School Intermediate Examinations is a pretty thorough scholastic test for the average Canadian student; and it is no shame to many of the young people—mere boys, and girls—who have tried to pass it, that they have failed in the attempt. It is rather encouraging to find that so many of the unsuccessful ones came near being successful. Some indeed failed by a very few marks; and it is not impossible that some of the schools which passed few or no pupils, can show a better average of marks than some which succeeded in squeezing through one or two students, while the others failed to make even a respectable show. It will thus be seen that it is utterly unfair to judge of any school or number of schools, simply by the number of pupils who may have succeeded or failed in taking Intermediate certificates. Such a mode of estimating will not in any degree show the work that may have been done by any particular school. At the same time it is certainly to be deplored that so large a percentage in all the schools should have failed; and that so very many in some of them should have been "plucked." It shows too great eagerness to push pupils beyond the point to which they can stand securely on their scholastic merits. Whether many of the pupils who tried to pass the late examinations and failed, made the attempt at their own desire, that of their parents or that of their teachers, the latter must be held responsible for their trial at least, if not for their failure. It is quite probable that the parents and guardians are in the first instance blame-worthy in having too great eagerness to see the young people move forward, in accordance with the fond parents feeling that they are altogether worthy and competent to take the decisive step. But pupils themselves, and their teachers—not parents—are the proper judges of action in so important a matter, and it must lie with teachers to encourage the too timid, restrain the over-confident, and, above all, to maintain the right to say who among their pupils shall or shall not go up for examination. Of course we would not have High School Principals only send up such as are beyond all possible doubt certain to pass. That would be extreme. But if this question of selecting candidates had been looked to this year with anything like the conscientious care its importance demands, we are certain the schools individually and collectively, would have shown a much better record. Teachers in charge of schools should bear in mind that more than a reasonable share of odium is sure to rest on them by reason of the failure of pupils at examinations; also that no defence they can offer, can free them from blame in sending up a lot of imperfectly prepared candidates.

The dipression that has arisen over this matter is likely to do great good in many quarters. Considerable feeling has been raised in the neighbouring town of Lindsay, where the full compliment of fourteen candidates for examination failed, and in Brantford, when only one passed out of some thirty presenting themselves. Feeling gives rise to discussion; and discussion teaches even teachers. Trustees too, and parents will learn to take a more intelligent interest in the schools; and after all is said and done, the chief fault lies in the fact that the people do not know the schools—parents are not even acquainted with their own children as scholars—and trustees, to whom the welfare of the schools are entrusted, show utter callousness for the position they occupy. The very veil of the difficulty is for the non-pupils to give due attention to the all-important subject of education. Then there will be more chance of the intelligent election of trustees, who both can and will, take an intelligent interest in the concerns of the schools. Such trustees will employ teachers in every way fit, encourage and uphold them in the proper discharge of their duties, and furnish all needful appliances for thorough and progressive educational work. Knowing that people can criticise their official acts properly, trustees will be careful and faithful; and in the same way competent trustees will insure continuous care and faithfulness in teachers.

KILLING NO MURDER.

A good deal of popular sympathy has been roused in behalf of an old man, Chester Munro, sentenced at the Barrie Assizes to be hanged. Some months ago a bully and desperado, named Cooke, entered Munro's cabin, where were the latter and his wife, and demanded a cup of tea. This, with something to eat, was got for him; but the drunken fellow, encouraged apparently by this submission, attempted to take liberties with Mrs. Munro. Her husband began a remonstrance, as any man would, whereupon Cooke threw the woman from him and made at the man of the house. Munro, to defend himself from his younger and stronger assailant, took down his gun and warned back the bully, who, continuing to advance to the attack, was shot dead. Mrs. Munro had run out to procure help, so that there was no witness to the homicide. Munro, however, confessed and delivered himself up to the authorities, stating that the gun went off accidentally. The father of the slain man at the trial swore that Munro on a former occasion had threatened to be the death of young Cooke; but so far from any serious intent being attached to the threat, during some horse-play at a threshing, it seems never to have been given a thought till after the unfortunate circumstances which led to the young bully's death. But even considering the threat serious and the killing non-accidental, Cook had no business in Munro's house, or to insult Mrs. Munro, or to attempt to assault her husband. He had formerly been known to draw on quarrels with other men, assault, chew and maim them; and was, therefore, one against whom an antagonist might justifiably use a weapon of defence. The jury evidently did not fully understand the force of their verdict of murder against Munro; for they recommended him to mercy. The Judge, probably the most tender-hearted man on the Bench, sentenced the prisoner to death; and now the sense of justice of the people in that part of the Province is outraged. Large petitions are going in for the commutation of the sentence; and it is to be hoped that it will be made as light as possible. It is likely that evidence of a former threat by the prisoner weighed much with the jury which found him guilty of murder; but was it not also a fair warning to the desperado to cease his molestatizes of Munro?

This sentence has roused men to inquire if they must not defend the honor of their loved ones, or stand up for the sacredness of what makes home, even when life is in the balance against it. If Munro be hanged for his act, then men are not safe in defending their homes against rough intrusion, or their wives and daughters from vallianous treatment, lest they come to the gallows. We are certain we are not alone when we declare the opinion that Munro should have been acquitted of any murderous intent, as fully as if he had only shot a dangerous wild animal in other shape than human. Our article on Police in last issue will have shown that the public, especially in rural districts, have to look largely to themselves for safety from robbery, rapine and murder. When a man's house is invaded by a ruthless villian, what is he to do? Till the law provides a better answer than it does to such a question, it has no right to condemn a man for sustaining the first principles of order with his own hand. The invader of domestic peace and happiness forfeits his claim to much, if not all, social defence in the shape of law. Beat on the commission of lawless acts, he should know that the consequences include the possibility, nay the probability of his death, should he persist. The robber or burglar carries his life in his hand, and should the determined assaulter of the home, or the persistent paramour receive greater consideration. However, decency, purity, and justice cry, "No!" They are doubly deserving of social and legal disregard. The whole question is a terribly dangerous as well as a delicate one; but that only makes the necessity of dealing with it intelligently and firmly, the more necessary for the social and moral well-being of the community.

[Since the above was in type, the death sentence passed upon Munro has been computed to imprisonment in the Kingston Penitentiary for a term of seven years.]

TORONTO AND OTTAWA RAILWAY.

The voting by Ottawa of a bonus of $200,000 to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway, by a handsome majority, marks a new epoch in the history of this important project. Indeed it is the passage of a crisis; for had the Ottawa by-law been defeated, there can be no doubt that the scheme would have been set back for years. But in direct ratio to the delay defeat would have occasioned, we now hope to see victory accelerate the work. Energy in pushing it forward must not now be relaxed, even for an instant. The time is now most opportune for laying the claims of the line before the people of those parts which it will most benefit, and the securing of substantial aid toward its speedy construction. We must congratulate the President of the Company and his aides on their late gallant success, and encourage them to go on conquering and to conquer, till the road is an assured fact. We have never lost faith in the ultimate existence of the road; but now we see it much nearer than before. However it will not do to forget that much, very much remains yet to be done, and that neither time nor opportunity must be lost in the prosecution of the project. We are, and have from the first, been especially desirous that some portion of the line should be constructed and put in running order at the earliest possible moment. This we consider of the highest importance, in that it will give to the world palpable proof of the intentions and desires of the company to put the road through at whatever cost. We would suggest that, as there is rumor of a desire on the part of the company to seek some modification in the terms of the by-law of this county, there should be an arrangement made whereby the money granted in this locality shall be devoted to the immediate construction of a given number of miles of the road centered from this town. This will not only be a benefit to the district in providing work for labor, but will be a guarantee to the people that the money handed over by the county is to be handed over to the company only as the work progresses, and it is constructed. Of course, all these preparations of the day.

Editorial Notes.

The Peterborough Brick and Tile manufacturing company's establishment in this town has been closed. How is this for the N. P. hum?

The inquest in the Smith-Turner case, particulars of which will be found on the first page of this paper, has been further adjourned till to-day.

A third weekly paper is being started in Port Hope. The town will have things hot for a while, but after a time it will be the newspaper which has the most money that will hang on.—We won't invest in any stock just yet.

The London Advertiser says:—A gentleman prominently connected with a monetary institution of this city informs us that within the past few weeks many of the mortgages which are made out bear the words "payable in gold." This shows the feeling of distrust which is engendered by any attempt to create non-redeemable currency the legal tender of the Dominion.

All the Tory papers have now had a chance to say their say on the customs collections for August. It is remarkable that none of them, while insisting that there has been no falling off of revenue, thought it worth while to point out that the chief duties collected were on coal and breadstuffs, the home production of which was to have been fostered by the N. P. But the pesky tariff utterly refuses to fulfil their promises. How could it?

The Rev. G. S. White has replied to the letter published by Mr. John White, M. P., ex-Grand Master of the Orange Order, and his version of the assault upon himself at the recent Grand Lodge meeting, places the M. P. in the position of a cowardly man. The Rev. gentleman says he was kicked three times in such a way that permanent injury may result. Our Orange brethren should amend their ritual if such proceedings are permitted in Grand Lodge.

Our esteemed Tory contemporary of Ottawa scouts the idea of Sir John Macdonald playing tricks with Earl Beaconsfield, and says that the people who think he would do such a thing must be "credulous boobies." So were those who believed him when he assured Lord Dufferin that there was nothing in the Pacific Scandal charges, or when he used the name of the Diety in expressing his eagerness to catch Riel.—London Advertiser.

A contemporary says: "The premises of the A. M. Gibson Manufacturing Company at Mitchell, (Ont.) valued at $60,000 were put up at auction last week, but were withdrawn—$10,000 being the highest bid elicited," "On the other hand, the Montreal Gazette says: "Our manufacturing industries have sprung into new life and activity, and are now employing more operatives than any other time since the late trade panic commenced." We question very much whether the shareholders of the A. M. Gibson Manufacturing Company will altogether agree with our Montreal contemporary.

Some Councillor seems to have been caught by a proposal for a scheme of municipal insurance, whereby the town may become its own surety against losses by fire. Would it be voluntary or compulsory? If voluntary, how many would insure? If compulsory, how enforce it? It is all very well to figure up surplus premiums; but supposing a time did come when the losses exceeded the premiums, (as is quite possible) how would the deficiency be made good? Through this contingency do not our readers see a blasted and a bankrupt town? Better not play with fire.

Again a mountain has been in labour; and again has come forth a mouse. After months of "consideration" the Dominion government has granted to ship-builders a drawback on the iron and paint actually used in the construction of vessels. Of this regulation the St. John, N.B., Telegraph says:—

"It has been pretty clearly demonstrated that while the old duties on a ship of 1000 tons might reach a sum of $700, the new National Policy duties would amount to more than $2,000, that be so, and we are informed by practical men, whose details we are at liberty to use, that it is a good deal under the mark, we need hardly say that the drawback on iron and paint will not go far towards meeting the extra burdens imposed on shipbuilding. Iron and paint, indeed! There ought to be free importations of varnish and ink in order to brighten up the National Policy and cover its defects.

On the 5th July, 1879, just before Sir L. Tilley floated the last loan, these securities were quoted:—

Cons ls, ex div.	93⅜ 2 6
N. S. Wales, 6 per cents, ex div.	99 0 0 to 102 0 0
Canadian 4 per cents.	96 10 0 to 97 10 0
say (less interest).	97 0 0

THE RESULT OF COMPARISON.

Now, as my loan netted £90, and as Sir Leonard Tilley's was issued with such very large allowances that his (if the parties pay up at the stipulated times) will probably only net a few shillings over £93—say approximating £93 7s 6d—it is clear to a demonstration that, having reference either to the relative prices of English securities or the retail prices of our own or of Australian securities, Sir Leonard Tilley did not obtain a higher price than I did, and that if we chose to apply the same identical tests in his case which our opponents were foolish and malicious enough to do in mine, we would be justified in declaring that he had entirely failed in obtaining the best possible price for his loan.

UNFAIR CRITICISM EXPOSED.

They denounced me in the most unmeasured terms because, under circumstances of a very peculiar character, when the tone of the market was exceedingly unsettled, and the floating of a loan was very literally a question of a few hours, I was unable to obtain the extreme outside retail price then paid for small amounts of our own stock, and because I could not procure as high rates as our Australian fellow-colonists, though they knew, or ought to have known, that the main reason for the difference in price lay in the fact that about half the Australian loans are taken up and held by Australians, while I do not believe that in our case one per cent. is held by Canadians. Now Sir, those same identical wiseacres are lost in admiration of Sir Leonard Tilley's success, though he has utterly failed to obtain the highest retail price of our own securities, and has utterly failed to sell the securities at as high a rate as the Australians have obtained in several instances; and has failed too at a time when the ordinary rate of interest was lower than it has ever been before, and when there was an extraordinary and unprecedented accumulation of bullion both in England and in France, and when the market was as quiet as such a market is ever likely to be.

CIRCUMSTANCES FAVORING THE TILLEY LOAN.

Sir, in comparing these loans we must remember that there was such a concurrence of favourable accidents as have never occurred before in the history of the Stock Exchange, and as in all likelihood may never occur again for several generations, at the moment when the late loan was issued. The gold in the Bank of England had reached the remarkable figure of $175,000,000, and the gold and silver in the Bank of France that of $460,000,000. In other words these two great Banks held $635,000,000 of specie between them, while the rate of interest had fallen for short loans to one-half of one per cent. per annum, and for long ones for good negotiable paper to seven-eights of one per cent. per annum. In other words when Sir Leonard Tilley was calling out 4 per cent. bonds in London you could borrow money there, if your credit was good, on your note of hand at the rate of 87 cents for each hundred dollars. This was a wholly unexampled state of things, and in my judgment should have been taken advantage of better than it was. I repeat that I consider the loan on the whole a good one, but I by no means agree that it was under the circumstances, more than a fairly good one; and in one very important particular, to which I had myself expressly called Sir Leonard Tilley's attention on the floor of Parliament, I hold that he has entirely failed to avail himself of the manifest advantages of the position.

THE SINKING FUND BURDEN.

So long ago as last March I formally warned him in Parliament that I believed that he ought in his next loan to abolish the provision for any additional sinking fund, for the very plain reason that our present sinking fund is becoming so disproportionately large that it threatens to become an embarrassment instead of an assistance, being, I believe the largest, in proportion to our debt and income, of any State of equal standing. Now, by his own estimates, our sinking fund, without the last addition, amounts to $1,160,000, and is increasing by its own operation at the rate of $56,000 a year, and it is more than time that this nonsense should be stopped, as I had fully decided it should had I remained Minister of Finance. Sir, I am quite well aware of the plea which Sir Leonard Tilley will put up. He will plead that his London brokers, the fashionable house of Cassels, did not recommend this. Should his representations be well founded, they only serve to show how little the London brokers know of the real position of affairs. But I am not prepared to believe that Sir Leonard Tilley will plead any such excuse. He will say that he was not prepared to ask for the abolition of the sinking fund, and that he was compelled to yield to the general feeling that a Minister of Finance who means his business knows when to overrule his advisers, and that under the circumstances he both could and ought to have overruled himself from the platform, and asked the $75,000 a year for the bankruptcy fund or a sinking fund during the whole currency of this loan; and as the Ministerial supporters will force me to speak out I say that which may never recur, has been thrown away, and that we are saddled for the next thirty years or so with this annual charge of $75,000 uselessly and unnecessarily. These, gentlemen, are the simple facts in connection with these transactions, and if the several Ministerial journals which have been so long calling attention to Sir. Leonard Tilley's loan do not altogether relish their being brought forward, they may remember that they have spared no pains to compel me so put them before the public on the first suitable opportunity.

A GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY

Alnwick.

A YOUNG INDIAN'S LOVE.—HE WOOS, WINS, AND CARRIES OFF A PALE-FACE BRIDE OF SWEET SIXTEEN.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Last week I briefly sent you an account of a recent elopement case. To-day I find the following further particulars in the Globe which might be interesting to a portion of your readers.

COBOURG, Oct. 10.—That the course of true love never did run smooth was again exemplified here to-day in the trials of Richard Black, a young Indian charged with making a false affidavit in order to procure a marriage license, and also abducting Frances Margaret Taylor, a young woman whom he made his wife. The facts brought out in evidence are these.

Richard Black belongs to the band of Chippewa Indians settled at the village of Alderville in the township of Alnwick, in the county of Northumberland. Black has fifty acres of good land of his own on the reservation. He is about twenty-one years of age, with intelligent features, and has received a very fair education, as the letter below indicates. He has been working in the township as a farm hand and as a brickyard labourer. Everybody speaks well of him. Rev. Mr. Beatty, the Presbyterian minister who performed the marriage ceremony in question, says of the young man in his evidence:—"He appeared to me to be more intelligent, more straightforward—in fact he made a better appearance than half of those who do come before me." Black has been paying attentions to Frances Margaret Taylor, the daughter of a farmer in the same township who worked what is called the Mission Farm, and also a farm of his own not far off. She was born Nov. 13, 1863, consequently she is now within a month of fifteen years of age. She is said to be good looking, of prepossessing address, and of well-developed proportions, which led the clergyman to believe her to be eighteen years of age. The charge against the prisoner was that he in making an affidavit that the girl was eighteen years of age and that she had her father's consent for the marriage. The license issuer removed the affidavit. The parents denied that they had ever given consent, and the clergyman testified to marrying the couple on September 25th last. The father said he had only once heard of their keeping company, and he then forbade it. The parents knew nothing further till the daughter was missed about three weeks ago, and the window of her bedroom found open. The prisoner was found guilty on the second count. The following letter came out in the trial:—

ALDERVILLE, Sept. 17, 1879.

Dearest Frank,—Having gone to Cobourg yesterday I regret to say I failed to procure a license. I got everything ready but the license. The reason was because the license issuer said that your parents must needs know of our marriage before he could issue a license, or otherwise I must swear an oath that we are both twenty-one years of age. But I was talking to some men that know something about the law. They said it was not absolutely necessary that the girl's parents should know of the marriage, for I did not tell who the girl was. However, I am going to try another place for the license. After I failed to get a license in Cobourg yesterday, I says to the marriage license issuer, "Well, if I cannot get what I demand of you," I says, "I can trust the girl's honour that she will wait patiently til we are of age." "Well," says he, "if she waits till she is twenty-one years of age I can go and take you in spite of your parents." As for me, I would willingly wait if we cannot do otherwise. Think of my darling, five years before you are of age! But if you really love me you will willingly wait. As for me, I love you above any person in this world. And now, to change the subject, I am going to Hastings at Campbellford to-day, so when I come back I am tell you what we can do, and in the meantime I hope your best wishes accompany me, my dear loving Frank. This is all this time from your dear and affectionate.

R. W. BLACK.

Good bye till I see you again. I hope it will not be long.

The prisoner was immediately afterwards placed on trial on the second charge, that of years of age. The witnesses were the same as in the previous case, and the evidence much to the same effect. The mother testified to her daughter going to bed on the night of the 23rd September, but on the 24thshe was missing; that on the 25th she found her in the prisoner's company, but after the marriage ceremony had been performed. It also came out that Black had been seen with a horse and buggy the night of the abduction, and had told another Indian that he was going to run away with the girl. The father of the young woman, when asked why he objected to the match, said it was because Black was an Indian, and he didn't want any Indian blood in his family, for he had ten enough of them. In this trial the jury were unable to agree and were discharged.

ABDUCTING A GIRL UNDER SIXTEEN

For the charge of perjury the prisoner was sentenced o imprisonment in the common gaol fe five calendar months. The Chief Justio was inclined to think that there were some false oaths that the law should not prosecute.

Testimonial from Capt. Joshua Harper

SACKVILLE, N. B., Feb. 13, 1877.

J. H. ROBINSON, Esq., St. John, N. B.

Dear Sir:—Early in October last I took a severe cold which settled on my lungs. After having a bad cough for about six weeks, I had a severe attack of bleeding from the lungs, while on a voyage from Queenstown to Dover. I had daily spells of bleeding for some days, until I lost about two gallons of blood, and was so weak as to be scarcely able to stand. I put back to Queenstown, where I received such medical assistance as enabled me to get home.

I saw an advertisement of your Phosphorized Cod Liver Oil Emulsion in a paper. I immediately sent and got a half dozen bottles, after taking which I feel myself a well man again. My weight which was reduced to 120 pounds, is now up to my usual standard of 152 pounds. Seeing what it has done for me, I can confidently recommend it to others afflicted with lung diseases.

Yours very truly,
(Signed.) JOSHUA HARPER,
of the barque "Mary Lowerison."

Robinson's Phosphorized Emulsion of Cod liver Oil with Lacto-Phosphate of Lime; prepared solely by J. H. Robinson, Pharmaceutical Chemist, St. John, N. B., for sale by Druggists and General Dealers. Price $1.00 per bottle; six bottles for $5.00. 41-2ins.

All the leading newspapers unite in urging farmers to dispose of their crops at once, while the present prices are ruling.

For all purposes of a Family Medicine, HAYARD'S YELLOW OIL is at the head of the list. It is used with unprecedented success, both internally and externally. It cures Sore Throat, Burns, Scalds, Frost Bites; relieves and often cures Asthma. 41-2ins.

FREE HARRY HILL, THE CHAMPION WRESTLER, No. 26 EAST HOUSTON STREET, New York.—I know of no remedy that will so quickly remove the disadvantages of the skin resulting from injuries, compressed pores of the joints, numbing and pains, the result of violence and exposure, as Gray's Liniment. It is a powerful remedy in all such cases, and I would not be without it. Sold by druggists, price 50 cents per bottle. 41-2ins.

Cobourg Intermediate Examination.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER.

SIR,—My attention has been drawn to your article on the "Intermediate Examinations," in the Cobourg World of the 3rd inst. It's a funny article throughout—the writer, if a man, must be a funny man. It is amusing to note how cautiously he proceeds with these statistics. How careful he is to omit all figures by means of which a comparison might be instituted! He then strikes out boldly and sums up in the following beautiful language: "we have not heard of any schools that have done a better year's work." Since ignorance is bliss, one can conceive only in part, the intent of the writer's happy unconsciousness, not to speak of the untold felicity of those whose intelligence is fed solely from his pen. True, the person who wrote the above, may not have heard of a "better year's work," the person, or committee of persons who dictated such a statement, should have been better informed. If the editor of the World will but cast his eagle eye over the column of the Peterborough EXAMINER, which should appear amongst his exchanges, he will find, in the issue of the 25th ultimo, an extract from the report of the High School Inspectors, in which the Cobourg Collegiate Institute stands away—away down on the list for "quality and quantity" of work done—in short, takes the eighteenth place among the High Schools and Collegiate Institutes of the province. Principal Jeffers and his efficient staff have so coped with the giant powers, as to win for the Peterborough Collegiate Institute the third place. For "qualification of masters" and "character of teaching," Cobourg and three others of equal merit rank fourteenth, while Peterborough ranks second in the Province.

These are the ungarnished facts of the case as gleaned from the only correct source of information—the official returns of the High School Inspectors; yet the World slides in an article—to dictation of somebody—as a salve for a lingering disaffection, while the roots of the disorder are reputed to lie concealed deep from the eyes of the public, and fed at the expense of a victimized community.

The statement in the columns of your contemporary seems to have been rashly made, yet made for a purpose—but for what purpose, Mam not in a position to say. It cannot be possible that the Collegiate Institute of our sister town has so far retrograded under its present management, as to render this a sort of last resort for retaining its Institute grant. The writer of the World's article would do well to note, that in this age of intelligence, the free exercise of 'buncombe and bombast' alone, can neither build up nor maintain the reputation of an educational institution in "this Canada of ours." The young men and women of this country have too much sense to be duped by bland smiles, and fair promises, couched in nice words, while conscious that the future which awaits them, calls for practical, vigorous minds—minds trained to diligent research, and schooled in those habits of thoughful investigation that make men self-reliant and enable them to cope successfully with the great questions of the day.

Less of lobbying for patronage—less of red-tape-ism—less of energies wasted on newspaper "puffs"—more of sympathy with students and more solicitude for their real welfare, will do more for the Cobourg Institute than all the newspaper articles in the World.

Yours, etc.,
BUSINESS.

Peterborough, Oct. 13th, 1879.

The Curling Rink Company.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR.—Can you inform a stockholder of the above company, why all the stockholders of the company were not notified of the annual meeting, which I understand was held on the 8th instant.

Yours truly,
STOCKHOLDER.

[We believe notice was given ten days prior to the meeting, according to law, in a newspaper. We might be allowed to suggest to the Directors the advisability of having a card dropped to each of the stockholders when an important meeting is being convened. It would at any rate do away with any unnecessary after-clap. —ED. EX.]

The Grange Trust.

(From the Owen Sound Tribune.)

Mr. R. J. Doyle, and a number of other gentlemen throughout the Province have been engaged for several months organizing a mammoth Loaning Company with a subscribed capital of One Million Dollars, with 10 per cent. paid up. The Provisional Directors have allotted the stock and called up 10 per cent. We understand about $40,000 have already been paid, and it is expected that in a very short time the whole amount will be paid in. The chief office is in Owen Sound, in Paterson's stone building, over the Tribune office. Branch offices will be opened in various parts of the Province. The stock is all subscribed by farmers, and as the harvest has been a good one, and prices pretty good, no doubt the balance of the call will soon be paid up, and the Company go into active operation. Mr. R. J. Doyle is the Secretary-Treasurer of the Provisional or Organization Board of Directors; John Creasor, Esq., of the firm of Creasor & Morrison, Barristers, Owen Sound, is the Solicitor; A. Grifford, Esq., of St. Vincent, is one of the Directors. No doubt these gentlemen will make it a success, as they are all good business men.

Market Fees.

Sarnia Observer.

The Galt Town Council have been discussing the advisability of abolishing the market fees in that town, and a motion to make the market for grain free was lost only by the close vote of 5 to 6. It is only in the older settled towns and villages that the custom of exacting fees from farmers attending the markets, continues in force. The newer and more enterprising centres of trade find it to their benefit to remove all restrictions and offer as many inducements as possible to the surrounding farmers to come in and dispose of their produce. They find that it stimulates trade, and that a great deal of the money obtained in the place from the sale of produce finds its way back into the hands of the storekeepers and thence to the general public. Sarnia clings to the old-fashioned principle of exacting fees from everyone who comes to sell his produce in the town, as if the town conferred a privilege upon the farmer by allowing him to sell his produce within its limits. This is a suicidal policy to pursue, in the face of the fact that every other town and village in the county offers a free market to the farmers. If we are desirous of securing our fair share of the business of the county we should urge upon our town council the necessity for removing all barriers against trade, and of making our market as attractive and convenient as possible.

VENOSTA CHEMICAL COMPANY, TORONTO :

Gentlemen,—Confirming my statement a short time ago, as to the satisfactory results from the use of your Compound Extract of Hypophosphites, I will further add that fresh proofs of the genuine benefits conferred on patients by your preparation are constantly coming under my observation; parties to whom I have recommended it, have in a short time, with the greatest satisfaction, purchased from [illegible] they have used, and [illegible] has caused [illegible] from [illegible] to [illegible] to [illegible] to [illegible] HYPOPHOSPHITES [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Early Autumn.

Sweet is the voice that calls
From babbling waterfalls
In meadows where the downy seeds are flying;
And soft the breezes blow,
And eddying odors go,
In faded gardens where the rose is dying.

Among the ripened corn
The lithe quail pipes at morn,
The merry partridge drums in hidden places,
And through the listless gloom
Above the ready stream
Where rosy spinners spin their slim laces.

At eve, cool shadows fall
Across the garden wall,
And on the clustered grapes to purple turning,
And pearly vapors lie
Along the eastern sky,
Where the broad harvest-moon is redly burning.

Ah, rare on field and hill
The winds shall whistle chill,
And purposeful swallows call their flocks together;
To fly from frost and snow,
And look for lands where blow
The fairer blossoms of a balmier weather.

The potion-dosed bees
Search for the honeyless
Tiny flower in the last flowers of September, [illegible] doves
Are ready to their loves
Of the dead summer that is well remember.

The cricket chirps all day,
"O latest Summer, stay!"
The spotted eyes embrace the chestnuts brown-ripe;
The wild-fowl fly afar
Above the fleeting bar
And hasten southward ere the skies are frowning.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, OCTR 16, 1879.

A WRETCHED NIGHT.

I had seen the last on my list of patients for that day, and coming home, wearied out with a hard day's work, had put on my slippers and dressing-gown and flung myself at length on my sofa, drawn up in front of a glowing anthracite fire, just in the humor for a comfortable perusal of the last Harper's, when suddenly I heard a loud ring from my office door-bell.

Now, I being a physician of several years' standing in New York, a ring at my door-bell was not a thing of such singularity as to require it to be noted in print. Neither was it in any way remarkable that it should occur at that hour of the night; for it is a peculiar idiosyncrasy of all persons who wish a doctor that they should obstinately choose the most inconvenient hours possible for him. Statistics show that more persons are born during the night than in the day-time. My friend and medical brother, Cynicus, says it is because the hours generally considered as proper for work being over, they have nothing else to do but to turn their attention to being born. But upon this point he and I do not agree. My belief is, that each one, anticipating the usage he is going to receive in this world, and ashamed to acknowledge that he wishes to form another item among the billion other items then existing, prefers to steal clandestinely, like a thief, under the cover of darkness, then appear, like an honest man, in the bright sunlight. Neither was a ring generally such an unwelcome sound to my ears that I should speak of it; for the loud, clanging jingle usually foretold a cheerful rattle from a much more valuable metal in my own pocket. But, as I said before, I was excessively tired; I was then very comfortable; and lastly it was terribly cold and stormy outside.

It was for these reasons that I rose so reluctantly and went to the door. I found there a diminutive specimen of an Irish girl whose face seemed familiar to me.

'Please, Sir, will you come up to the Triangle House?'

'Who for!' I asked, rather sharply.

'For Mr. Normanby, Sir.'

'Does he want me at once?'

'He didn't say he did; but Mr. Dyer, who has the next room to his, told me to go for you and tell you to come right away.'

'What is the matter now?'

'If you please, Sir, he has had another at them times, Sir, and made so much trouble they didn't know what to do with him.'

'Well, little girl, run home and say I will be there in a few minutes.'

The peculiarly bad English of the expression, 'them times,' used by the little girl would probably have been perfectly unintelligible to the majority of persons had they been standing there in my place; but I comprehended her meaning at once. Mr. Normanby, the person whom I had been summoned to see, was one of my best patients, that is, best in its signification of pecuniarily beneficial to me. He was rich, often employed, paid regularly—in fact, was a man, by no means to be neglected. But best, considered the superlative of good, and in relation to himself, he was not. He was a bachelor; had lived a gay, free life as a young man; and now, at the age of fifty, had returned to New York, and, living at a hotel, devoted the whole of his attention to killing time. This he had not found such an easy task as it would seem; and missing the stimulation of the excitement and dissipation of his youth, he had endeavored to supply its effects by alcohol. He was now a confirmed drunkard; but not one of those stupid gormands who intoxicate themselves each day from necessity or mere force of habit; there was a method, a reasoned system, about his debauchery, upon this he prided himself, as showing, as he asserted, that he still had command over himself. It was his custom, on the first of each month to begin to drink—not in company with others, and led on by the contagious example of convival companions, but alone, and with the express purpose of getting himself drunk as rapidly as possible. Large amounts were required to do this; and day after day, as the effects of his inebriety wore away; the stimulation was repeated. The result was, that, generally by the fourth day after the commencement of his orgie, his nervous system broke under his excessive excitement, and an attack of delirium tremens ensued. Under treatment and careful nursing, together with a good constitution, this was usually recovered from in two days. With the loss, therefore, of about twelve weeks out of each year, he was enabled to appear before the world as a useless, but apparently respectable citizen.

I knew previously that my patient had commenced his accustomed monthly stimulation; therefore the words 'them times' showed me plainly what was the matter with him, and what I was to be called upon to do.

The distance from my house to the hotel being quite short, but a few minutes had elapsed before I was in the chamber of my patient. I found several persons—boarders in the hotel—collected in his room, engaged in unavailing attempts to restrain the uninterrupted stream of garrulity which all persons in his condition are prone to indulge in, or holding him down by force each time he attempted to rise and leave the room, they succeeded in exciting him still more by their attentions, and by their constant replies to his questions. I at once requested all of them to leave the room except Mr. Dyer, the gentleman before referred to, who, in addition to being a personal friend of Mr. Normanby's, was known to me as a sensible, trustworthy man, from having several times before, assisted me on occasions similar to this.

My first business, after their departure, was to examine the patient. I found him in a much more wild and excited state than ordinarily under his attacks. It was evident that he had taken much more than his usual amount of stimulant, and had continued it for a longer period, the reactive excitement was consequently proportionally greater. Still, however, there was nothing in his condition that portended more than a temporary trouble to him, or showed need of extra care on the part of myself; and as uniformly before quiet and silence had sufficed to dissipate the paroxysms, and simple abstinence and [illegible] nursing had been all that were called other than. I apprehended nothing different or different at this time, and looked forward to a return to my book with perhaps only a little [illegible] detention.

At my request, [illegible] my patient [illegible] had with [illegible] [illegible] consent of the [illegible] quiet remaining with him, which I had always before found my soothing and efficacious. His room, situated in the fourth storey of the hotel, was about 12 feet square—what is ordinary called a hall bedroom, that is it was the width of the main storey of the house. Its only door, which opened in the direction of the length of the entry, and facing the flight of stairs to the story above, was placed directly at the head of the bed. Opposite the bed, upon the other side of the door, stood the bureau. The sole window to the room fronted the foot of the bed and the door.

Much more readily than I expected his delirium and restless excitement seemed to vanish, and in course of half an hour he lay on quiet, his head with [illegible] and [illegible] and breathing with such regularity that I made up my mind I deceived myself a little in his case, and that his entire excitability and [illegible] for the presence of so many persons in the room. So tranquil did he become that, at about ten o'clock, Mr. Dyer, remarking that there seemed no necessity for his remaining longer, bade me good-night and retired to his room, which was but a short distance down the entry. It was agreed, however, between us, that before my departure I should call at his room, when, if I considered it necessary, he would take my place and stay in the room with his friend the rest of the night or, at all events, would remain up and be within hearing, so as to render any assistance which might be required.

A few minutes later, and I also rose to leave. Going for my hat, which was upon a chair by the window, I turned my back for a moment upon the bed. As I did so the creaking of the bedstead attracted my attention, and I turned suddenly around. With his back to the door, his face deadly pale, and expressing the most settled determination, his eyes shining with the peculiar green, almost phosphorescent glare of the wildest insanity, stood my late quiet and tractable patient. But one moment was allowed me for this hasty glance, when opening the drawer of the bureau immediately at his right hand, he took from it a small can, and almost before I could realize his movements was brandishing in each hand an open razor.

There is no instrument in the world which has always seemed to me so blood-thirsty and terrible, or inspires me with such a nervous dread when about to use it, as a razor. This may arise from the frequent cases I have seen of perversions of its use to purposes of suicide, or from its deadly power as compared with its legitimate, simple and innocent use. But a thrill has always come over me through me on seeing it held open in a person's hand when no sensation of the kind would be experienced from seeing a sword, dagger, or knife in the same position.

It would convey no idea of my feelings to say that I was horrified at this sight. Neither could it be said that I was frightened, for though by no means a bold man I experienced no sensation like what I call fear. The predominant idea, as I remember it, was wonder, or rather surprise. The shock was too sudden, too unexpected, for me to feel either alarm or horror. The change from the position of perfect repose to that of full life and action—from the corpse-like stillness of a sleeper to the violent, quick, sharp movements of a person under the wildest nervous excitement—was so remarkable, so bizarre, as it were, that I can express my feelings no better than by saying that I tried to guess what he would probably do next. The thought of preventing him from doing as he wished never flashed through my mind, for though a person notoriously collected on trying occasions, and having already experienced my full share of perils, and though by springing forward I could have seized and perhaps prevented his opening his razor-case, it never occurred to me to move, but I stood like a statue looking at him.

For full five minutes we stood silent and motionless, intently watching each other. At last in a voice which, by its unnatural distinctness and calm, cool intonation, as it was, forced through his compressed teeth seemed other than his own, he broke the stillness, which was getting to be absolutely painful.

'Doctor,' he said, 'sit down there!' pointing to the chair by the window.

I did not stir. Undecided exactly what to do, or what might be his next movement, and not liking to turn my back to him in order to comply with his request, I continued in the same position as before. Again that order came in its curt, icy distinctness from his jaws, which seemed absolutely not to move while he pronounced the words. But this time it was sharper, more of a command than a request; still I did not alter my posture.

One-half minute passed and he came toward me. It seemed to me that he did not walk but absolutely glided over the floor, so elastic and cat-like were his movements. With irresistible force, with his hand placed upon my breast, he pushed me toward the chair, while the very intensity of his will power and determination was revealed as he absolutely hissed into my ear for the third time his command, 'Doctor, you must take that chair!' Then for the first time, as breast to breast we stood, so that I could look directly into his eye, a feeling of terror seized me. In a moment I fully realized his own immense moral and physical power, and my own helplessness. All the fractional fears which one ordinarily experiences in the course of a lifetime seemed in that second condensed into an aggregation of horror of which I had no conception. There stood my patient, forcing me slowly back, with his left hand holding one razor, placed against my chest just below my throat, while the other razor was held but a few inches from my chin. His face was deadly pale. His lips, compressed and perfectly bloodless, were flecked with foam which bubbled up under his full, deep expirations. Occasionally a slight spasmodic tremor passed over them, but except this sign of life his countenance was as impassive and immovable as the face of the dead, or a statue cut from marble. I could not then have called aloud even had I wished it. I was fascinated, quelled by the cold, unearthly gleam which shot from his eyes as effectually as if I had been looking upon the head of Medusa. Perfectly powerless in his hands, I quietly followed the impulsion given my body, and seated myself in the chair.

'Sit up straight—so!' was the next order given by him, he at the same time suiting the action of his body to the word. 'Now, fold your arms. There, now hold up your head!'

These commands were given by him as he stood directly in front of me, and were obeyed with a most commendable degree of alacrity. But the position was by no means comfortable. The chair in which I was seated was at all times from its angularity and hardness a fair model for a stool of repentance; but trussed up as I then was, my chin at an angle of forty-five degrees, it became to me the most torturing of anxious seats.

After running his eyes slowly over my whole person, and apparently satisfied with my appearance and posture, my patient returned to his post with his back to the door. A dreary silence ensued upon this last movement—not a word was said or a motion made by either party for, it seemed to me, an hour. At last he again turned to me and said, 'You can't go from here to-night, Doctor, I want you—I shall not let you go—you must stay here with me.' As none of these happened to be questions, and as the consultation of my countenance did not seem to be apparent in his thoughts, and as I could do no more than mildly suggest that I thought him rather unreasonable, and should be very happy to go, I said not a word but continued to stare diligently at the blank white surface of the opposite wall.

Time rolled on. The seconds, long as they passed, grew into minutes, and these into hours; but still I sat in the same position, and motionless at his post, stood my sentinel at the door. The most vivid imagination cannot picture how oppressive was that perfect stillness. Except when some small piece of plastering fell rattling down upon the inside of the wall, or the clicking of the signs as they swung in the strong wintry wind, and the ceaseless, regular dropping of the rain from the roof upon an adjoining leader, and a round house often described silence the house. The slightest movement on my part sufficed to throw him into a violent excitement—evidenced by the quick start of his whole body—and to bring upon me a look which made my blood run cold. Once only during this long period did he himself vary the monotony, and this interlude was not of such a character as to indicate a wish for its repetition. Inspired, apparently, with some sudden and uncontrollable whim, he rushed toward me and commenced a Terpsichorean exhibition which completely put to blush the most diabolical war-dance ever devised by a Comanche Indian, or the polka infernale in Le Ciel et L'Enfer. He darted forward, and then back, he leaped, like an ape, almost over my head; he whirled around on his own axis, like a spinning dervish—at the same time slowly circumnavigating me—with such rapidity that I could scarcely see the outlines of his form.

A Summer Idyl.

He was a dear dollycostical-looking chap, from head to foot. He wore eye-glasses and had curly hair. By gazing upon him you could almost tell the exact number of sonnets contained in his pocket. He had a blue flannel suit and a pleasant smile. She was a country maiden, practical and innocent. They walked down a fragrant meadow and paused beneath a spreading oak. He was the first to break the silence:

'Isn't this lovely?'

'O, ain't it?' she replied.

'Yes,' he went on, as he planted his chin in one hand and contemplated the vista of skyland, 'this is simply divine. To sit here and breathe the soft, cool summer wind, fraught with the charming fragrance of violet and rose, is just enchanting.'

She said nothing.

'Isn't that a majestic mountain over there towering into the fleecy clouds? Isn't that a lovely little brook pattering in baby syllables over the innocent little pebbles?'

'Kinder,' she responded.

'Yes,' he continued, as he planted his chin in the other hand for a change, 'summer is the heaven of the year. Just look at those happy birds darting through the air from tree to tree and flooding the valley with exquisite bursts of song. Wouldn't you like to be a bird, pet?'

'I'd rath'r be a girl and eat ice cream,' she said, with a twinkle of Arcadian simplicity in her merry hazel eyes.

This seemed to ruffle the poet considerably, but he managed to gain his equilibrium sufficiently to go on.

'Behold those golden-winged butterflies; don't they fly languidly, as though their winged lives were one smooth period of bliss and uninterrupted happiness?'

'Yes,' she responded; 'and they flap their wings like door-mats, don't they?'

After ten minutes of silence of the most profound description, he ventured to speak again.

"And there go the merry bees in golden flotillas, coqueting with the breeze-waved flowers.'

She kept still.

'But soon all these pretty things will vanish like a lover's dream. The flowers will fade, the leaves will fall, the birds will migrate, and the emerald tapestry of the lea will become the couch of the snowflake. The lithen will vanish from the lake, and the sunset will glimmer on the barren limb, and melt the snow in the empty nest.'

He paused for breath, and she whispered:

'And then we'll have to indulge in buckwheat cakes and heavy underclothes, won't we?'

He could not go any further with his remarks, so they got up and wandered away.

The Irish Land Question.

New York, October 7.—A Herald's London special of the 6th says: The mass meetings which yesterday assembled all over Ireland to discuss the Land Question form to-day the theme of lively debate. According to this morning's papers they show that two currents are at work. The more moderate men advocate as a practical step the concentration of all the country's energy in procuring a total change of the existing system of Irish land tenure, and in making farmers either owners of the soil or joint owners with the landlords. This scheme would involve little dislocation of the existing arrangement for the distribution of the land. It could be accomplished by developing the principles of Gladstone's Land Act. The majority of experienced parliamentary men support this view. Parnell and others of the more extreme section say it is an excellent plan in itself, and yet it does not meet the urgency of the impending crisis. Tenants should refuse to pay rents which have been always oppressive, or which are made so by the pressure of hard times. If they were to stand together in every part of Ireland they could not all be driven off the land. There was no need of physical force; passive resistance would secure the victory. William Shaw, M. P., declared that the results of the present harvest were not so bad as in the past two years. The people of Ireland need not be alarmed. The crisis is exaggerated by selfish men for their own private purposes, but as for the landlords, their letters prove that as a class they are frightened. There is no doubt they will resist, and that they will strive to obtain from the Government such measures as may fortify their resistence.

London, October 8.—In consequence of the disturbances by roving bands of ribbonmen, the Government has ordered two squadrons of dragoons and a company of infantry to be stationed at Ballincrobe and Castlebar.

A Shrewd Scot.

Sir John McNeill, a shrewd Scotch diplomatist, gained the repute of being the only European who ever got the better of a dervish. During the New-Year festival the Persian religious mendicants ply their vocation most vigorously, not merely asking for alms, but demanding such sums as they deem proper, according to the rank of the giver. A dervish tried to extract an extravagant tribute from Sir John, and the ambassador proving obstinate, proceeded to 'sit upon him;' that is to say he established himself in Sir John's garden just before his study windows, and relieved his feelings by making a hideous hullabaloo day and night. The diplomatist was inclined to make short work of the nuisance, but was warned that violent measures would be dangerous. 'Get rid of him if you can,' said his Persian advisers, 'but do not touch him.' Sir John sent for a bricklayer, and gave the order: 'Build a wall all round that howling beggar in my garden, and then roof it in.' The dervish looked on composedly while the wall slowly rose around him, and made more noise than before; but when the roofing process commenced, and he awoke to the knowledge that it was really intended to entomb him alive, he clambered over the wall, and rushed away like a madman, never to trouble McNeill again.

Singular Case of Mistaken Identity.

A Woman Marries the Wrong Man.

HALIFAX, Oct. 10.—A curious case occurred here last night. On Wednesday night a female sought protection at the police station. She said she was to be married the night following to a corporal of marines. Last night she turned up at church, but instead of the corporal a private of marines appeared to fill the post of bridegroom. He had a license, and the other did not notice the change for a moment, or did not care, and the ceremony was performed. It turned out the Corporal was drinking at a saloon to nerve him for the expected task, while the private, who had previously arranged to cut him out, was being married. All were subsequently met in a bar room. The latter was filled with grief, and observing half a dozen around the neck of the man who should have been her husband, swore she would never have him. The colloquial and unconventional natives then indulged in a long and loud fistic combat. The bride refused to live with her husband and he left her.

Clean Your Barley.

The following standard has been adopted for the inspection of this year's crop of barley:

No. 1. To be bright and well cleaned, and to weigh not less than 50 lbs. per Imperial bushel.

No. 2. To be reasonably bright, to be sound and well cleaned, and to weigh not less than 47 lbs. per Imperial bushel.

No. 3. To be sound and well cleaned, and to weigh not less than 44 lbs. per Imperial bushel.

All barley weighing under 44 lbs. per Imperial bushel, will be cleaned as "ungraded."

Frightful Disaster.

DETROIT, Oct. 10.—On the Michigan Central railroad a short distance east of Jackson, about one this morning, the Pacific express train bound west collided with a switch engine telescoping the baggage and express cars, and piling the remaining eleven coaches on top of the others. The first coach was filled with emmigrants, most of whom were killed or seriously injured. Many of the occupants of the other coaches were killed or injured. It is supposed 20 or 25 passengers were killed and 20 to 30 wounded. The majority of the number are thought to be emigrants and second class passengers. Physicians were at once summoned from Jackson. A special train, carrying physicians left Detroit at five o'clock. A large force of employees of the railroad, with a number of citizens of Jackson are on the ground extricating the bodies. The engineer and fireman of the express train were literally torn to pieces. The engineer and fireman of the switch engine escaped by jumping.

As the sullen thunder betokens a rising storm, so are the storms of revolution heralded by the smallest menaces of an oppressed people.

Hope thrills the heart and nerves the arm to heroic exertions; despair paralyzes the soul benumbs the brain, and makes of it a victim an unburied corpse.

Some woods and valleys are so quiet that it would seem the bosom of death were it not for the nature's life that lies sleeping therein.

Out of suffering have emerged the strongest souls; the most massive characters are seamed with scars; martyrs have put on their coronation robes, glittering with fire, and through their tears have the sorrowful first seen the gates of Heaven.

Above all other earthly gifts a good mother stands pre-eminent; she is bound by a sacred tie to her child—one that can never be broken; to the very steps of the scaffold she will follow him, pray for him, and always believe that he was innocent.

PETITT'S EYE-SALVE.

An Infallible Remedy for all Diseases of the Eye (acute or chronic), Granulation of the Lids, Ulceration of the Lachrymal Glands, Film, and Weakness of the Vision from any cause.

THE AMERICAN EYE-SALVE is presented the public with the assurance of its efficiency as a curative of the most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflamation whetner induced by scrofulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diminished tone of the optic nerve, or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ. Also for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the Salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, where weakness, pain, and misery may have long threatened a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe, and effective remedy ever discovered. The materials of which it is made are pure, perfect, and costly, compounded with elaborate care and exactness safe in its application, being used externally, and, of course, lessening the pain and danger, which necessarily attends the introduction of minerals and eye-washes. RINGWORM and OLD CHRONIC SORES, of scrofulous origin, or resulting from whatever cause, yield to the AMERICAN EYE-SALVE. It is used successfully; for Piles. Its soothing effect is immediate, permanent cure requires but a few applications. The proprietors of "Dr. J. PETITT'S AMERICAN EYE-SALVE," while making new and improved machinery for making a more perfect box for the Eye-Salve, have changed the Trade Mark on the cover so as to correspond with the Cut on the Wrapper, Circulars, Advertisements, etc. We call attention to this, as it might otherwise be regarded as counterfeiting.

As Surely as Effect follows Cause.

As surely as effect follows cause, so surely will disease eventually fasten itself upon a system deficient in vital energy, if tonic medication is not resorted to in time. The necessary tendency of a weak discharge of the functions of the body is to disorder its organs. Invigoration, prompt and thorough, is the only safeguard. No renovant of depleted physical energy, no restorative of lost flesh, nerve power and cheerfulness, has more clearly demonstrated its efficacy than Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine. In this preparation, associated with the salutary medicines which forms its basis, is pure sherry wine and certain romantic constituents, which impart an agreeable taste to the article, and give additional emphasis to its effects. In cases of general debility and dyspepsia it is invaluable and the desired effect is, in the vast majority of cases, remarkably prompt as decisive. That good natural appetite, which gives a relish for the coarsest fare is insured by the use of Quinine Wine, which also confers brain soothing and body refreshing sleep. Fever and ague and bilious remittent fever, are diseases to the eradication of which it is specially adapted; but it should be used only in the intervals between the seizures. The far-reaching effects of a good tonic, in all complaints involving loss of physical energy, are well understood by physicians, and the comprehensive influence for good of this preparation upon the system goes far to bear out the professional belief in the value of invigorants as opponents of disease. Be sure to ask for the "Quinine Wine" prepared by Northrop & Lyman, Toronto. Sold by all druggists.

Joy Among the Children.

COPELAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 600 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administering nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having them pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and while equally safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is honey; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—'My children drink it like water;' another—'My little girl has taken it twice without my knowing, and does not know what it is, though she knows the ordinary Castor Oil and we never could get her to take it without a fight; just another—'I wish you success of your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—sure to take the place of all the common oil.'

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a simple household medicine has brought fraudulent imitations into the market, but the public can guard themselves against such frauds (which manufacturers are attempting to spill on the reputation of this article) by seeing that the name of 'COPELAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL,' is on both wrapper and directive label.

The undersigned having purchased Messrs. T. Copland & Co.'s interest in the above preparation, are now manufacturing it from the Original recipe. Manufactured by NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto.

PETERBORO' BRANCH, - DIXON'S BLOCK.

Goods Sold Direct to the People at Wholesale Price.

The Only Business in Canada Conducted on the Same Principle.

Over $200,000 Worth of Boots and Shoes so Supplied Last Year.

The great loss annually sustained by selling to Dealers, first led to our establishing of Branch Stores, where we could supply direct to the people for Cash all the goods we could manufacture, thus giving to the people the goods less the dealer's profit, and saving to ourselves the annual loss. We were the more forcibly impressed into this step from the fact that cheap Eastern-made shoddy goods were being palmed off as our goods. We now sell our own goods, warrant what we sell, use no shoddy or inferior material of any kind, and can and do supply goods of the best quality 25 per cent. less than they can be bought elsewhere.

Everything Marked in Plain Figures. Only One Price.

CUSTOM DEPARTMENT.

Our arrangements are now complete in this department, and we can make to measure promptly either Ladies', Gentlemen's, or Children's Goods, in the Latest Styles, at little over half the price usually charged.

EAST PETERBOROUGH FALL SHOW.

A Successful Exhibition.—Fine Weather and large attendance.—Large increase in Entries.

The eleventh annual Fall Show of the East Riding of Peterborough Agricultural Society, was held at Norwood, on Tuesday and Wednesday last, the 14th and 15th instant. The same pleasant weather that has so far contributed to the success of all shows this season, prevailed on the above days at Norwood, and no doubt to it is due some of the credit for the large exhibit and attendance at the East Riding show. The hotels as usual were taxed to their utmost capacity. The entries showed a large increase—over two hundred over last year, and a very perceptible improvement in the quality of the exhibit in every department, and the financial results are equally gratifying. The first day was occupied in receiving and arranging the inside exhibit in the drill shed, the stock not requiring to be on the ground till 11 a.m., on Wednesday, and the energetic and indefatigable Secretary of the society, Mr. W. E. Roxburgh, was on the move all morning, receiving and arranging articles and issuing tickets. In this he was assisted by an efficient staff of directors. From the business like manner in which everything was done, it would appear that the management of the society was in good hands. Everything a place could be found for was, brought inside, and the consequence was a compact and neatly arranged exhibit The live stock was exhibited on the show grounds in the south eastern part of the village, commencing about noon and lasting until late in the afternoon. The drill shed as usual was the centre of attraction for the ladies, and for not a few of the sterner sex. Therein was displayed a profusion of wonderful handiwork comprising the prettiest specimens of ladies work. The embroidery, braiding, crochet, knitting, tatting and worsted work were admirable. The specimens of home manufactures, such as quilts, coverlets, rag carpeting, blankets, &c., reflected infinite credit on the industry of our farmers' wives and daughters, as many other articles did on their extreme neatness and taste. The dairy products were of the highest quality and gave no little trouble to the judges. Mention should by no means be omitted of the fine display of flowers. The display of horticultural products was a capital one, and it is not often that finer lots of apples and grapes, especially the former, are to be seen. The exhibit of grain, roots and vegetables was splendid. It is but rarely that such magnificent samples of grain are to be seen at any show. On the second day the show of stock was exceedingly good, although the number was, if our memory seems us right, not up to last year, and the Ayrshires seem to be taking the foremost place. The horse ring as usual formed the main centre of attraction. The draught, general purpose and roadster, and in fact all classes, except the saddle horses, were notably good. Considering the character of the past season, they were all in fair condition. In the draught, general purpose, and roadster, quite a keen competition took place, nearly all the horses presenting a capital appearance. As the different classes, when called by the judges, entered the ring, all kinds of remarks could be heard about their speed, accompanied by speculation as to the probable winner. Saddle horses came next. They were decidedly a poor lot, and had not been properly "broke." Considerable excitement was created when the riders brushed up their steeds for a trial of speed. Here some very indifferent equestrianship was shown as they swept around the track. The exhibit of sheep was a large one, and many fine animals were on exhibition, and from the long-wooled, clean-headed, straight, broad-backed Leicester, to the short-wooled, long-necked and fine-boned Southdowns, there was presented an exhibition well worthy of admiration. The hogs and poultry were severally very good, and fully equal to anything exhibited in former years. The Norwood Brass Band, under the leadership of Mr. Mullins, was in attendance. They played a very fine programme in a manner that did them credit. Altogether the show was a grand success, and the management are to be congratulated on the general satisfaction fully expressed by the immense crowd, who did themselves the great pleasure of being present. Our thanks are due to R Birdsall, Esq., and W. E. Roxburgh, Esq., for courtesies received while attending the show. The following is a complete list of the prizes awarded:—

PETERBOROUGH, OCTR 23, 1879.

COTTON MANUFACTURE AND CANADIAN CAPITAL.

The importation of machinery for a new cotton mill in Cornwall affords our N. P. contemporaries a text for an exhortation on the beauties and benefits of Protection. But let us see. There are now seven cotton mills in Canada. This at Cornwall will make the eighth, and another projected one at West Farnham the ninth. Where is the product of all these mills to be sold? Already the seven existing ones hold heavy stocks; and the same may be said of the merchants who might be otherwise expected to buy from them. Cottons have fallen in price in the United States, and rates of sales must fall here also. Where is all this manufactured cotton to go? Much more, where is the constant product of all the old and two new mills to be sold. It can't go to the United States. That protected country has too much of its own at low, cut prices. It can't go to Britain to compete with the more cheaply produced cottons of that country. It can't go anywhere and hold its own where it is outside the area of the Canadian N. P. It must, then, stay in Canada. But there's too much of it to supply the home demand. "Then prices will fall, and we'll get cheap cottons, thanks to the N.P.!" cries the enthusiastic Tory. But he forgets that he is thereby corroborating the warnings given by Free Trade and Revenue Tariff advocates before this precious N. P. ever saw the light that shows so plainly its darkness and deformity. Lower prices for their goods means less profits to the manufacturers. We must either curtail production or lessen the cost thereof. This means lower wages, and less work to the operative. This also was predicted by the true "friends of the workingman" before the elections last year. But there is still another view. The large capital invested in a cotton mill cannot be allowed to lie utterly idle. Work must go on in some degree, if only to pay interest on the outlay. But even forced work adds to our over-stocked market, and the time soon comes when the struggle must end in bankruptcy and loss of capital, that should and would have been safely and profitably employed in some other way but for the boasted N. P., that leads capitalists to ruin while it drives working people to despair. Thanks to a kind Providence in sending us a bountiful harvest, Canada may be able to endure the severe and dire effects of Protection more easily than she otherwise would; but the evil cannot be entirely overcome, nor the the trouble quite escaped, as all Canadians will see before very long.

THE HON. EDWARD BLAKE.

We are happy to be able to announce that Hon. Edward Blake will take his seat in the House of Commons next session, all being well. Mr. Burke has resigned his seat for West Durham in order to make room for Mr. Blake, a graceful act, for which his constituents will respect him, seeing that it gives them a chance to once more elect their old and talented representative. Mr. Blake we are aware did not have any strong desire to enter Parliament immediately. It may be, however, that frequent references made to him of late by the leading Tory journal, as holding himself aloof from the Reform party, has induced him to accept a constituency sooner than he otherwise would have done. The praises of the Mail will now be cancelled by abuse and disparagement of Mr. Blake, whom it and it's political friends would rather not see in the House of Commons. Mr. Blake in Parliament means a strong, intelligent, persevering and united opposition, and a troubled and uncomfortable lot of Ministers, whose sins will find them out all the more quickly, by contrast with their predecessors, and through the medium of those who proved that they possessed the sterling virtue of standing by those principles they deem for the good of their country, even though that country for the time turned from them. The Reform party cannot have too many of Mr. Blake's

SIR A. T. GALT IN ENGLAND.

Sir Alex. Galt, speaking in England, for the Dominion Government, defended the present Canadian tariff on the ground that it was necessary for the revenue. Now, this is what the members of the Government for whom he speaks, and their supporters at the late election declared the so-called N. P. was not. The Reform party advocated a merely revenue tariff, such as Sir Alex. Galt in England now pretends to affect; but the Tory leaders and their following demanded a tariff for the protection of home industries. They dilated on the great necessity of manufacturers as a help to agriculture, but now Sir Alex. Galt tells the English that "our almost inexhaustible wheat and pasture lands in Canada will never become manufacturing districts." Here is an admission that the Ministry which sent him to England willfully deceived the people they pretend to represent. No doubt Sir Alex. Galt spoke as instructed. But why is it that the present Canadian Ministers on every matter dealt of in England have to take an entirely different stand there from their proclaimed policy here? Is it not because their political purposes have been founded in deception and built from falsehood; and that the style of the structure cannot be changed? This is the only explanation for such widely divergent positions in Canada and England on matters that should be outside the region of doubt in either country.

BUSINESS FAILURES.

During the past three months the number of failures in the Dominion, exceed by more than one-third the failures for the corresponding quarter of 1878; while the amount involved was one-half larger. The failures for the third quarter of 1879 have been 417, and the liabilities $5,996,617. During the same period last year the failures were 295, and the liabilities $4,629,592. In fact the amount involved by the failures in Canada for the quarter ending June 30, 1879, was almost as much as the total liabilities in the United States during the same period. The population of the United States is easily ten times that of Canada, while in point of wealth the disproportion is still greater. Even on the basis of population the failures in Canada were five times as disastrous to the commercial community as those in the United States. The Canadian figures of failures furnish corroborative proof to that which has come from other sources that a protective tariff is not a panacea for hard times.

Editorial Notes.

Judge Betourney, of Manitoba, has decided that Hon. D. A. Smith is entitled to his seat as member for Selkirk.

The Conservatives of Ottawa are pronouncing themselves in favor of a national currency as well as a "National Policy."

The Quebec Assembly will meet on the 28th, and from present appearances Mr. Joly will meet the House with a safe majority.

In response to a proposition from the Minister of Justice, the City of Fredericton has taken the necessary steps to test the validity of the Canada Temperance Act, 1878, in the Supreme Court of the Dominion.

Among a number of applicants for the County-Attorneyship of the new county of Dufferin, a name that meets with considerable favor is that of Mr. R. M. Fleming, brother-in-law of Mr. D. G. Hatton, Police Magistrate of this town, and a barrister of acknowleged talent and energy.

A communication appeared in our last issue signed "Business," and after referring to the standing of the Cobourg and Peterborough Collegiate Institutes appears the following sentence: "For qualification of masters and character of teaching Peterborough ranks second in the Province." The fact is that Peterranks equal with those who rank first.

The Mail explains the exodus from the Lower Provinces to the United States. It says in the first place, there is no exodus; secondly, it is not much of an exodus; thirdly, the people who are going from Canada to the States are only looking for work; fourthly, the people are just as likely as not to come back. This settles the question very satisfactorily.

The Grand Jury at the Guelph Assizes gave it as their decided opinion that the Legislature of Ontario, at its last session, did right in reducing the number of grand jurymen from twenty-four to fifteen. Without impairing the usefulness of the system, the new law is a step towards saving expense to the country, which, in legal matters, amounts to a large sum annually.

The Rev. Mr. Ingles, for some years connected with the staff of the Toronto Globe, has resigned his position on that journal to take the editorship of The Canada Presbyterian, of which Mr. C. Blackett Robinson, of Toronto, is publisher and proprietor. Mr Ingles is probably the ablest writer on Presbyterian topics in Canada, and has long been recognized as one of the most powerful writers on general subjects in the Dominion.

It is a costly business to libel fashionable beauties. The editor of a London society paper Town Talk finds it so. He dished up some spicy items about Mrs. Langtry and Mrs. West, the two reigning beauties of the British metropolis, and now languishes in Newgate prison, awaiting a regular trial at the sessions. He apologized most abjectly, but that did not satisfy them. Unable to raise the requisite amount of bail, Mr. Adolph Rosenberg was sent down.

Nothing will militate more severely against the success of the British Tories in the coming general election than their [illegible] financial policy. During the five years they have been in power they have increased the expenses of government $70,000,000, or in round [illegible] over eight millions. Nor is this all. The Zulu and Afghan war expenses have yet to be paid. What the latter will amount to no one can even yet guess, but they will doubtless be enormous.

The trial of Sir Francis Hincks in the Court of Queen's Bench in Montreal, was concluded on Monday, the jury finding a verdict of guilty. The charge against him was, that as President of the Consolidated Bank, recently insolvent, he made, or allowed to be made, false returns of the standing of the Bank in the monthly reports made to the Government as required by statute, whereby, it is alleged, shareholders and creditors of the Bank were misled and suffered loss. The trial of the other directors will be proceeded with.

Notice of application to the Ontario Assembly at next session is given for an Act to amend and better define the boundary lines of Woodstock. Also for an Act to incorporate the Loyal Orange Associations of Ontario West and Ontario East, now under the jurisdiction of the Provincial Grand Lodges of Ontario West and Ontario East respectively, and to enable the subordinate lodges under the control of the said grand lodges to become incorporated if they desire so to become, and to enable the said lodge to hold real estate, and in certain cases to mortgage the same, and for other purposes.

The steamship Sarmation has been refitted in grand style for the voyage home of H.R.H. the Princess Louise. The sleeping apartment of the Princess is richly fitted up in French silver gray satin, with curtains and trimmings, and furniture of blue silk, and the walls are lined and padded with French gray silk. The carpets, rugs, &c., are of the richest Brussels. A magnificent boudoir has also been fitted up of crimson satin, the lounges being covered with the same material. Lady Sophia Macnamara, the Hon. Mr. and Mrs. Moreton and Gen. Sir F. Williams have also splendidly fitted up apartments. Everything is done in perfect taste.

At last the official despatches in the Letellier case have seen the light of day in England. It would appear that the British Government and the Marquis of Lorne were opposed to the dismissal of the Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec; but that the Colonial Secretary and his colleagues were led to believe that a rebellion in the Province of Quebec, if not in the whole Dominion, would assuredly break out unless the demand of Langevin & Co., were complied with. Britain having trouble enough on her hands in Zululand and Afghanistan, yielded to the desire for peace in her principal colony, and so the dismissal of Mr. Letellier was brought about by fraud and falsehood.

The mighty rush of farmers from the Western States into Canada, concerning which Earl Beaconsfield was told by some authority that was "high" at the time, is well illustrated negatively by a comparative statement of the United States land returns for the past five years. The receipts, for the sale of lands, for the fiscal years 1875, 1876, and 1877, reach $7,167,000, and $8,000,000 during the year ended last June. The totals of entries under the homestead and timber culture laws contrast as follows:—For the fiscal year 1877, 2,699,000 acres, 1878, 6,289,000, 1879, 8,027,000. The cash sales show a decrease of 255,00 acres since last year, when they aggregated about 877,000 acres, but the net increase in the amount of land taken by settlers during the last fiscal year was nearly one and a-half million acres.

Some years ago a notice of Alexis St. Martin was given in the papers in connection with a Dr. Beaumont. It appears that St. Martin, who is a French Canadian, was a soldier in the Canadian army in 1812–14, and while in an engagement with the Americans he received a gun shot wound near the stomach. Such was the nature of the wound that the Dr. made several experiments with the wounded man in the way of introducing in the stomach, by way of the wound, different articles of food, and observing how long the various articles took to digest. The doctor published the results of his experiments at the time, and they were very interesting and valuable. The wound caused a sort of a valve which the doctor utilized in the manner indicated, and strange to say, the experiments caused very little annoyance to St. Martin. A notice in a recent paper announced that the old veteran is still alive though 78 years of age, is residing in St. Thomas, Quebec, and the valuar opening in his stomach still remains.

The Relations between Britain and Russia.

A BREEZE BETWEEN SALISBURY AND SCHOUVALOFF.

The relations between England and Russia are, at this moment, almost critical. Friendly interchanges between the two powers have given way to evidences of jealous diplomatic questionings. England has been watching with no little fear the progress of the Russian expedition against Tekke, and it is possible that the Russian occupation of Herat has been discussed. Russian journals urge the Czar to extend his territory in Central Asia down to the Hindoo Koosh, and to secure Herat. On Monday Count Schouvaloff had an interview with Lord Salisbury. Count Schouvaloff proposed that Russia shall have the western part of Afghanistan, while England shall take possession of the western part as far as Hindoo Koosh. Lord Salisbury declined in the most emphatic, even harsh terms, saying that England would not allow Russia to meddle in any way whatsoever in the matter. He said the future of Afghanistan will be settled by England exclusively. Lord Salisbury refused to entertain any proposition on the subject. It is believed that the representations of Count Munster the German Ambassador, influenced Lord Salisbury's determined course. It is also rumored that the English Government have lately succeeded in obtaining assurances from the Shah of Persia, that in the event of complications between England and Russia, Persia will not side with Russia. Salisbury's emphatic language is probably passed on the certainty that in the race for Herat the English troops could undoubtedly reach the goal first.

The Turner-Smith Assault Case.

The inquest in this case closed on Friday, when the jury returned the following open verdict:—"That the said Robert William Turner, on the 9th day of October 1879, at the General Hospital in Toronto came to his death from congestion of the membranes of the brain, and certain abscesses in the brain substance itself, but how or by what means this congestion and abscesses were caused there is no satisfactory evidence to show." Smyth has been discharged from custody.

The Toronto Kidnapping Case.

THE DEAL BROTHERS FOUND GUILTY.

The trial of the Deal brothers for kidnapping opened at the Assize Court on Friday. The Court room was crowded to the doors. Mr. Jaffray was examined relative to having been kidnapped, as related in his former evidence. He identified Robert Deal as one of the kidnappers, but could not swear to John Deal being another of them. John Adams testified to Robert Jaffray coming to his house on the Don Flats, about twelve o'clock on the night the kidnapping was said to have taken place. The witness heard about two weeks before that there was a cave being dug in the vicinity of his house.

After a prolonged trial they were found guilty of kidnapping Mr. Jaffray. The jury recommended them to mercy. Sentence was deferred.

Sale of Bow Park Stock.

The sale of Shorthorns and Clydesdales of the Bow Park Canada Association, at Dexter Park, Chicago, on Friday, was the best sale made in the United States or Canada for two years past. The bulls were in great demand, and averaged $318 although two of the most valuable were withdrawn—Duke of Oxford 20, and Baron Paulina, pure Booth. The cows and heifers averaged $304. The Clydesdales sold very well. The stallion Duke of Clydesdale brought $1,800, and the mares fair prices. The total proceeds of the sale were about $17,000.

Trent Valley Canal.

Beborough Independent.

The valley of the Saskatchewan is the point to which the Old world is now looking as the source of its future food supply. It is as certain as anything in this world can be that the industrial population of Europe in another generation will have to be fed with food raised in the Canadian North-West. Therefore it becomes of the most vital importance that the cheapest possible means should be adopted for transporting wheat from the Saskatchewan to Liverpool. It is equally important that every available route should, be utilized without delay. This being the position, the project now under consideration, for constructing a canal from Georgian Bay to the St. Lawrence, is becoming of the deepest interest, and should be received with great favour alike by Liverpool, Quebec, Montreal, Ontario, Manitoba, and the North West. The construction of the canal shortens the distance between Sault St. Marie and Montreal by 250 miles, and furnishes the cheapest of all means of transport for the produce of the North West on a considerable portion of the distance to be traversed. The Canal leaves the Georgian Bay, either at the Severn Harbour, or at the mouth of the Nottawasaga, and following a splendid chain of small lakes, connected by short rivers, runs into the Bay of Quinte at the head of the St. Lawrence. When this Canal is opened the wheat of the North West will be carried by the Pacific Railway to Thunder Bay on Lake Superior. From thence large propellers will convey it to Georgian Bay. There it will be put into the Trent Valley Canal barges, carrying 500 tons each, or 15,000 buahels of wheat, and 20 of these barges will be towed in a string direct to Montreal, passing through the Trent Valley Canal and down the St. Lawrence. No large Lakes to traverse, no danger of wreck, no expense beyond that of the wages of one man to each barge to steer it. At Montreal large steam borne vessels, or Allen's steamships, convey it to Liverpool. Can any means be found cheaper than this for the transport of grain? This journal is not an admirer of Sir Charles Tupper, nor can it forget that Sir John Macdonald has certain idiosyncrasies of character and peculiar views on the subject of Charters, but we are bound to acknowledge that the Government which Sir John leads, and the Department of which Sir Charles is the head, has shown a broad and statesmanlike capacity in dealing with this subject of the North West, and the means of transporting its produce, which contrasts most favourable with that of their predecessors, who, however honest they may have been, never succeeded in projecting their vision a pimple's length beyond the end of their noses. The public movement in favour of the construction of the Trent Valley Canal now in progress, may have the most important influence on the future of the North West, inasmuch as it will provide another, and cheap means, of transporting the bread stuffs of the great wheat belt of the west, to the hungering workmen of the industrial nations of Europe.

Apsley.

(From our own Correspondent.)

—Our annual Agricultural Show was held here on the 7th inst.,—the weather was very fine and there was a good turnout, everything passed of pleasantly. The show of roots and vegetables I think would be hard to beat anywhere in the County. Horses, Cattle, Sheep and Pigs were not as well represented as in former years, but there was a better show of Poultry than was ever before exhibited. For some reason or other this society seems to be on the decline, and it is a great pity that it should be so, for I think there is nothing that tends to stimulate the young farmer so much as a good fall show, and it also helps to settle the country, for we always have visitors from a distance, and the account they carry away is either for or against it, and it is sure to be circulated from one to another, and in the end will prove to be a be p or detriment to the country.

The Toronto & Ottawa R. R.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—In the last EXAMINER I noticed your excellent remarks respecting the Toronto & Ottawa R. R., and if your plans are followed up and the road once built through the County of Peterborough to the County of Hastings, their is no fear but it will go right along. I made an estimate some years ago what it would cost. The distance is about 32 miles and my estimate is here per mile:—

10,000 yds. excavation @ 25cts per yd.	$2,500
80 ac., right of way, @ $40 per ac.	320
Bridges, culverts and cattle-guards	200
2,000 ties @ 15 cts each	300
800 rods of fencing @ 40cts per rod	320
1760 yds of track-laying @ 3c per yd.	264
Ballasting	200
Engineering	200
Rails, chains and spikes	4,000
	$8,304
Ten per cent. Contingencies	830
Total	$9,134

Now, sir, the road can be put through to the County of Hastings for about $300,000, and in six or eight months time, so that if Peterboro' and the County were to give $160,000 each, and the Government $4,000 per mile, the road would be built and leave nearly $30,000 towards Rolling Stock. This would give the road new life, and to have a road 32 miles in length without a single mortgage Bond on it would encourage capitalists to take hold. Now I think if Mr. Scott were to advertise for tenders for this section, and in the meantime after the Town and County By-laws to suit circumstances a great move would be made in the right direction,

Yours truly,
Cobourg, Oct. 18, 1879. J. FOWLER.

BROOKLYN, April 16th, 1876.

MESSRS. GILES & Co.—Gentlemen: My wife and myself have been using your Iodide Ammonia Liniment for some time, and find it the best article of the kind we have ever tried. As you do not advertise it as efficacious for burns, I thought I would advise you of its great value in that direction. A servant in our house burned the back of her hand severely one morning recently and came to my wife saying she could not finish her work she was in such pain. My wife tied a bandage wet with your Liniment about the injured hand, which on the first application started the tears to her eyes. She went about her work. An hour or so later she came to our room, minus the bandage, and my wife asked her how her hand was—She had forgotten that it was burned. My wife has burned her fingers several times, always applying our Liniment, and never feeling pain or inconvenience from the burn after. In strapping my razor a few mornings since, it slipped and made a deep cut in my left thumb. I immediately applied the Liniment, in, the cut, quickly healed without a particle of soreness. I give you this relation of our experience for the benefit of the public. We shall never be without Giles' Iodide Ammonia Liniment so long as it can be purchased. Very truly yours, W. WARREN SHAW. Sold by all druggists. Send for pamphlet. Dr. GILES, 163 West Broadway, N. Y. Trial size 25 cents.

—Sir Charles Tupper saw a considerable number of people yesterday, many of whom were not wholly disinterested in their calls. We hope some of them pointed out to him the sad tale told by the small imports of St. John for the last year, the high duties paid thereon, and the lamentable exodus still in progress from the country.—[St. John, N.F. Telegraph.

—The political situation in Quebec remains unchanged, except that the strength of the Joly Government is certainly not diminishing in the House, while it is manifestly on the increase among the people. This latter fact has been made more than ever abundantly evident by the demonstration in favour of the government wherever Ministers have appeared to defend their policy.

—Four thousand Afghans made a desperate attack on the British camp at Ali Kheyl on the 14th inst., and were driven back on the point of the bayonet. The Shutargardan Garrison has been strengthened, owing to the threatening attitude of the tribes. Ameer Yakook Khan has made up his mind definitely to resign. General Roberts is making arrangements for carrying on the administration of affairs in that country.

—A despatch to the New York Herald reports that at an interview between Count Schouvaloff and Lord Salisbury on Monday the former proposed that Russia and Great Britain should divide Afghanistan between them the one taking the western and the other the eastern half of the country. Lord Salisbury is said to have declined the proposition in the most emphatic way, declaring that his country would not allow Russia to interfere in the matter at all.

—The Syracuse Herald states that a burglar named Gibson, now in Onondaga penitentiary, has been recognized as one of the thieves who stole the $12,000 in Dominion notes from the Receiver-General's office in Toronto last July twelve months, and that he belongs to a gang of New York heavy operators. When it was known a few days ago that Gibson could not get out of prison for lack of $50 to pay his fine, the money was soon forwarded from headquarters and Gibson was liberated as a criminal from the penitentiary; but he was promptly re-arrested for the Toronto robbery and failing to produce bail to the extent of $10,000, he was remanded to await examination. In the meantime Gibson's friends in New York have procured counsel and are determined to get him free if at all possible, as their safety is somewhat dependent upon Gibson's liberty.

RICE LAKE ITEMS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

—Splendid weather. This week has been almost as warm as any this summer.

—McDougall & Lodgate's saw mill closes for the season on the 20th. They having sawed all their logs.

—We noticed a large shipment of iron leave Harwood by St. Fairy on Tuesday for W. T. Mosher's carriage and waggon establishment near Keene. The weight was about 4 tons including a lot of steel. This speaks highly for Mr. Mosher's business, as such an order would last any ordinary establishment for some years.

—Quite a lot of grain is being shipped to the front by C. P. & M. R. and the boats. Messrs. Miller, Thompson and Cleary from Otonabee, shipped this week and realized good prices, they having a very good quality. Mr. Hicks of Harwood intends to send his to Port Hope.

—Duck shooting is not very good on account of the very warm weather. There are quite a number of shooters head at it every morning and evening. One camp of American gentlemen from near Boston, are hunting very fair here. They are now leaving by Quad, Mr. Mosher, we believe, to the front, Mr. Hicks, Harwood and some from Cobourg are spending at their island, Isabella.

Special Notices.

There is no remedy for female complaints so good as VITOMA BUCHU and UVA URSI. After its use for a few days; the whole system seems invigorated, the pallid lips and cheeks soon show a rosy tint, and obscurisness drives away the sickly fears and nervous pains which destroy the pleasures of those who suffer from the peculiar complaints of the gentler sex. 43-2t

A Card.

To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a receipt that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. This great remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to the Rev. JOSEPH T. INMAN, Station D, New York City.

Murder Will Out.

A few years ago "August Flower" was discovered to be a certain cure for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint. A few thin ones made known to their friends how easily and quickly they had been cured by its use. The great merits of Green's August Flower became heralded through the country by one sufferer and another, still without advertising, its sale became immense. Druggists in every town in Canada and the United States are selling it. So perfect a cure for Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Constipation, Palpitation of the Heart, Indigestion, Low Spirits, &c., as this medicine when taken, will be waited upon by Mons. Maurice if they will leave their address with Mr. Jeffers, the Principal of the Collegiate Institute.

Thanksgiving.—The 27th of November, by order published in the Canada Gazette, is to be observed as a day of thanksgiving. This is a holiday in which all nationalities and creeds can unite. Canada has much to be thankful for. Peace and increasing prosperity have been here during the year, and the outlook is very bright. It is well to acknowledge as a nation, as well as individually, that every good thing cometh from God, and we hope that this year the acknowledgment will be hearty and unanimous from every part of the Dominion.

Our Manufacturers Abroad.—At the Union Exhibition held at Cobourg, on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week, two of our town manufacturers were exhibitors of agricultural implements, and carried everything before them in the different classes. Peter Hamilton having on exhibition five different articles and carrying off four first and one second prize, notwithstanding that the leading makers in the Dominion were represented. Messrs. J. Whyte & Co. again received first prize for their now celebrated ploughs. Great interest was taken by the farmers their in exhibits, and they took a large number of orders on the grounds.

Auction Sales.—The following sales are announced by posters from this office:—

FRIDAY, 24th October, very important sale of furniture, &c., belonging to W. W. Nichols, Esq., of Lakefield, at his residence. Sale at 12.30 o'clock and without reserve. George McIlmoyl, Auctioneer.

SATURDAY, Oct. 25.—Executor's sale of the west half of Lot No. 2, in the 9th Concession of North Monaghan, containing 100 acres, at present occupied by Mr. Archer. Sale at the Choate House, at 2 o'clock. Gilbert & Moore, Auctioneers. Terms easy.

MONDAY, Oct. 27.—Genuine unreserved sale of farm stock, implements, &c., belonging to Mr. Jeremiah Horen, on his premises, Lot 6, in the 8th Concession of Enniskillen, commencing at 12.30 o'clock. Chas. Stapleton, Auctioneer.

THURSDAY, 30th October.—Large and important sale of thorough-bred Durhams, grade stock, general purpose horses, sheep, implements, &c., the property of Messrs. Rutherford & Truscott, of South Monaghan. Sale at Mr. Rutherford's residence, Lot 6, in the 3rd Concession, commencing at 11 o'clock. Charles Stapleton, Auctioneer.

Benefits of Advertising.

Bread is the staff of life, so is advertising the staff of business.

Blessed are they who do not advertise, for they shall rarely be troubled with a customer.

You can't eat enough in a week to last you a year, and you can't advertise on that plan either.

Business can go without advertising, so can a wagon go without greasing, but in both cases it is hard work.

No bells ring so loud as a good advertisement. People are more apt to heed what they read than what they hear.

Those who take the lead in pushing their business through the newspapers generally take the lead in everything else.

If you don't mean to attend to your business, and prefer a slender income while your neighbors grow rich, it won't pay to advertise.

Judicious advertising is sure to bring large returns, to increase your business reputation, to add to your acquaintance.

If you have business, advertise. If you have business advertise. It is a "poor rule that won't work both ways." A piece well advertised is known to many, while one not advertised is known only to a few passers-by.

Quitting advertising in dull times is like pulling down a dam when the water is low. When trade revives, it will rush by him who will not stay it with ready customers. The way to have such always on hand is through advertising.

POLICE COURT.

The following cases were brought before the Police Magistrate, and adjudicated upon during the past week.

FRIDAY, Oct. 17.—Mr. John Sullivan was charged with selling liquor on Sunday, October 5th, contrary to the License Law. He pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined $20.00 and $3.70 costs, to be paid on or before the 24th instant.

ASSAULT.—This morning Mrs. W. Bowman charged her husband with assaulting her in her own house. The defendant, Mr. Bowman, denied the charge, and there being no witnesses to substantiate the same, the P. M. dismissed the case with costs, $2.70.

SATURDAY, Oct. 18th.—The assault case of Nicholas Landergan vs. Dennis Garvey, came up for hearing. The complainant, who did not appear, charged the defendant with committing an assault upon him on the 14th of October. The case was dismissed.

TUESDAY, Oct. 21.—On Tuesday morning the case of Francis Sloman vs. Mary Jane Baxter came up for hearing. Both parties live in the township of Otonabee. The plaintiff's case was to the effect that the defendant made an assault upon him on Wednesday last, by getting into his waggon and striking him several blows, while returning from town, thereby throwing him out of the waggon causing his horses to run away, and otherwise injuring him. The defendant admitted the charge but claimed provocation, and was fined $10 and $3.20 costs, which was paid.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Council met pursuant to adjournment. Present.—His Worship the Mayor and Councillors Cahill, Smith, Beller, Paterson, Rutherford, Griffith, Taylor, Deane and Yelland.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Dumbleton Bros. & Hall, on behalf of property owners west of Bethune street and north of Murray street, calling attention to the channels in that neighborhood for carrying off the water.

From the office of the Provincial Secretary, stating that orders had been made by the Department for the payment to the town of the monies due from the Government as the town's share of license money. Instructions had been given the Inspector on the 29th July to pay the sum of $713.75, and on the 12th instant $3884.37. Why the said monies had not been paid at the time they were ordered was unknown to the Department.

From the Treasurer, a statement of the receipts and expenses for the month of September. —Referred to the Finance Committee.

From G. W. Ramsay, in reference to the payment of the contractors of the Hunter-street Bridge.

From John Carnegie, Secretary of the Town Trust, asking for the issue of two debentures of $400 each to retire two of equal amount.—Referred to Finance Committee.

From Wm. Toole, asking that a culvert be constructed on the east side of Bethune street across Murray.—Referred to Street and Bridge Committee with power to act.

PETITIONS.

From Wm. Toole, asking for the remission of the taxes on his planing mill which was destroyed by fire last spring.

From G. T. McCombe, asking to be allowed to make certain alterations and repairs to his sheds.—Referred to Building Committee.

From John Doherty, asking to have certain repairs made on the Market Square.—Granted.

From Jessie Macmillan, in reference to payment of taxes on property occupied by her last year, belonging to J. Mitchell.

From Mrs. Trotter, asking that her taxes be remitted.

From John H. Glass, asking a remission of the taxes on his shop, destroyed by fire.

From Thos. McKeiver, asking to have a part of his liquor license money refunded.—Referred to License Committee.

From Thos. Gunn, in reference to payment of taxes for property formerly occupied by another.

From John Frith and Angus Macpherson, asking that their claim for building the Hunter street Bridge be settled.

From James Donel, complaining of over-taxation.

ACCOUNTS.

Fire Brigade, pay list for six months.... $219 00
Toker & Co., printing and stationery.... 4 00

On motion the pay list for the Firemen was ordered to be paid when certified to by the Clerk, and the other account was referred to the Finance Committee.

LICENSE MONIES.

Moved by Councillor DENNE, seconded by Councillor GRIFFITH.—That the Clerk be instructed to ask the License Commissioners for the interest on the amount now due, and if not paid to be placed into Court for collection.—Carried.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.

Councillor CAHILL, Chairman of Finance Committee, submitted the following report, which was adopted:—

To the Mayor and Town Council of the Town of Peterborough:—

GENTLEMEN,—The Finance Committee beg leave to recommend the payment of the following accounts:

Wm. Searle, Fitting Council Chamber.... $25 61
Wm. Hamilton, material 15 60

In the petition of Mr. Wm. Chapman, your Committee recommend the Council not to interfere in the matter of his taxes, as this should be settled between himself and his then landlord. His complaint about being assessed for dogs which he did not possess will come under the general recommendation made in reference to this matter. In the matter of the petition of Mrs. Thos. Billington your committee recommend that his assessment be fixed at the average amount of the last two years. In reference to persons applying for remission of taxes on dogs which they allege they did not possess, your Committee recommend that they may be exempted from payment of same upon making statutory declaration before the Town Treasurer that they had no dog or dogs during the present year.

All of which is respectfully submitted,
THOS. CAHILL, Chairman.

THE EXHIBITION GROUNDS.

Moved by Councillor SMITH, seconded by Councillor CAHILL,—That whereas the recent Central Exhibition has demonstrated that the premises at present used and leased by the Agricultural Society are unsuited for the purpose for which they are used,

And whereas it is desirable that more commodious grounds should be obtained, which, besides being used as exhibition grounds might be utilized as a public park, cricket and lacrosse grounds,

Be it therefore resolved.—That the Mayor, the mover and the seconder be, and are hereby appointed, a special committee to confer with the Warden and members of the County Council with a view of securing their consent to the sale and disposal of the present exhibition grounds, the proceeds derived from the sale thereof to be applied in the purchase of suitable exhibition grounds, the erection thereon of all necessary buildings and which might be obtained sufficiently large to be used as a public park, cricket and lacrosse grounds.—Carried.

THE RUTHERFORD "CANAL."

Moved by Councillor DENNE, seconded by Councillor GRIFFITH.—That the Mayor on behalf of the Corporation of the Town of Peterborough do sign a notice compelling Arthur Rutherford to restore the road and drain situate on Downie street, between Dublin and Edinburgh street within one month from this date into its original position, such as it was before he was Inspector of the Streets and Bridges of the Town of Peterborough for the year 1876, and in default of his not complying with this said notice, the Town of Peterborough shall complete the same and all costs and charges made in the execution of this work shall be collected from the said Arthur Rutherford as the law requires, and that Mr. Macdonald, Town Clerk, shall prepare two notices—one to be kept and the other to be served on Arthur Rutherford by the Constable of the Town of Peterborough, according to this resolution.

Councillor SMITH, asked that this matter be allowed to stand over as a notice of motion, so that members would be able to vote intelligently upon it.

Councillor DENNE consented.

SNOW BY-LAW.

Councillor RUTHERFORD moved that the Council go into Committee of the Whole on the second reading of the Snow By-law.

The motion was carried and Councillor Taylor called to the chair.

On the reading of the second clause considerable cross-firing took place, resulting in a motion that the Chairman leave the chair, which was carried.

HUNTER-STREET BRIDGE.

A motion for the re-consideration of the matter relating to the Hunter-street Bridge was carried, after which a sharp discussion ensued. The fall owing motion was ultimately carried:

Moved by Councillor CAHILL, seconded by Councillor TAYLOR.—That the matter of the Hunter-street Bridge be referred to the Street and Bridge Committee with Mr. Deane's name added with power to act, and take Mr. Ramsay's opinion in the matter.

THE TOWN CLOCK.

Mr. Jas. McClelland was appointed caretaker of the Town Clock in the stead of Mr. Malcolm resigned.

MIDLAND RAILWAY.

Moved by Councillor PATERSON, seconded by Councillor RUTHERFORD.—That the Clerk ask the Midland Railway Company for the interest on damages on Bethune street north of Hunter street.—Carried.

THE MONAGHAN DRAIN.

On motion of Councillor CAHILL, the Street Inspector was instructed to expend the appropriation for the Monaghan drain, or any less sum that will be sufficient.

GRANT TO AUBURN.

On motion of Councillor DENNE a grant of $15 was made to be appropriated on the streets at Auburn.

CRIB-WORK AT CEMETERY.

Moved by Councillor PATERSON, seconded by Councillor DENNE,—That Mr. Corby be instructed to put one log more on the lake shore crib-work at a cost of $17, and that the Street Inspector be instructed to have the crib-work filled from the hill adjoining the Cemetery.—Carried.

REMOVAL OF A NUISANCE.

Moved by Councillor RUTHERFORD, seconded by Councillor TAYLOR,—That the Street and Bridge Committee have power to dispose of the waste sheet on the east end of Charlotte street, or that they have it removed to a more suitable place.—Carried.

APPROACH FOR STEAM FIRE ENGINE.

A resolution for building an approach for the steam fire engine on Murray street on the intersection of Dorcas was left over as a notice of motion.

Council adjourned for four weeks.

—Messrs. Elliott, of Kingston, received intelligence Wednesday afternoon that the vessel with 297 of their cattle was wrecked at Red Bay, on the Labrador coast. The men in charge were all saved. The vessel was the Hermes, and she sailed from Montreal on the 29th ult.

TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

Influential Meeting of Delegates—The Advantages of Such a Construction to be Prepared and Published in Pamphlets.

On Thursday afternoon a meeting of delegates of those interested in the construction of the Trent Valley Canal, was held in the Council Chamber at 2.30 p.m. The meeting was convened by a committee which had been appointed by the Town Council to consider the best possible means of arousing those interested with respect to the Canal. The following gentlemen were present:—Joseph Keeler, M. P., East Northumberland; John Burnham, M. P., East Peterboro', and Warden of the County; George Hilliard, M. P., West Peterborough; Charles Fairbairn, Warden of the County of Victoria; C. Francis, Reeve, J. N. Lee, Deputy-Reeve, and Dr. Day, Trenton; John D. Smith, John W. Kennedy, William Jordan, H. W. Green and Rev. Mr. Logan, Fenelon Falls; John D. Naylor, ex-Reeve of Fenelon, M. Boyd, George Bick, Reeve, and J. L. Read, Bobcaygeon; Isaac Garbutt, J. H. McWilliams and J. T. Nelson, councillors, Lakefield; John Moloney, Reeve, J. McCliggott, Deputy-Reeve, and John Shea, councillor, Dorro; James Miller, Reeve, and Geo. Read, Otonabee; M. Sanderson, Reeve, James Elliott and Lewis Davis, Smith, J. B. Pearce, Reeve of Norwood; H. T. Strickland and H. Calcutt, councillors, Ashburnham; and John J. Lundy, Mayor, Wm. Toole, ex-Mayor, D. G. Hatton, P.M., J. M. Irwin, Thos. Cainll, H. C. Rogers, John Ludgate, John Garvey, T. G. Hazlitt, R. A. Morrow, R. Romaine, W. Snyder, W. Paterson, jr., H. Denne, J. Edwards, T. Bradburn, Jas. Hope and a number of others from Peterborough.

On motion of Mr. Bick, Mayor Lundy was called to the chair, and Mr. H. T. Strickland was appointed Secretary pro tem.

It was then moved by M. Boyd, Esq., Bobcaygeon, and seconded by C. Francis, Reeve of Trenton,—That a deputation be appointed to wait upon the Hon. Sir Charles Tupper, Minister of Railways and Canals, at Ottawa, to press upon his notice the importance of the Government undertaking the construction of the Trent Valley Canal, and that each municipality along the line of the Canal be invited to send a representation, and that the deputation, or a portion of it call a public meeting in Montreal and explain the project, and invite co-operation.

Mr. Boyd said they did not come here to make speeches, but to take practical steps to secure the construction of the canal, and he would content himself with moving the motion, which on being put was carried unanimously.

Mr. Geo. Bick, Reeve of Bobcaygeon, moved, seconded by Mr. Fairbairn, Reeve of Verulam and Warden of Victoria, the appointment of a committee to forthwith draft a form of memorial for presentation to the Government, which after discussion was carried and the following committee appointed:—Messrs. Keeler, Burnham, McCarthy, Cameron, McQuade, Hilliard and Brown, M.P.'s, with Messrs. Boyd, Carnegie, Logan, Francis, Lundy and Smith.

The committee were instructed by motion, to prepare and have printed for distribution among the various municipalities, memorials to be presented to the Gov.-Gen. in Council and the Dominion Government, praying for the early construction of the canal as a public work of the Dominion.

At this stage of the proceedings Mr M. Boyd handed the secretary a letter from Hector Cameron, M. P. for North Victoria, which was read to the meeting. The letter was to the effect that he would use his influence and voice to advocate the success of the Trent Valley Canal.

Mr. Carnegie said that he observed that out of 3,500,000 bushels of grain received at New York during the last week of September, 2,500,000 bushels thereof came by the Erie Canal, and only one million by all the railways combined.

Mr. Burnham, M.P., said in addition to what had already been provided for, he thought a pamphlet, setting forth in detail the advantages of this route, should be prepared and published, as it could be done at small expense, he therefore moved, seconded by Mr. Boyd,—That the committee appointed to draft a memorial be also requested to draft a pamphlet, shewing the cost and length of canal and all information shewing the advantages of its construction, and to have the same published with map showing the different routes by canal and railway from west to east, and distribute the same as largely as possible.

The motion was carried.

A somewhat lengthy and irregular discussion then took place as to the best mode of raising the necessary means for carrying this out, and it was Moved by Mr. Francis, seconded by Mr. Boyd, and unanimously resolved,—That the general committee appointed at this meeting, as soon as practicable, form an approximate estimate of the necessary expenses to be incurred in publishing phamphlets, &c., and of the deputation to Montreal, and request the municipalities interested to contribute their respective quotas to pay the same, which sums are to form a fund for the purposes above named, and that said sum be placed in the hands of a treasurer to be appointed by said committee and accounted for to the several municipalities contributing.

The meeting then adjourned.

A MEETING OF THE COMMITTEE.

At the close of the above meeting, the committee assembled, when Mayor Lundy was elected chairman, and H. B. Smith, Esq., Secretary. The preparation of the memorial and the financial question were briefly discussed and the committee adjourned, subject to the call of the Chairman.

"PULMONARY CONSUMPTION arises from a decline or deficiency of vitality in the natural bioplasm or germinal matter, and this deficiency manifests itself not only in a general wasting or atrophy of the whole body, but also in a peculiar degradation, chiefly in the lungs and lymphatic system, of portions of this bioplasm into a sluggish, low-lived, yet proliferating matter, which instead of maintaining the nutrition and integrity of the tissues (which is the natural office of bioplasm) clogs them and irritates them with a substance which is more or less prone to decay, and eventually involves them also in its own disintegration and destruction."

To remedy this deficiency by sustaining the vitality of the bioplasm, and thus provide for the general building up of the whole system, is the office and design of Robinson's Phosphorized Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Lacto-Phosphate of Lime.

Prepared solely by J. H. ROBINSON, Pharmaceutical Chemist, St. John, N.B., and for sale by Druggists and General Dealers. Price $1.00 per bottle; six bottles for $5.00 43-2mos.

VEGETINE.

BEHOLD HE A WELL WOMAN.

CANCER.

Montgomery, Ala., June 20, 1879.

H. R. STEVENS, Boston:

DEAR SIR,—I have for years been a sufferer from a dreadful Cancer in my side which caused me untold agony, and as I am a widow with a family dependent upon my exertions for a support, my pain of body was only equalled by my pain of mind, as caring for children want for bread. I was prevented by a kind friend in Cincinnati with half a dozen bottles of Vegetine, and although one bottle is said sufficient, behold me a well woman, completely restored in body and mind, and able to perform my accustomed duties. Long may you live! and may the history of my wonderful cure lead other like sufferers to use those poor valuable medicines, if it is with the last cent they possess.

Yours gratefully,
MRS. FULLER BUTT

I write this to certify that I have known Mrs. Fuller Butt from childhood, and have seen the hours of agony, that her patient womanhood has been called upon to endure. She has suffered untold agonies and now she kneels me in perfect health with her child upon her knee. The prayers of this grateful woman will ever be yours, my noble sir, and we add our testimony to the thousands that favor the greatest of all medical discoveries, "Vegetine."

Yours respectfully,
MRS. CHELLET SUMMER.

Suffered 25 Years.

PILES, RHEUMATISM.

GOODMAN, Miss., May 6, 1879.

H. R. STEVENS, Boston:

I have been suffering for 25 years with the Piles and found but little relief from any medicine that I have taken for many years past. Last winter I suffered considerably worse than ever before, also in connection with Rheumatism, I was confined to my bed for several weeks. Having procured a bottle of Vegetine I took it with good effect. I continued the use and after taking four or five bottles, find myself completely cured. I can cheerfully recommend it for the benefits I have received from it.

Yours respectfully,
J. W. TAGGART.

Blood Cleanser and Purifier,

H. R. STEVENS, Boston:

DEAR SIR,—I have tried Vegetine for Rheumatism and as a blood cleanser and purifier I can recommend it.

Yours truly,
JAS. M. TRAVIS.

VEGETINE
Has Not Its Equal.

LUNG DISEASE.

SELMA, Ala., May 12, 1879.

H. R. STEVENS, BOSTON:

I take great pleasure in recommending your Vegetine, I have been suffering for a long time with the Lung disease; trying every kind of medicine that I could get, but never seemed to do me any good, until I tried your great Vegetine Remedy. I had used it only a short time before I could discover a very great change in my health for the better. I don't consider that your medicine has its equal, for the diseases which you propose to cure, especially the disease that I have been afflicted with. JOHN THOMAS.

Blood Purifier.

H. R. STEVENS, Esq.:

DEAR SIR,—Your Vegetine has performed some wonderful cures in our town, and is esteemed superior to all other Blood Purifiers.

CATARRH.
Constitutional Catarrh Remedy,
Cures Catarrh.

T. J. R. HARDING, Esq., BROCKVILLE, ONT.

DEAR SIR,—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me. I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, and to the many other efforts seemed to me to be "too good to be true."

I was enlisted in my head for years before I commenced it to be Catarrh. In reading in your Canvasser I saw my case doubled in many particulars. The heated "drop" from the head had become very disagreeable, and a choking sensation often prevented me from lying long. I would feel like smothering and be compelled to sit up in the bed. My health and spirits were seriously affected. When your agent came to Walkerton in August 1877, I procured three bottles. Before I had used a quarter of the contents of one bottle I found decided relief, and when I had used two bottles and a third, I felt that it, by the 20th quite cured of that disease, and have not used any since until of late I have taken some for a cold in my head.

A sense of duty to sufferers from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, prompts me to send you this Certificate, unsolicited, with leave to use it, that others of it you may see proper. Yours truly,

W. TINDALL, Methodist minister.

How Many Times.

How many times do I love thee, dear!
Tell me how many pebbles there be
In the old mill stream
Of the never-dried year,
Whose white and spiky hours appear
The latest flake of eternity:
So many times do I love thee, dear.

II.

How many times do I love again!
Tell me how many beads there are
In a silver chain
Of the evening rain,
Unraveled from the cloudiest skein,
Enriching the eye of a yellow star?
So many times do I love again.

—Thomas Lovell Beddoes.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, OCT'R 23, 1879.

A Wretched Night.

(Concluded.)

During all this unpleasant display the razors were being flashed in every direction, over and about every part of my person. Occasionally he would seize my arm, and raising it, would pass one quickly round it, as if performing an imaginary amputation. Then he would divert his attention to my face and neck, carrying his razor so close to my throat that I could almost feel the clear cut through the air as it brushed by, almost touching my skin. Then it was brandished close to my eyes, and I was ideally shaved over and over again. But he seemed to devote the greater part of his attention to a small bald spot upon the top and back of my head. What he did I could not tell, but often felt his hand upon, and occasionally the cold side of the razor was laid flat upon the skin. Probably he looked upon me as some brother monk, and considering the tonsorial operation performed there by nature as radically defective, pictured to himself the way to give it geometrical regularity.

It would be impossible to describe what I suffered during those hours. My nervous system was strung to the highest pitch of intensity, and yet the necessary means for relieving it by some slight physical movement and change of posture was debarred me. Could I have walked, risen from the chair, or even freely moved my arms or head, it would not have been so intolerable, but repeated attempts showed me the danger of any experiments. At times I felt that I would go mad myself. I remember when the maniac waltz was at its highest, laughing at its gayiety, and feeling a strong inclination to rise and join in the insane revel. I revolved over in my mind projects of what wild things I would do when once again on my feet and at liberty. But this delirium was but temporary, and I continually roused myself from it by a strong exercise of my will. But most I feared that I should faint; several times I experienced that peculiar feeling, curcumotion sensation in my head which is the sure premonition of insensibility; and I shivered with fright as I thought what might occur if once I lay motionless and senseless in his power.

During one of the involuntary movements which either my nervous condition sometimes occasioned, or in order to give support for my hand I introduced it under the breast of my coat upon my vest. The amount of relief which I experienced by this simple act is undescribable, for unseen by my watchful custodian, under the cover of the lappet of my coat I could move my fingers freely. This thing acted upon me as if new life had been given—as a full draught of wine to an exhausted and famished traveller. I felt more bold, more confident, better prepared to wait the result of my singular adventure.

It was during one of these movements of my hand that I all at once touched a cigar in my watch-pocket, which I then remembered I had placed there just before leaving home for use on my way back. At the same time that this occured to me, I recollected that I had also put some matches in the same pocket. Slowly and cautiously I drew first the cigar from its resting-place, and immediately after the matches. Then, with a degree of boldness which I now can hardly account for, I steadily withdrew my hand and carried the cigar to my mouth. More than this, I afterward, with no more than a slight motion, ignited the match and then the cigar. What words can express the relief afforded me by that one smoke? No lazy Turk, as, reclining in his silken divan, he inhaled through his gorgeous narghileh the fragrant Latakieh, ever realised it. No Boboo, worth countless lacs, imbibed deep draughts from his favorite hookah with such pleasure. No kaussher-loaded meerschaum ever presented such attractions to a German student. Never did fine-cut and vulgar clay bring such a perfect sense of comfort to a tired hunter. It was the acme of intense and exquisite enjoyment. I smoked slowly, with long intervals between each inspiration. I dallied with the vapour as it slowly passed from my mouth and nostrils; I did not puff it, nor use up the weed—like many a health—by excess of fiery excitement, but allowed it gradually to consume away its life with no more stimulation than was needed to keep up the proper vitality. I was longer smoking that cigar than I suppose ever any one was before. But what impressed me as the most singular, was the little notice taken of my action by the jailer. There was a start, and a slight movement forward, when I began; but he soon subsided into his customary apathetic indifference.

During the latter portion of the time of my smoking, I had noticed that my patient was talking, mumbling unconnectedly to himself, as I supposed. He would turn his head towards the door and whisper something, which, at the distance I sat, I could not hear. He had continued this for some time, when, suddenly turning towards me, he ordered me, in the same terrible imperious way as before, to rise and lie down upon the bed. Glad of an excuse for moving my tired limbs, I rose at once, and, dutiful as any well managed child, went and laid myself down as he directed. In this position my head, when on the pillow, was brought close to his body, and within a very few inches of the door, luckily for me, of that side upon which was the lock.

The interruption caused by my change of locality once over, the same monotonous silence was resumed. After a few minutes, however, Mr. Normanby again relapsed into his former apparently dreaming condition, and commenced anew his low muttering. But I was now essentially more advantageously situated. My posture was easier. I found also, I could, by moving slowly, change into any position I wished. Moreover, I was near enough to him to almost hear what he was whispering. To discover this I now gave my whole attention, and strained my hearing so as to be able to form into some connected sentence the few disjointed words which I could make out. Although not very successful in this effort, I soon learned the tenor of what was passing in his mind.

I found, by the lapse of time which allowed between each sentence, and the careful way in which he turned his ear to the door, he supposed there was a person on the outside, and that he was holding a conversation with him through the keyhole. It required no great effort of ingenuity on my part to make out that he thought that this person wished to enter. This was no sooner settled to my satisfaction than, putting together the few words I could overhear, I almost intuitively comprehended his thought, and prepared to plan of action. He supposed this person upon the outside wished to see me and tell me something; and what I heard were his answers to all the expostulations and requests to be admitted to do so.

I instantly felt I was saved, and confident as if already free, experienced the most perfect relief and self-possession. I began, at first, in low and whispered, but gradually in louder tones to suggest questions and make replies to what I supposed his exclamations. Following the inflection of my voice, he gradually modulated his own to correspond, and soon we were holding an animated conversation at the ordinary colloquial pitch. During the time I had been lying in this position I had gradually worked myself to the edge of the bed, and had slid down one of the heavy hair pillows, which I firmly grasped in my right hand.

No great length of time was required to make my arrangement. He finally agreed that he door should be opened a few inches, and but through this aperture the great anxious was to give me the information which he wished. My plan was to seize the door the instant it was opened, press my goaler firmly back against the wall by throwing it open to its full extent, fell him if possible or necessary with the pillow, and then, darting from the bed and room, spring into the room of Mr. Dyer, and at once close the door.

This was done on the instant; but I had over-calculated my own strength, when lying in such a constrained position, and had not allowed enough for that with which he was armed naturally, increased by the addition of the almost superhuman power of delirium. The result was that, though springing with all my force against him, I found it like pushing against a rock. I could not open the door more than two feet, much less succeed in forcing him far back with it, or in upsetting him. I had but here space and time to close myself through the door before he stood ready for pursuit. I saw at once that I could not delay long enough to open the door of the next room, nor have an opportunity to close it even if once in. But one course was left—to mount the stairs to the story above. Up these I bounded, four at a jump, as if impelled from a mortar. I scarce knew the effort I was making, so extraordinary was the rapidity with which I flew. On reaching the top I saw a long entry before me, down which I reached, knowing that life hung on the time that was made, but entirely ignorant how close my pursuer might be in my rear. As I ran down the entry I noticed from the echoing sound of my own footsteps, that I was alone; he had not followed me; but still I was afraid to pause. At the end of the entry I found an open doorway, through which I darted, and then found myself in a species of lumber-room. Behind a barrel in one corner I at once ensconced myself, and trembling with terror and my exertions, waited for what was to be the next act.

But all remained still. Not a sound was to be heard. I looked at my watch. It was quarter past five. From ten o'clock—more than seven hours—I had been in a condition of greater mental agony than in the keenest efforts of my imagination I had ever pictured.

What to do now was the next question. It was not safe to remain there, for he might ascend at any moment; and yet I feared to move, for I knew nothing about the house, and whether there was another stairway by which I could descend. Taking off my boots, which I held in my hand as an offensive weapon in case of attack, I proceeded softly into the entry. My examination soon showed me that there was no supplementary stairway. I tried the doors of all the rooms on each side of the entry. They were firmly locked. The room in which I then was had no door, in fact, it was a mere recess in the entry. I walked to the head of the stairs, and looked over. The door of the room at the foot of the stairs where I had been so long incarcerated, was closed. The house was still as death. With trembling, hesitating steps, prepared each instant for flight, I commenced the descent. I safely reached the foot, passed the dreaded door, and in a minute was in the room of Mr. Dyer, with the door firmly bolted behind me. He was lying, fully dressed, upon the outside of the bed, sound asleep, but was instantly awakened by the noise of my entrance. My hysterical condition, and feeble attempts at description, although not conveying a full idea of what had happened, soon gave him sufficient insight to consult with me and advise what should be done.

It was obvious to both of us that, in his condition, Mr. Normanby could not be left in his room alone, with such deadly weapons at his command. We decided therefore, that we must, in some way, gain an entrance and disarm him. To suddenly burst in the door, rush in, and each seizing an arm, hold him down by main force, was the first plan. But this entailed great dangers both to him and ourselves; for we had no means of knowing that he was not then standing prepared for just such an attack, and ready to use the razors on himself or the first to enter. Besides, it required a great deal of courage to face a powerful man like him, fully armed, and ready to commit any atrocity. It was finally agreed that we should try the effects of quiet reasoning and persuasion, and reserve violence as a last resort, and when better prepared by additional assistance. Before going on this dangerous errand I took the precaution of fortifying myself with a heavy oaken chair, while my friend, who was to lead the van, armed himself with a large cane, and, as a buckler against the razors, with a pillow from the bed. With no inapt resemblance to the knight of Mancha and his faithful squire (and certainly my sensations were those of that worthy on more than one occasion) we sallied out.

On reaching the door we knocked, and receiving no reply, turned the handle. It was firmly fastened. But, as response to the attempt, the question came as to what was wanted. Our request for admittance was denied, on the ground that the occupant was in bed and going to sleep. And, truly enough, standing upon the chair and looking through the small window over the door, I discovered my dreaded enemy, snugly tucked up in bed, and apparently fulfilling what he asserted.

Returning to our starting place we held a second council of war. Nothing now seemed left for us but to break down the door, and rushing in to throw ourselves upon him as he lay, each, if possible, seizing an arm. But at this juncture prudence dictated suggestion. The performance of such a feat would necessitate much noise, which would, most assuredly, alarm the whole house, and in the confusion there was no knowing what might happen. I therefore proposed that it should be done deliberately—as it were, legally. That is, my friend was to go down, waken the keeper of the hotel, and inform him of what had occurred; while I was to go into the street and find some of the police, provided I did not have to hunt too much over all the upper wards.

In pursuance of this object we both descended, Mr. Dyer passing along the second story, while I went down to the office in the story below. Not a soul was awake; even the watchman was dozing in some out-of-the-way nook, at least none was visible. I traversed the marble-tiled floor of the office, reached the outside door, and had just stepped my foot upon the sidewalk, when at that moment I heard a loud, unearthly, piercing scream, the rushing sound of some heavy body falling through the air, a dull, sickening squelch—and there, upon the sidewalk, at my very feet, spattering me with his blood and brains, lay the bleeding, mangled body of the cause of my wretched night. He had thrown himself from the fourth-story window. I sprang to his side, raised his head—there was a feeble flutter at the wrist, a sensation, and he was dead.

Does any one wonder why I can neither shave myself nor allow another to perform the operation.

A few days after the accident and the interment I found one day, on my return to my office, a small package lying upon my table, accompanied with the following note:

New York, February, 1860.

"My Dear Sir,—In settling up my brother's estate, to my great surprise, and consequent annoyance, I found that his extravagant habits during the past few years, together with an unfortunate investment, which he had made in a company for manufacturing razors, had left him completely bankrupt. Indeed, there is nothing whatever to settle even a fraction of his debts. I regret exceedingly that your bill will have to be included in the general presentation of all claims against him. Feeling deeply, however, the kindness which you have always shown him, particularly in the last trying moments, I have taken the liberty of withdrawing from the safe of his effects the case of gold-mounted razors which I herewith send. They are very useful ones, made by his factory for the Great Exposition, and I trust you will find them excellent to use.

"With respect, I remain truly yours,

—Private Secretary.

Goods Sold Direct to the People at Wholesale Price.

The Only Business in Canada Conducted on the Same Principle.

Over $200,000 Worth of Boots and Shoes so Supplied Last Year.

The great loss annually sustained by selling to Dealers, first led to our establishing of Branch Stores, where we could supply direct to the people for Cash all the goods we could manufacture, thus giving to the people the goods less the dealer's profit, and saving to ourselves the annual loss. We were the more forcibly impressed into this step from the fact that cheap Eastern-made shoddy goods were being palmed off as our goods. We now sell our own goods, warrant what we sell, use no shoddy or inferior material of any kind, and can and do supply goods of the best quality 25 per cent. less than they can be bought elsewhere.

Lay the dead Hero upon the Sea-shore.

Lay the dead Hero upon the flowing sea-sand,
Launch the long ship—see her decked all with pine-bough,
Watch by the galley by moonlight, pipes accompanied,
Something they suspend to grace the dead hero,
From his own land, from his own home, they bring him,
Till a mast from his ganoh overshadows him.

Through pentlands turn full fast on fleetest sails,
Where the dead Lives his in eternal sleep;
Though his eyes may never more open again,
Though his limbs may never more move again,
Just for that stand (though not sensation him),
A sharpened charm may soothe a watch like this.

But when the shrine where we have garnered up
Tries, pride, devotion, shivers at our feet;
When patience, lacking in the loving cup,
Turns into clinging gall what was so sweet:
What solace bounds above such bitter death?
What future comforts us for murdered Faith?

The Lighthouse's Daughter.

Twilight settled dusky down on the rush of white-capped waters round the lighthouse base—twilight over the rocky shore—twilight folding the far away land in its gray mantle—and I sitting by the little slit of a window, my chin resting on my hand, looking out over the darkness and desolation of the waving world of waters. I was alone, but I minded it not a whit. I was used to that, and it was such sweet peace and rest.

Father was away for two days and two nights; but I felt myself fully competent to manage the lights. I had done it often and often, and there was a sense of human companionship in the idea of all the eyes that were turning, in the darkness, to the red beacon star of the Whitledge Lighthouse.

At sunrise I extinguished the lights and busied myself, singing at my work, with cleaning the glasses, trimming the wicks and replenishing the great receivers with oil; and what with one thing and another, I was pretty completely occupied until noon. Then, as I chanced to look out towards the nearest point of land, I saw a white flag fluttering from the tall pole among the rocks, the signal father and I had agreed on in case of any help needed.

My heart stopped beating and then gave a great jump again. What did it mean? Involuntarily I caught my hat and shawl from their pegs against the door, and then laid them down again despairingly. How could I leave the lighthouse all alone?

But if my father was ill—in trouble—needed me? I knew how to manage the little boat as well as any Grace Darling that ever figured in romance of real life. I could easily pull to shore in half an hour, in the present state of the tides, and there was no need of lights for six hours to come. And without stopping to argue the matter farther, I rushed down stairs, loosened the boat from its hooks, and was half a dozen yards away from the rocky tower before any misgiving ever entered my mind.

Too late to look back now. I kept my eyes fixed on the flutter of the white rag and pulled long, resolute strokes as if I had been a man.

As I drew nearer shore I could discern figures grouped around the rocky points, and my heart sickened within me with the apprehension of some overshadowing calamity.

But they were only girls, as I presently perceived—Adam Stokes daughters from the old farm-house under the hill, who gathered about me, as I sprang ashore with dimpling laughter and eyes of merry mischief.

"I knew we should bring you, Lizzie," said Miss Stokes. "I knew what the signal was." I guessed from one to the other with white lips and inquiring gaze.

"It means that we wanted to see you, Lizzie child—about Kate's wedding dresses, you know—and here you are. So come up to the house as fast as you can."

"It was wrong, Miriam," I said gravely. "I must go back at once."

"When you have looked at the dresses, Lizzie, and not before," said she, clasping both my hands resolutely in hers. "Come; it won't take you half a minute."

And half vexed with myself, and wholly with them, I yielded. It was quite true what she said. It would take me but a short time to go down to the farm-house and look at Kate's things; and I had a woman's natural curiosity about such matters. It wanted a good three hours yet to dusk. I had been prisoned more than a week in the octagonal walls of the lighthouse, so I yielded.

The girls took me back with them in triumph. I liked them well enough—they were all merry, warm-hearted girls, with no harm in them; but I had always managed to evade their brother Laurence since that evening among the pines when I told him I never could be his wife.

"I must get back to the lighthouse," I said, starting up before I had fairly seen all the trands and gewgaws prepared for Kate Stoke's wedding.

He put on his hat and walked with me to the point of rocks. But when we got to the jagged stone over which I had cast my mooring-line, only a piece of rope remained. The boat had got loose and floated away.

I turned with a frightened look to Laurence.

"Bring your boat round here, Laurence. For the love of heaven, do. See those heavy clouds darkening around the sunset; it will be dusk before we know it."

"Lizzie, you know what I have most in heart in this world. Promise me that, and I will do everything for you. If not—why, this night's work will lose your father his place as Nightkeeper."

"Laurence, you—you would not be so base?"

"I have told you the alternative—you have only to decide," he answered, indifferently.

"Never!"

He looked at me for a minute with intense malice in his eyes: then turned deliberately and walked away, leaving me alone.

Alone among the ragged rocks, with the rush of the merciless, never-wearing tides filling my ears with horrible iteration! I called after him, but he never turned his head; and then, clasping my hands, I sank down among the stones, careless of the spray that almost sprinkled my face, and began to weep.

The sun had long since set in a stormy sky, as if it were a sea of blood—the darkness was creeping in black shadows over the face of the deep—and a horrible vision swept across my crazed mind of great ships wrecked at sea, upon the reefs, and the watchful eye of the lighthouse closed and unbeckoning! Of lost souls whose sin should weigh my soul for evermore; of the cry of drowned men, and the shine of lost treasures that the sea would not give up; of people watching for the inward ride of stately ships, whose haven would never be reached.

It was just about the hour that I usually lighted the lamp, and now—Oh! I dreaded to lift my eyes to the black outline of the lighthouse tower in the distance, but a hideous fascination seemed to draw them thither. I slowly raised my head and turned it towards the octagonal windows.

Great heavens! At that self-same instant the light streamed out, red and glorious, as the star in the east must have shone to the Magi. I sprang up with a scream, momentarily believing myself to be the victim of an optical delusion, but it was reality. The lamp in the lighthouse was lighted: its ribbon of flame floated across the moving surface of the deep, with reassuring shine. And as I gazed a blur came over my eyesight, a choking sensation in my throat, and I remembered nothing more until I waked within the familiar walls of the lighthouse, with father's kind face bending over me, and Harry Morton sprinkling my forehead with water; while, at the same moment, the clock on the mantel struck twelve.

"Who," I gasped—"who lighted it?"

"Why, Harry Morton, to be sure," said my father heartily, "and a good thing he happened to be here when we were both off guard! And that last, Lizzie, my dear, is a thing which never must occur again. It's a windy night, and there's no telling what might befall."

All this chanced ten long years ago. I am a happy matron now, with little children's voices sounding in the apple-orchard, whose blooming branches brush my casements. Harry Morton's wife—but I have never forgotten the horrors of that stormy twilight, when the eye of the lighthouse beamed redly on my sight. Laurence Stokes, strange to say, was wrecked at sea, and Kate's lover went away and never married her after all. Dear, dear, how strangely things do happen in this world! Harry says it is all nonsense talking about luck—but I believe it—how can I help it?

On the Woman Question.

The Harvard Lampoon publishes a speech made by Duncan Hardhed, of Podunk Farms, at a recent debate on female suffrage: "I dunno," said the deacon, "as there's any objection to wimmin's runnin' the darnation schools. But as to givin' 'em any right to make laws, both Scripter an' common sense's clean ag'in it. (Great sensation.) In the first place, how on airth are they goin' to git 'em elected? This gov'ment by majority fer males, an' the fact that of the great majority the want the majority can hev the choice. (Great confusion and cries of 'Adjourn!' 'Oh, sorry' etc.) If they can't hev, they don't vote. (Here confusion.)

In the Jaws of a Lion.

I was out after porcupines, and was lying down one night near a porcupine's hole waiting for him to come out. I had no gun, but only my hunting-knife and a large knob burnie with which to knock the porcupine on the nose; for that, as you know, kills him at once. I did not hear a sound until I found the green near me move and a lion got his paws on me and lifted me up. The brute pressed his claws into me, but, luckily, my leather belt prevented his teeth from doing me, and he carried me holding on to my belt and coat. If either of these had given away I should have been laid hold of in a far more rough manner. A lion is like a cat in one thing—he can hold a live creature in his mouth and not damage it, just as I have seen a cat carry a mouse. I knew the nature of a lion well enough to know that if I struggled I should have my neck broken or my head smashed in an instant; so I did not struggle, but quietly drew my knife and thought what was best to do. I thought at first of trying to strike him in the heart, but I could not reach that part of him, and his skin looked so loose that I could not strike deep enough, carried as I was. I knew it would be life or death with me in an instant, so turning myself a bit, I grabbed the lion's nose and cut it through. The lion dropped me as I should drop a poisonous snake, and jumped away roaring with pain. He stood for an instant looking at me, but I did not move, and he did not seem to like to carry me again. More than once he came up to within a few yards, licking the blood as it poured from his nose; but there I remained like a stone, and he was fairly afraid to tackle me again. I know a buffalo and an ox are very sensitive about the nose, and a cat, if just tipped on the nose, can't stand it, so I thought a lion might be the same, and so it proved.

The Cost of Raising a Boy.

The heaviest tax that can be imposed upon a nation is one that is paid in human lives. From whatever point of view the subject may be regarded, this conclusion is irresistible. If we look at it according to purely economical considerations, we may obtain very remarkable results. It has been estimated that an actual money cost of £300 is incurred in raising a boy, cradled among the poorest classes, from birth to manhood. It does not require us to ascend very high in the social scale before we find that the estimate must be trebled. If we take what may be called the cost price of the human suit at any definite time, say at £500 on arriving at maturity, the producing power of the unit in question will bear some relation to that sum; the more costly and careful education producing, as a rule, the more valuable result as to productive power. If the laborer earns 14s or 15s a week, adds £50 per annum to the wealth of the country, the physicians, the scientific, military or naval officer, the barrister or the engineer may look forward to the time when his yearly labor will be worth more than a hundred times that amount, even if appraised only by the price he is actually paid for his time. Taking any producing individual, whether valued at £50 or £5,000 per annum, at any period of his career, no income tax to which he is subjected can approach in its pressure the extravagant tax of death, for the payment of that tax at once annihilates the total earning power of which there was, until that moment, a fair mathematical expectation.—[English Paper.

A very small boy, just beyond the limits of baby-hood, is noted for his precociousness, and sometimes people try to corner him in a logical way. The other day some one took him up and asked him if he was papa's boy. He answered "Yes." "And are you mamma's boy?" "Yes," replied Charlie. "Well, how can you be papa's boy and mamma's boy both at the same time?" was asked him. "Oh," replied Charlie, indifferently, "can't a wagon have two horses?"

Some of the newspapers publish a "useful domestic recipe" every day. The other day in place of the recipe, one of the papers published the following notice: "We sincerely trust that our readers will forgive us. Yesterday in giving a recipe for the chilblains we inadvertently stated that the remedy was to be taken internally. It is, on the contrary, for external use. We hope that Providence has restrained the hands of our beloved subscribers, for every one who drank of the compound is dead by this time. We present in advance our condolences to the bereaved families."—Boston Courier.

A Prayer.

BY M. B. HARMON.

Beneath A Christian's roof-tree kneel,
With every sense in attitude bowed,
My spirit soars and in dust doth lie:
My God! O hear my cry!

Thou Who didst weep at Lazarus' tomb—
Thou Whose dread eye can pierce the gloom
Of night and death—can see me yet:
My God! O hear my cry!

Make me to feel what gracious power
Hath conquered me from hour to hour;
It doth with blessings shield me still—
Shall I refuse the ill?

Shall I forget thine hallowed ear
Is ever bending, list'ning near?
That Thou in pity'ng tenderness
The morning hour will bless?

Shall I forget the cup of woe
That Thou didst drink while here below—
Drink to the dregs—and murmur not Against Thy bitter lot?

Then, Thou didst die my soul to save;
Each mighty love Himself the grave—
The path to The—with Heavenly light:
O strengthen Thou my faith.

And let me learn to say—to pray?
Direct my thoughts from earth above
To where, amidst anthems' countless swell
Our loved one are shall dwell.

Secure forever from the ill
That we on earth must battle still!
How can we mourn when such may be
Our portion, Lord, with Thee!

Zanzibar's Monarch.

The Sultan of Zanzibar is getting very civilised. He has practically suppressed the slave trade, and with a determined hand He gives dinner parties in a European fashion, with music from an excellent band, decorated menus and all sorts of luxuries. His Highness drives out in a carriage and four, with six ostriches in scarlet and gold.

It 'Im Agin.

A lady of amiable disposition was lately instructing a class on duty to the neighbor. At the termination of the lesson, and after an oration on the virtue of returning good for evil, in the belief that she had made a favorable if not a lasting impression on the youthful minds, she wound up with the following question: "suppose a person were to be unkind to you, or strike you, what would you do?" A pause ensued, when one little girl, sharper than the rest, made the following laconic and not unnatural reply: "It 'im agin."

All He Could Afford for the Money.

Cham had prodigiously long legs, as all Paris knew. "One day," said he, speaking to a friend, "I called on a tailor who had been recommended to me. I selected the cloth for a pair of pantaloons, accepted the price—$9—which was demanded, and the tailor began to take my measure.

"With his tape in his hand he began to descend one of my legs, and his astonishment visibly increased as he descended. Down, down he went; but just as he got below the knee he suddenly stopped and put his tape in his pocket.

"'Well,' said I, 'are you going to stop there?"

"'Monsieur,' said he, 'that's as far down as we can go for $9!'"

The Kind Hearted Creditor.

A saloon-keeper went down to the train last night to overhaul a man who owed him sixteen dollars. He announced his intention of wiping the platform with the man if he once got hold of him. He found him, and the two had a talk about the debt. The creditor told a pitiful story about his hard luck, and said he had only just enough money to get to Elko. The saloon-keeper is a kind-hearted German, and after hearing the story of his misfortunes, the tears stood in his eyes, and he remarked: "Mine Got, Pill, lat dot so? Vell, here's two dollars and a half for you to get grub on de way," and thrusting the money into the man's hand, he pressed it with a warm grip and a tremulous "Good-by Pill," and went up town murmuring, "Dot poy is always in hart leg."—*Virginia (Nev.) The Typograph.

A new instrument for multiplying copies of letters, etc., has been introduced into England under the name of the Typograph. It is a modification of Edison's electric pen. A sheet of special paper is placed on a perforating tablet, and the writing is done with a firm hand and a steel pointed stylus. This has the effect of piercing the paper with a number of very minute perforations, through which it is possible to force ink on the sheet of paper placed beneath. The making of the stencil is the most important part of the operations. A little practice will show the proper amount of pressure to put upon the stylus and the easiest way of writing; and this once accomplished, it will be understood that the number of copies is limited only by the duration of the stencils, which can be stored away for future use, and brought out as required. No press is needed; all that is wanted is something with a flat surface, the means of holding the stencil firmly, and a squeegee for scraping the ink over the surface.

Toronto.

Jimmy Papes, king of burglars, has been buried in a pauper's grave.

F. W. Rinser, the forger, was sentenced to terms of four years each on both indictments.

Prof. Daniel Wilson, of Toronto University, has declared some bones found, with barbarous ornaments on them, by the Governor-General, to have belonged to an Indian who lived long before the discovery of America.

On John Deal being arraigned at the Police Court on Friday, 24th inst., on a charge of stealing a boat belonging to Thos. Thomas, of Oakville, the Magistrate ordered him to be handed over to a County Constable to be taken to Oakville.

Thomas Deal has been sentenced to two years imprisonment all but one day, for abducting Mr. Jaffray. His brother John was dismissed, as the jury had made a mistake in finding him guilty of being accessory after the fact to a misdemeanor.

Wm. Ward, a fisherman living at the Island caught a swordfish in the lake on Friday, 24th inst., thirty-four and a half inches long and ten inches in girth, and has a snout ten inches in length. A similar fish has not been caught for twelve years.

Distress in Scotland.

The privation in Glasgow, Scotland, this winter promises to be something terrible. The Glasgow papers are full of devices for mitigating the hardship that already exists there. Here is the plan which the Glasgow News presents for the help of the families of the 30,000 workmen who have nothing to do and no prospect of having work for months to come. The News says:

"Open shops, some for the receipt and others for the sale of articles for the benefit of the unemployed. At each counter let it be advertised that goods can there be deposited—coals, food clothes, in fact, aught usable accepted with thanks. Shops are too easily got, as so many are, unhappily, without occupants. These would be centers of industry and compassion, preventers of suicide and starvation. In addition to central depots for the more rough, ready and needful articles, let there be a special department at which ladies' work is received and sold. Paint over the shops, 'Depot for Unemployed,' or 'Unemployed Establsp.' This would not injure ordinary sales-people, because ladies would frequent the old shops to purchase materials to be made up for ours. Such action would guarantee a four months' humanity bazaar."

Ingratitude to the Doctor.

The doctors who are called up in the middle of the night at the risk of getting the pneumonia, are just as liable to go without their pay when the danger is past, as though they were called in the day time. One of them was one night aroused by a frightful knocking at his door. Sticking his head out of the window he asked the matter. "O, doctor, it is my poor wife!"

"I beg your pardon, but I haven't the honor of your acquaintance, and I am not accustomed—"

"I know it, doctor, but her life is at stake. If you only knew how much I love her. For heaven's sake I beg you;" and he went on for a considerable time in this fashion, until the doctor relented, in spite of the cold winter night. He dressed himself, went out, waded far through the snow, prescribed, and saved the cherished woman. Several days passed, and hearing nothing of any pay, he sent in his bill. Nothing. Then he sent a collector. The devoted husband greeted the dun with anger, exclaiming: "Go to the devil! The idea of me paying that bill for a woman who has since run off with another man!"

An eminent physician was visited by a rich but stingy merchant, whose injured arm needed treatment, and it was feared he might have to have it taken off. The doctor, examining, declared he could save it, and he did so. When he sent in his bill, the merchant, who was now well and brassy, cried out: "Thunder and guns, what a bill! There must be some mistake. Old Sawbones never cut off my arm at all!"

The Land Agitation in Ireland.

A N.Y. Herald's special about the private conference of tenant farmers, dated Dublin, 21st, says:—Thirty-two Irish counties sent their delegates. Cork and Maryborough, Galway and Enniscorthy, Ballenrope, in the County of Mayo, Tipperary and Sligo, were particularly strongly represented. Mr. Parnell was present. The Conference was held for the purpose of forming an Irish Land League which should compass two main objects—the first being a reduction of rack rents; the second, that occupiers at land might have facilities for obtaining the ownership of it. Parnell was unanimously elected President. A long discussion ensued, the sense of the meeting being that the time was gone when landlords could be asked to abate their rates; that people who tilled the soil had a right to live on it; and that if a general abatement of rents was made this would avail little without security of tenure. The charges of rowdyism brought against the movement by opposition journals were unhesitatingly refuted; and the sending of coffin notices and all violent measures were deplored. Finally it was determined to draw the counties together into a solid organization during the coming winter, and thus defend the farmers against those threats of eviction which now hangs over them.

At the conference a letter was read from Major O'Gorman, M. P., in which the writer confidently believes the Almighty God that the Irish had more cause for violence than the Frenchmen 1789.

Resolutions were passed inviting Parnell to America, to try and win the sympathies of the Irish for their oppressed fellow-countrymen.

—Charles Lancaster, a clerk in the Merchants' Bank London, was arrested in that city, on Monday, on a charge of stealing the funds of the bank to the amount of $8,700. It seems that Lancaster, who is very young, a long time since drew five dollars from the bank, and subsequently raised the figure to one thousand dollars. He denied the fact to one Gamer Rowe. Rowe since. Rowe has been extorting money under threats of exposure, and the whole sum was said to have at various times, by threatening about his country as the strength of it. Rowe has been arrested on a charge of receiving stolen property.

Poetical Love-Making.

A Cooking Widower and a Blooming Damsel—A Warning to Widowers.

An interesting branch of promise case was tried at the Middlesex assizes in London, recently, the plaintiff being Miss Minnie Woodman, a young lady of 22, and the defendant a widower of about 50 years of age, named James Blair. He was an inspector or valuator for a loan society in London, and while inspecting the farm of the defendant's father, in the township of Colborne, near Goderich, in March, 1876, he made the acquaintance of the young lady. It appears that the little blind god very soon fired an arrow into Blair's heart, for immediately after his return to London, he sent a copy of Moore's poem's to Miss Woodman, and in reply to a formal acknowledgment, penned a very loving letter. Presents and letters followed till June, when Blair asked his inamorata to meet him at Goderich, which she did, though against her father's consent. Shortly after this Blair appears to have courted the muse as well as the girl, and composed the following verse, which he sent her:

THE MEETING ON THE BRIDGE.

Let warriors boast of thousands slain,
Let poets chant their funeral dirge;
My own sweet girl shall be my theme,
The girl I met upon the bridge.

I think I see that gentle maid,
With sunny smile and golden hair;
Her step was light as evening shade,
Her voice as sweet as morning air.

Her bosom heaved a gentle swell,
Her dark-brown eyes their lustre shed;
They spoke a language none can tell—
I felt their power, but nothing said.

I breathed an inward silent prayer—
A prayer inspired by purest love—
That my own sweet girl a crown may wear,
Where angels sing their songs above.

Poetical effusions continued to pass between the parties, a fair sample of which is the following, which accompanied a hat:

My highest ambition is humbly to share
A kind passing thought in a pure maiden's prayer;
No earthly possession nor palace nor dome,
But love and my friend in a neat cottage home.

At Christmas the plaintiff sent a carol to the object of his affections, the last stanza of which read:

Then robes that are warm, and hearts that are light,
Lips that are pouting and eyes that are bright;
A bosom that's pure and soft as the down—
Oh! give me these charms and let them be mine,
I would rather have these—I am really sincere—
Than honor and wealth, and good Christmas cheer.

Later on the stern parent asked Blair his intentions, when he declared that he wished to marry the blooming Minnie, and during the frequent visits he made to Colborne, he treated plaintiff as his intended wife, making no secret of their intimacy. But alas, men are constant never, and the gushing widower, tiring of his fiancee, endeavored to persuade her to destroy his letters, some 70 or 80 in number, but through the intervention of her mother, Minnie did nothing so foolish. In February he sent plaintiff a valentine, bearing the following verse:

May flowers round her pathway grow,
And chaplets round her brow entwine,
And love like streams for ever flow,
For her who loves my valentine.

On another occasion he sent the following, in reply to a letter of apology:

Let the past be all forgotten—
Why that look of weary pain?
Tell me that you fondly love me—
Take me to your heart again.

The effect of all this poetry on a guileless maiden naturally led her thoughts to rhyming, and after the last visit he made her, in April, 1878, his love in the meantime having grown cold and almost flickered out, she sadly addressed him:

You came, you wooed, you won me—
You won my guileless heart—
And I believed you when you said
That death alone would part.

To this the defendant did not reply, and in May, 1878, he married another girl, the first intimation received by Miss Woodman being the announcement in the London papers. Blair being wealthy—worth $60,000 at least—an action was entered against him for $20,000. The reading of the letters and the poetry kept the court in roars of laughter, and a verdict was given by the jury of $4,500 as a salve for her wounded feelings, which no doubt was very satisfactory to her.

DISTRICT NEWS.

Millbrook.

Mr. Wesley Walsh left town last week, for Manitoba.

THE GRAIN TRADE is looking up, and our grain buyers have to put their right foot foremost to take in all that is offering. Our agricultural friends are having a good time of it.

Marmora.

Within the last few months there has been considerable activity in connection with the gold mines of North Hastings, and there is a prospect that some five crushers will be in operation this winter. The work of repairing the machinery at the Dean & Williams mine, Marmora, under the direction of Mr. McFarlane is being pushed on vigorously, and at other mines preparations are being made to commence active operations. The Messrs. G. & J. Brown sent out to-day three tons of castings for the Dean & Williams mine, and this firm are also supplying a lot of new castings for the Gatling mine. From recent developments, when the mines are thoroughly worked, they will give good and profitable returns.

Campbellford.

THE WOOLLEN FACTORY.—Mr. Senior is slowly but steadily increasing the business extent of the woollen factory, which he is now fitting up in first-class order. We took a run through the establishment a few days since, and were pleased to find a superior building, as before stated, machinery of the latest design and best manufacture, simpler but better internal arrangements, and a system and order of disposal which could not have been seen in the old building.

There are four storeys and a cellar in the factory. On the first floor are the looms, upon which the girls are employed, the second is occupied by the "cards," the third and fourth contain the "jacks," or spinners, while the cellar is used as a storage room. Each room has it own particular machinery.

At the present time there are twelve looms upon the premises, ten of which were in operations last Saturday.

Minden.

On Thursday last a fire was discovered in the rear part of the stables adjoining the Minden Hotel. It rapidly spread and in five minutes the whole stables were in a blaze. The driving sheds next caught fire and from them the fire spread to the wood-work of the stone hotel. From there the flames caught on the shoe shop owned by Jas. Wilson and a dwelling-house occupied by a Mrs. Moore was next to go. There was no insurance on any of the buildings or effect. The loss is roughly estimated as follows:—Hotel and stables owned by Benjamin Sawyer. $1,700; A. Brooks, proprietor of the Minden Hotel, damage and loss, $200: James Wilson, building, $1,300; Mrs. Moore's dwelling-house and effects, $400. In addition to these there were four valuable horses reported to death in the stables, together with a lot of hotmen and two pigs. The fire is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.

Bobcaygeon.

SCHOOL HOUSE.—Mr. Stanley Paterson has placed in this village during operations in his new buildings, corner of Walton and Queen streets, by which the village is considerably and materially benefited. The appearance of a second permanent of a second kind placed in the business, from which the owner is prohibited in two places in the township in various departments. The property is safe from explosion, and stores a very obtainable with but a small quantity of fuel. The pressure of steam required to heat the entire building is but small, and the great convenience of the system over that of stoves and furnaces is beyond dispute. Some idea of the saving in trouble and expense will be had by noting the number of separate offices and apartments that are heated by this apparatus. The block contains two banking establishments, the branches of the Montreal and Toronto banks; the Montreal Telegraph, American Express, and Midland Loan Companies offices, the Oddfellows' Hall, the Custom offices, the law office of Mr. Benson, and the Commission office of Mr. King. The plan of steam heating has been adopted by some cities, where it has been found to work admirably. It is deserving of attention even by small towns.

HYMENIAL.—We are pleased to welcome home with his bride, our esteemed townsman, Mr. A.W. Pringle, jeweller, who returned last evening from their bridal tour.—Guide.

GRAIN AND LUMBER SHIPMENTS:—Business has been very brisk here this month, freights having advanced considerably. The Midland Railway, though doubling all their trains, have much more work than they can do. The exports of barley so far this month are over 300,000 bush., while fifteen million feet of lumber has crossed the lake. On Saturday last, eighteen vessels were reported inward and twenty outward. The harbor officials are called upon to supply all the storage space possible for lumber, and in consequence all those having coal, iron, unused lumber etc., lying in the way, are ordered to remove them. So many vessels are in requisition now for the grain trade, that lumber shippers have some difficulty in getting their cargoes forwarded. Mr. Stanley

PETERBOROUGH, OCT'R 30, 1879.

LAW AND MORALITY.

It is a generally accepted theory that laws are enacted for the moral well-being of society, in answer to some necessity which has presented itself for the preservation of such social well-being. And this is undoubtedly the general purpose of our Acts of Parliament and municipal laws as well, however, and for whatever reason, they may fail in the intention. Liberty is based on restriction; for safety and freedom of person or property is only secured by means taken to prevent assaults on one or the other. The liberty of the weak consists in the fact that the strong are prevented despoiling him. The rights of the poor and humble are only maintained by laws that restrain the rapacity and tyranny of the arrogant. Society recognizes, and the commonwealth declares, that no one can carry out his own purposes to the injury of others without injuring all. Nor is each person left to judge for himself as to what is or is not hurtful. If it can be shown that any practice or performance, however innocent its doer may deem it, is in any way productive of harm to others, in substance or morals, law steps in and lays instrictions upon, or prevents the continuance of such evil influence. In this way we come to have laws for the defence of life and property, and laws for the preservation of health and morals, all based on prohibitions of acts tending to injuriously affect life, property, health or morality. Law even takes cognisance of passive instruments or influences to evil. Of this class are enactments for the punishment of vagrancy, and for the promotion of education. In every one of these the same idea predominates,—that no person shall do or permit what society declares injurious to himself or herself, or to others. Thus there is a deep moral basis underlying each and every law, however matter-of-fact it may appear on the surface.

Morality then is inseparable from law whether in enactment or enforcement. Indeed, in the carrying out of any legal requirement the moral aspect is as important as in the enactment. Those who make any law must recognize the need for it; and only in so far as they see the evil to be prevented will their prohibition or restriction extend. In the same way a recognition of the evil at which any law strikes, will exactly regulate the vigor with which such law is enforced, or the readiness with which it is allowed to become a dead-letter. That social barometer known as "popular opinion," first leads to the passing of laws, and the same barometer constantly indicates the manner in which laws are carried out. Truthfully put, the case shows that "popular opinion" is the moving cause, and the laws and the respect or want of respect paid to them, the indicator of the moral state of society which makes itself visible as "popular opinion." Murder, arson, robbery, or any other outrage recognized by the general community as a crime, is readily punished, and every available means are promptly taken to discover the offender and bring him to justice. But there are other offences against which the people do not so unanimously array themselves; and the laws for the punishment of these are, therefore, more or less neglected. Scenes of excesses for such laxity are met with from the people who are responsible; but the reason that efforts are not made to enforce certain laws is primarily and solely, that a large proportion of the people are themselves concerned in these neglected laws. What, for instance, is the reason that in some towns and cities, illicit groggeries and disreputable houses carry on their debasing traffic practically unchecked, while in other places they are stamped out apparently without much effort? The moral sense of the community in one instance is stronger than in the other, and the machinery of the law is made to exert proportion to the social feeling in the matter calling for attention. In the Provincial capital, the Grand Jury at the late assizes felt called upon to make particular reference to the alarming prevalence of the evils to which we have alluded. This may have the effect of arousing the public conscience to some extent, but till the majority, or at least an influential minority of the people rouse themselves to take action, no lasting good can be effected. What can be expected of men who encourage by their patronage, the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, or of those who themselves indulge in the sin by which disreputable houses exist? Yet to them the appeal is made to do something to put down the evils of which complaint is made. It requires a law-abiding people to enforce law; and till the moral tone of the people of Toronto is raised above the aims for which that city has become notorious, the enforcement of laws against these evils need not be looked for. If any other argument were needed in favor of our position on this question, we would only have to state plainly, that if popular support were not given to such establishments as disgrace Toronto, they could not exist in such numbers. If vice did not permeate the society of the city the distinctive marks would not be so apparent.

A PUBLIC PARK.

In our report, in last week's issue, of the meeting of the Town Council, held on the 29th inst., occurs the following resolution:

Councillor Smith moved, seconded by Councillor Cahill,—That whereas the recent Central Exhibition has demonstrated that the premises at present used, and leased by the Agricultural Society are unsuited for the purpose for which they are used; whereas it is desirable that more commodious grounds should be obtained which besides being used as Exhibition grounds might be used as a public park, cricket and lacrosse grounds: Be it therefore resolved that the Mayor and the mover and seconder be and are hereby appointed a special committee to confer with the Warden and members of the County Council with a view of securing their consent to the sale and disposal of the present Exhibition grounds, the proceeds derived from the sale thereof to be applied in the purchase of suitable Exhibition grounds and the erection thereon of all necessary buildings, which might be obtained sufficiently large to be used as a public park, cricket and lacrosse grounds. Carried.

We have repeatedly referred to and set forth in these columns the advantages and necessity of a public park for the town, and are pleased to observe that it has at length taken definite shape, as appears in the foregoing resolution of the Town Council, and it is to be hoped that, while they are about it, the municipal authorities will deal in no half-handed manner with the subject, but grant the public such a park as will be a credit alike to the Town and County; and such a luxury should not, at a time when real estate is quoted at so low a figure, be a matter of any very great expense. The payment on the loan which it would be necessary to make in order to purchase such a property, could be spread over a number of —say twenty—years, and the interest from time to time falling due, would, we should say, be sufficiently met by the receipts for rental of the grounds for exhibitions of one kind and another, so that at the expiration of the time mentioned, the municipality would be in possession of a property ever increasing in value, and the purchase of which would scarcely have been felt. At all events, a park being an absolute necessity, no time should be wasted in having the matter attended to, for it is not probable that the future will offer better, or as good opportunities for a suitable and profitable purchase as the present. It has been the remorse of many a municipality that the public advantage in this respect had not been attended to at an earlier period in its history, and Peterborough will avoid such a lament in the future only by present and decisive action.

OUR MAIL SERVICE.

With the expiration of the present month, we will cease to have more than one mail service per diem from the front. The Midland Railway authorities have decided to discontinue the carrying of mail matter on the morning train—a service for which they have in the past received nothing. The discontinuance of this service will be a matter of great disadvantage and inconvenience to the business portion of the community, and our members should loose no time in bringing the grievance promptly under the notice of the Postmaster-General, so that it may be speedily redressed. There is no reason why Peterborough should labor under the disadvantage of a single mail service, while towns similarly situated, and of far less importance, have the advantage of two or three mails daily. The Midland Railway, we are assured, would delay the evening train at Port Hope, which arrives here at 10.10 p.m., for an hour, in order to connect with the mail train east from Toronto. By this means a letter posted at Toronto in the afternoon would arrive here the same evening and be delivered through the post office next morning, thus admitting of a reply by mail the day succeeding the posting of the message at Toronto; whereas, by a single mail service, almost three whole days would be consumed by the transaction, thereby causing much inconvenience and in many cases, positive hardship to the business man.

The P. O. Department is now in discovering and still slower in correcting, faults in the mail service, and if our members will address their energies to this matter with sufficient assiduity to have the evil speedily overcome, they will perform an official duty, for which the community at large will be more grateful, and for which they will be deserving of more praise, than for their most laboured achievements in the ignorance of the N. P. "Speak now," gentlemen.

The Quebec Assembly.

The Legislative Assembly of the Province of Quebec reassembled on Tuesday, after an adjournment of two months. Upon the orders of the day being called Mr. Joly offered a series of resolutions setting forth the conduct of the Legislative Council, affirming the right of the representative body to control the Supplies, and calling upon the House to assert its rights by confirming its vote of supplies and indemnifying the Government for all expenses which it may incur to the amount of the Supply Bill voted on the 27th of August. An amendment was offered by Mr. Lynch, seconded by Mr. Flynn, urging a coalition of both parties as the best means of removing the present deadlock and meeting the exigencies of the situation. Mr. Joly spoke for four hours in support of his own resolutions, and defended the policy and conduct of his Government with great ability. Other speakers followed, and shortly after one o'clock Wednesday morning the debate was adjourned until eleven o'clock yesterday morning. The question of Messrs. Pinsonnault and Ryan is very seriously discussed at Quebec. The indications are that the amendment will be carried.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

In the recent election for Belfast, P.E.I. the candidate of the Local Government was elected by 18 majority, being 205 votes less than was obtained at the general election. The New Era, a Conservative paper, attributes this result to the non-fulfilment of the great expectations held out by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries at the election of the Dominion Parliament last year.

It is to be regretted that the decision in the Montreal Orange case should have been based on the merest technicalities, and that no judgment was given on its merits. It grew out of the arrest of David Grant and others on the 12th of July, 1878—the memorable day on which a handful of Orangemen were cooped up in the Orange Hall during the whole day by an angry mob. Mayor Beaudry, who authorized the arrest, was the defendant. The Court dismissed the action on technical grounds, one being that the defendant was a public officer, and was entitled to a month's notice of the action before action was entered, whereas he had only ten days' notice in the notice of action.

Opinion is divided as to the verdict on Sir Francis Hincks. The public generally believe the verdict a just one, but bankers do not. Lawyers will be found to declare it was not in accordance with the evidence, and the Montreal Gazette says that the jurors did not remain sufficiently] long in deliberation. The Herald says there can be no doubt that the public and especially stockholders in banks have had grave reasons for complaint of the manner in which their affairs have been managed. The prevalent system of making bank returns, as shown by the evidence, raises a most disagreeable doubt as to the value of information which bank managers vouchsafe to publish. General sympathy is expressed for Sir Francis on account of his fall at his time of life.

CHANCERY SITTING.

Before Vice-Chancellor Blake.

The fall sittings of the Court of Chancery opened on Thursday morning last.

Hall vs. Delaney.—This suit was brought by J. A. Hall, Assignee of the estate of J. A. Delaney & Sons, against Mrs. Anne Delaney, to compel her to transfer to him the patent taken out by Henry Delaney for a horse rake, and assigned to him prior to their insolvency. Decree for the Plaintiff. J. F. Dennistoun, Q. C., for Plaintiff; E. B. Edwards for Defendant.

Bent vs. Falls.—A suit to set aside an alleged fraudulent conveyance. Decree for plaintiff to the amount of $300, to be paid out of the lots in Bobcaygeon, standing in the name of defendant, Mrs. Falls, that being the amount paid for the lots by Mr. Falls, and dismissing bill as regards the lots in Peterborough. Plaintiff to have his costs taxed on the lower scale. C. Moss and D. W. Dumble for plaintiff; Edmison & Wood for defendant.

Kearns vs. Costello.—A bill filed by the children of the late Martin Kearns, of Eonismore, to set aside the will executed by him before his decease, on the ground that he was not of sound mind, memory and understanding when the will was made. The will was drawn by M. S. Dean, of Bridgenorth, to whom it was entrusted by the deceased before his death and by him handed to the executors named therein, D. Costello, Reeve of Eonismore, and John Donoghue. From the evidence it appears that the executors believing it to be his true will proceeded to carry out the directions contained therein for the disposal of the property. They collected personal property and paid the debts and advertised the real estate for sale pursuant to the will, not having up to that time known that the validity of the will was doubted. But a few days before the sale was to take place the friends of the deceased asserted that the deceased was not in a fit state to execute the will when it was made. On the executors hearing this the sale was stopped and they refused to proceed with the disposal of the property until it was established in the Court of Chancery. Conflicting evidence was given as to his ability to make the will, but the Vice-Chancellor pronounced a decree in favor of the defendants dismissing the bill with costs. C. Moss and D. G. Hatton for plaintiff; J. F. Dennistoun, Q. C., for some of the defendants, W. D. Beck for the others.

Bennett vs. Walsh.—Suit for specific performance of agreement for conveyance of land. Decree for the plaintiff with costs since filing answer. C. Moss and E. B. Edwards for plaintiff; F. D. Moore and W. H. Moore for defendant.

Quinlan vs. Hunter.—Suit for foreclosure of mortgage. The defence was that the plaintiff had agreed to purchase the lands. The Vice-Chancellor held that the plaintiff was not entitled to foreclosure, and decree was made for defendant for specific performance of the agreement to purchase. C. Moss and D. W. Dumble for plaintiff. E. B. Edwards for defendant.

The Court then closed.

KEENE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Presentation.—Last Tuesday evening (31st inst.) the residence of Dr. Harrison was taken possession of by a party of friends, and the Dr. and his estimable lady were informed by their visitors that they had come to spend the evening. They were cordially received, and several hours spent in different kinds of games, music, conversation, &c., after which several of the ladies withdrew to the dining-room and in a short time announced that supper was ready. Before proceeding to partake of supper, the accompanying address to Mrs. Harrison was read by Miss Belle W. Howson, and a purse (containing about $30) was presented to her by Miss May Kindred, in acknowledgment of her services for some time as organist of the Keene Methodist Church:—

To Mrs. Dr. Harrison:

Dear Friend.—A number of the members and adherents of the Keene Methodist Church, wishing to give an evidence of their appreciation of your invaluable services as organist for some time, ask you to accept this purse as a slight token of the high esteem in which you are held by them. We shall not soon forget the kindness which you have exhibited since you came among us, and we pray that you may be long spared to discharge the arduous duties connected with your position, as organist, in such a manner as to add in a high degree to the interest of our church services, as you have done in the past.

Signed in behalf of the members and adherents of the Keene Methodist Church.

Belle W. Howson,
May Kindred.

Mrs. Harrison briefly returned thanks to her friends, and then all repaired to the dining-room and partook of supper. After justice had been done to the good things provided by the ladies, an hour or two was again spent in social intercourse, after which all returned to their homes highly pleased with the evening's pleasure.

Lakefield.

School Board.—The regular monthly meeting of the Lakefield Public School Board was held on Tuesday evening, Oct. 14th. Present, J. Hull Esq., Chairman, and Messrs. W. G. Saunders, J. Clarin, T. Greenwood and G. J. Galvin.

Minutes of the former meeting read and confirmed.

Communications.—From Mr. Shearer asking for re-appointment for the year 1880, re-appointed. From Miss Duff, asking re-appointment for the year 1880, re-appointed. From Miss MacNaughton, tendering her resignation at the end of the present term, accepted with regret as Miss MacNaughton has been a most industrious and pains-taking teacher for the period of four years. From Miss Jackson tendering her resignation at the end of the present term, accepted with regret as Miss Jackson has given good satisfaction during the term of the agreement.

The following accounts were ordered to be paid: E. Walker, $6.25; Examiner, $2.50; W. H. Osborne, $3.61; W. J. Wallace, $3.75; and Geo. Hallett, $24.20.

Moved by Mr. Greenwood, seconded by Mr. Clarin that the Treasurer have tary advertise in the Peterborough Examiner for the necessary teachers for this school.—Carried. Moved by Mr. Galvin, seconded by Mr. Clarin, that the committee of management enquire into the stationery expenditure and report at the next monthly meeting.—Carried. The Board then adjourned.

Pamella.

(From our own Correspondent.)

—Pleasure seekers at Idyl Wild will find that beautiful place next boating season pleasingly changed with a handsome and strong wharf. The necessity of this has been seen by a good many of the excursionists of this season to Idyl Wild. The proprietor will do everything to make this a desired resort for those who fancy pleasure on Rice Lake.

—Mr. Taylor, father of the young wife, who was won away by the Alderville Indian, Black, intends selling out and removing at once to foreign lands, his reason being the trouble in his family caused by the elopement.

—Mr. McDonald auctioneer of Cobourg died Oct. 16th. He filled his position as auctioneer on Oct. 11th and several sales previously, and was considered an adept.

Married in Gaol.

Guelph, Oct., 24.—A marriage of a rather romantic character took place here in gaol on Thursday. The happy man is now incarcerated within the precincts of her Majesty's boarding house on a charge of sheep-stealing. On Friday last he was taken before the Magistrate when he was sentenced to three months imprisonment in the Central Prison. Previous to his arrest he was making preparations for leading to the alter an interesting girl of about 20 years of age, named Abby Grott. For some reason it was not desirable for the damsel to wait till her lover had served his term of punishment, and accordingly it was arranged and permission given that the nuptial knot should be tied in gaol. A minister was sent for and the marriage ceremony performed in the presence of the bride and the bridegroom's relatives, the Chief of Police, Major Macdonald, an issuer of marriage licenses, a Sheriff's officer, officials of the prison and other guests. After the ceremony was over congratulations were extended to the bridal party from all present. An unpleasant event happened in the arrest of the newly made bride, on a charge of purchasing a drug used by abortionists. This occurred after the ceremony was over. A Mrs. McIntosh was also arrested for aiding the bride.

HANLAN AND COURTNEY.

Present Prospects of a Race.

The Hanlan-Courtney controversy rages in the city papers as hotly as ever, and the people are getting heartily sick of the whole matter, and wondering when it will cease. All that the public are now concerned in is to see the two oarsmen brought together in a fair and square race, and they would like to see that done with a little less talk. Hanlan is out with a bold and defiant challenge to Courtney. Courtney's answer is equally bold and defiant. Both of these noble Romans know winter is approaching rapidly.

Courtney says, in answer to Hanlan's letter: I have only one petition. I am willing now, as I always have been, to row a fair, honest race to decide which is the better oarsman, and this virtual postponement of the race which was to have been pulled at Chautauqua Lake on the 16th inst, meets with my cordial approval. I only ask for five days after my new shell is finished, and an impartial judgment of the race upon its merits.

Courtney's friends object to Blaikie as referee, and it is probable they will insist upon another to fill his place. Courtney stands ready to row Hanlan upon any fair and natural water. Courtney, in an interview with Soule at Brighton, fixed next Thursday as the day for the race. Hanlan will accept the proposition, and the race will undoubtedly come off at Washington. Courtney is informed that his new paper boat will be ready in a day or two. He will give Hanlan no guarantee that he will row, except his word.

Let the United States sit firmly down on Mr. Courtney and the Dominion will endeavor to be seated on Mr. Hanlan, if both are frauds of the first water (at Chalauqua Lake) they will prove themselves frauds of the second water wherever that second water happens to be chosen.

Although Hanlan has telegraphed he will not go to England at present, he does not intend to relinquish his title to the Sportsman Challenge Cup or Championship, but will probably row the winner of the Boyd-Elliott match in February next. Should Boyd win he has promised to come here to row, and in that case the battle for England's aquatic championship will be fought out on Toronto bay

Dummer Council.

Council met at Town and Agricultural Hall, Warsaw, on the 4th inst. All the members present. Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. On motion $4.28 was abated on the E h. lot 31, con. 6, Council being assured that site of said lot is in Stony Lake. On motion the arrears of $32.72 was abated on lot 10 con. 8, said taxes, less the interest, having been abated to Calvin Murray in 1874, in lieu of road contract. Clerk was instructed to find out from Co.-Treas. how much D. Rose paid for Jas Reid's lot, no. 9, E. Church St., Warsaw, at land sale of 1874, with a view of refunding Mr. Reid the amount. Mr. Reid having paid the purchase price of lot back to Mr. Rose shortly after land sale. Moved by D. Wigmore, seconded by D. Kelly,—That D. Drain be and is hereby appointed a commissioner to inspect a proposed road to be made by Charles Grant on, or as near the original allowance of road as possible, on the 7th concession line, across lots 26 and 27, and when the road is made as good as the one now known as the White Lake road, this Council will pass a By-law to stop up the White Lake road across said lots.—Carried. Orders granted.—To John Nixon, for clearing and fencing road on west half 31, con. 10, $50; Hugh Drain, premium on insurance of old Town Hall, $4.50; J. R. Stratton, account, $28.79. Francis T. Lumsden, refund for purchase of sec of Treasurer's books, stationery and postage, $6; W. Darling, refund for paying for fencing road and right of way on E. half lot 24, con. 4, $10; Shannon and Wrightson for advertising Court of Revision, $2. A By-law to amend a By-law read three times and passed.

Council then adjourned to meet at Warsaw, Nov. 1st 1879.

Improving Live Stock.

(From the Toronto Tribune.)

Though our farmers are all, or nearly all, fully aware of the great advantage which would accrue to them from keeping up and improving the breed of their stock; it is yet unfortunately the case that a great majority go on from year to year, not only without an effort to secure an improvement, but constantly causing deterioration by picking out the best cattle for the market and keeping the inferior ones at home. It may be that many farmers do not realize the full extent of the injury they inflict upon themselves by such a policy, but the facts which have been so prominently brought before the public in discussing the export cattle trade, should by this time have convinced them that they were foolishly standing in their own light by following the old beaten path, and permitting a few men of exceptional energy and enterprise to reap the rewards which are open to the whole farming community.

From Harry C. Shafer, the Champion Base Ball Player.

Boston, July 18, 1874.

Dr. W. M. Giles,—In the match between the Athletics of Philadelphia, and the Boston Club, played July 18, 1874, at Boston, I fell and displaced my left knee cap. Your agent fortunately happened to be present. He instantly applied your Liniment, and with instant relief. I was able to continue the game. The day following played in Brooklyn, and the day after in Philadelphia. Then sailed for Europe. With gratitude I now communicate this fact, and wish the doubting that every sprained should know of the great to be doubted from your valuable discovery, as without its use I should certainly have been unable to accomplish what I did. The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, OCT'R 30, 1879.

Personal.—Rev. James Scott, Agent of the Dominion Alliance, was in town last week.

Note This.—Lakefield and surrounding country will do well by remembering that W. J. Wallace's is the cheapest place to buy choice new dry goods, clothing, millinery, boots, shoes, hats, caps, groceries, &c., &c.

Startling.—The editor of the Bowmanville Statesman recently advertised "Boy wanted." The next day his wife astonished him by presenting him with a brand new article. There are the benefits of advertising.

Give Them a Trial.—If you do not already deal with merchants and tradesmen who advertise in the EXAMINER, give them a trial order. Liberal advertisers are almost invariably the enterprising business men, and these with whom it pays best to do business.

"Sore Trouble."—Since opening out the bankrupt stock of W. G. Thomson, the trouble with Mr. N. B. Gould and his staff of assistants has been—not how to dispose of the goods, but how to attend to the rush of customers that have besieged the store from day to day.

A Good Sale.—The "Archer" farm of 100 acres, in North Monaghan, was sold on Saturday last by Messrs. Gilbert & Moore, Auctioneers, at the Cheste House, for the sum of $4,020. Mr. George Campbell, of North Monaghan, being the purchaser.

Absent Advertising.—A prominent business man remarks:—"It is manifestly foolish to wait for accidental business. The shrewd man will create business. He will create it by some means of advertising. Experience will soon teach him that in no other way can he reach so many readers as by advertising in a live paper."

Railway Run.—This mysterious season, succeed to match and tomfoolery of every description comes to-morrow, and the boys will be let loose, or let themselves loose to the utmost limit of the tether. Stable, maid citizens will obviate the necessity of spending All Saints Day in repentance, by looking sharply after all portable articles outside their premises.

Dupree & Benedict's Minstrels.—This celebrated minstrel organization will appear for the first time in Peterborough, on Saturday evening in the Opera House. Their entertainment is spoken of everywhere as one of merit and altogether void of that vulgarity so characteristic of minstrel shows of the period. No doubt they will have a crowded house.

Announcement Extraordinary.—Miss E. Delaney begs to announce the purchase for cash at a large reduction off manufacturer's prices of a wholesale stock of Wool Fringes, Beaded Fringes, Gimps, Braids, Mantle Frogs and Ornaments, Plain and Colored Galloons, Dressmaker's Trimmings, which she will offer to her customers at prices that will defy competition in Canada. Dressmakers will do well to inspect these goods. George Street, Peterborough. 43-5ins

Keep to Your Right.—The sidewalks on the streets are often crowded with pedestrians, and among the number many seem to think that to keep to the left hand side is the correct thing. The consequence is that there is considerable jostling, particularly on Saturday evenings. If pedestrians would only keep the right hand side of the walk much inconvenience would be obviated. Make a note of this.

Beatty's Guide to Elegant Writing.—The possession of a rapid, easy and good style of penmanship is one of the most desirable, as well as valuable things we know of. "Beatty's Guide to Elegant Writing," an advertisement of which appears in this issue, is the best self-instructor published. Its author, Mr. Beatty, of Ontario Commercial College Belleville, is also the author of the copy books now sanctioned for use in Public Schools. Young people, or older ones, desirous of becoming good writers should send for it to Ontario Commercial College, Belleville. The price is $1 post paid.

Successful Business.—Messrs. Munro & Alexander report their sales on Saturday the largest of any day since they commenced business last spring. If a steadily growing trade is criterion of successful business management, the cash system upon which this firm founded their trade is assuredly a sound one. Instead of laying in heavy stocks each season of the year, much of which must necessarily be carried over, Messrs. Munro & Alexander by buying judiciously are continually receiving new and fresh goods and the public are evidently appreciating their efforts.

Ontario Commercial College, Belleville.—This long established and popular institution advertises in this issue. It has a Dominion reputation and is patronized by all the Provinces, on account of the practical benefits which result from its teaching. Its principals are members of the well-known works on book-keeping the "Canadian Accountant" and "Johnson's Joint Stock Co. Book-keeping." The young men of this section have been largely represented among its students during the past ten years, and we doubt not that this year will witness a large attendance from this town and county. We can confidently recommend it.

The Litigation.—The entertainment given on Thursday evening last in the Opera House by the Lilipution Opera Company, was one of the most enjoyable ever given in Peterborough. The little performers acquitted themselves with considerable credit, showing careful training as well as adaptability to the stage. The company met with a fair greeting considering the interest that was manifested in the lecture of Vice-Chancellor Blake, on the same evening. Miss Jenny Quigly made a pretty little "Pocahontas." She has a pretty little face, an excellent voice, and was well received. Admiral Dot as Captain John Smith was perfection. The singing of these two "stars" was encored, Col. Orr in eight feet high, paced and threw in appearance, and professionally in manner. Col. Speck, who took the part of Mynheer Rolff, and Prince Louis and Gen. Tuman were amusing actors. General satisfaction was unanimously expressed by those who were present, and should the company return a good reception awaits them.

Bright Boys.—The "oldest inhabitant" is paraded this year, sure enough. We have made diligent enquiry, but cannot find that he ever knew an autumn with such a long continuance of fine weather as the present. Here we are in the last week in October, and the air is almost as balmy as June, some of the days being absolutely obedient, while the trees and shrubs under the sun's genial rays have almost persuaded themselves that spring has come again, and are bursting into blossom. Gardens, too, which often spy covered with a foot of snow by this time, are in many instances, as brilliant as at mid-summer, and in the upside are to be seen the wild flowers of the variation which usually appear in May, while ripe wild strawberries and raspberries are not at all uncommon. Fall wheat has grown to the height of two feet in some places, and we have seen well-filled heads gotten from seed dropped at harvesting. If we could only depend on such weather every year, the Canada of ours would pass the finest climate in the world.

If Demosthenes had not sighed, and by an unwonted effort overcome great obstacles, would he have become the greatest orator in the world? If our modern lawyers have a remark, said, or thinking of the theme, would Temperance and Prohibition.

Able Lecture by the Hon. Vice-Chancellor Blake.

On Thursday evening last the Hon. Vice-Chancellor Blake delivered a very forcible and able lecture on the subject of "Temperance and Prohibition," under the auspices of the Dominion Alliance, in the George-street Methodist Church. The body of the church was comfortably filled by a respectable and intelligent audience, comprising many of the leading citizens of the town and most of the resident clergymen.

The chair was occupied by GEO. A. COX, Esq., who called on the Rev. Mr. Terrance to open the meeting by prayer, after which in a few brief remarks he called upon the Rev. James Scott, Agent of the Dominion Alliance, to first address them.

The REV. MR. SCOTT, said.—Upon accepting the office of Agent of the Alliance he had advised that men of position and influence be induced to take part in the work, and had called on the Vice-Chancellor, as one of them, to deliver a series of addresses. He was pleased to say his request had been cheerfully complied with by this gentleman who, last year, had delivered lectures in London, Barrie, Chatham, and other towns in Western Ontario, which were productive of much good, some of the leading and most influential men of these places having enrolled themselves as members. Reports of these meetings had been published in the daily press and copied into the weekly papers. This course he again called upon the Hon. gentleman, and another series of eight lectures had been arranged for Eastern Ontario. He spoke of the success attending the meetings so far held, and particularly of the good work done in Lindsay on the Monday evening previous.

The HON. VICE-CHANCELLOR BLAKE was then introduced by the Chairman, and on rising said, he would not promise the audience a temperance lecture. There was but one man he believed who could deliver what might be termed a real lecture on temperance—and that was John B. Gough. He was, however, at all times willing to assist in the work. He was pleased to see the chair occupied by so prominent a citizen as Mr. COX, and was glad the meeting was held in the Methodist Church, as the Methodist denomination stood first in the battle against intemperance. Dr. Potts had recently told him that from one end of the Dominion to the other there was not a member of that church who was not a temperance man. To successfully wage the battle against intemperance there must be

A STRONG VOICE FROM THE PULPIT,

and as John Wesley had said, this voice must have a thousand echoes from the pews. A good work was now being done from the pulpit, but what was wanted was the echoes from the pews. As the pulpit had been the chief agitator in doing away with dueling and banishing slavery from the British Empire, so also, he trusted, it would continue to exert its influence in the cause of temperance. A strong addition to the ranks had been lately gained through

THE MEDICAL PROFESSION,

These gentlemen had been accused from the dream that it was necessary for a man to have stimulants from home to enable him to do his work. The very best and highest medical authorities in England had now changed their opinions and were working with the temperance people. He would not ask the audience to accept his statements alone that such was the case, as it might be said it was but the fervid imaginations of a temperance man, but would read them extracts from facts us by some of the highest authorities in Britain. [Copious extracts were here read by the lecturer from various authorities in England.] Some time ago the assertion was made that 60,000 people died annually in Great Britain from the effects of drink. This was published by the liquor dealers and they employed Dr. Norman Kerr, a celebrated physician to compile statistics to refute the assertion. This gentleman, after diligent search, had arrived at the conclusion that not 60,000 people but

110,000 DIED ANNUALLY

from this cause, and so forcibly impressed was he with the result of his investigation that he had now become one of the strongest temperance advocates in the kingdom. The nourishing and strengthening qualities of liquors—as old idea with medical men—had been exploded by Baron Leibig, one of the most famous chemists of the day, who says that upon analysis he finds there is more nourishment contained in a three-penny loaf than in a puncheon of Allsop's ale worth eighty pounds sterling. To prove

THE INACCURACY OF POLICE COURT RETURNS,

Mr. Chamberlain, member for Birmingham, had detectives placed outside of four of the principal gin palaces of that city, from 9 p.m. to 5 a.m. and report the number who left them in a state of intoxication. What was the result? While but 43 arrests had been made that night for drunkenness, the detectives had counted 203 persons who had left these places intoxicated. This showed what reliance could be placed on these returns.

THE STIMULATING EFFECTS of liquor on the system was likened to a man on one side of a hedge, with but 25 measures of strength, while it required 100 measures to jump over it. While unable to get over he received a kick, which, for the time supplies the impetus required, and he is enabled to cross but only to become more exhausted. Just so with the man who takes a glass to make him ready for his work. As soon as its effects are gone he becomes exhausted and a continued supply to keep up the impetus is necessary. Alcohol was a poison and not a tonic. While it was not food there were any other animals it was too dangerous a luxury for any one to indulge in. Dr. Dixon, of the Kingston Lunatic Asylum attributed one-third of the cases which came under his attention to its effects. The custom of treating he designated as pernicious and abominable, and urged the necessity for doing away with the foolish practice of setting every bargain with a social glass. In conclusion he made an eloquent appeal to Christians and members of churches to exert themselves not alone by profession but by sympathy, example and determined work to hasten the day when this curse which is blighting households and ruining the prospects of our most talented and able men shall be blotted out for ever from the land.

A vote of thanks to the Hon. Vice-Chancellor for the excellent address which he had given was moved by D. W. Dumble, Esq., and seconded by Col. Haultain and carried unanimously.

The meeting was brought to a close by the Rev. Mr. Muldrera pronouncing the benediction.

CHILD MURDER.

The Body of an Infant found in a Water Closet.

Happily for the good name of Peterborough the commission of crime of a revolting nature is of very rare occurrence, and the report last Friday afternoon that a servant girl in the Cheste House, named Bridget Sullivan, had that morning given birth to a child in the water closet of the hotel and had thrown its body into the closet, caused no little excitement. Information of the occurrence having been lodged with Chief Constable Johnston he apprised Dr. Kinsmil, Coroner, of the fact, who ordered an investigation of the matter and an inquest was held the same evening in the Council Chamber, when the following were empannelled as

THE JURY.

R. W. Geddes,	P. Mervay,
John Maloney,	John Sullivan,
H. LeBrun,	Thomas McMahon,
R. B. McKee,	H. Edge,
B. Chesson,	Robert Lang,
Thos. McGahey,	E. K. Ostrom.

After being sworn in and selecting Mr. Geddes as foreman, the Coroner addressed them. He directed them to view the body and to be particular in examining as to whether there were any signs of violence visible, especially around the neck, as strangulation in such cases were frequently resorted to. The jury then repaired to the Constable's room where the body of the infant was lying, and found the body to be that of a finely developed male child. No signs of violence were perceptible, but blood was coming from a wound in the forehead, supposed to be opened by the weight attached to the gunpowding hose used to remove the body.

THE EVIDENCE.

After returning to the Council Chamber the examination of witnesses was proceeded with, the first called being NELLY SAUNDERS, who upon being sworn said.—I am head chief room waiter in the Cheste House Peterborough. I was present in the Cheste House on Wednesday night a quarter past 2 o'clock and heard a noise in the water closet. I got up and went to the door of my room and said that Bridget Sullivan had been delivered of a child this morning; that her trouble was all over, and she said something such as that the poor little thing cried three or four times, as she had been informed by some of the girls. I then came to the Police Court at 10 o'clock to inform the Police Magistrate. He was not in his office and I told the Chief Constable. I had no suspicion of the girl's condition during the time she was in my house. I had heard hints thrown out but did not think there was anything in them.

THOMAS JOHNSTON, Chief Constable of the Town of Peterborough, sworn, said.—This morning about ten o'clock Mr. Cheste came to the Police Court office enquiring for Mr. Hatton, Police Magistrate. I told him Mr. Hutton had been here, but as there was nothing before the Court he had left and gone up to the Court House. Mr. Cheste then told me that a girl by the name of Sullivan had a child in his house last night and that it was in the water closet. I then went to the Court House and saw Mr. Hatton. When I told him of it he said that is a case for the Coroner; see Dr. Kinsmil. I then went and informed Dr. Kinsmil and on his order went and found the body of the child. I then went to the Cheste House and with Mr. Cheste took me to the water closet on the ground floor. I lit a lantern and lowered it down but could not see the body. We then went up to the closet on the second story, and let down a light with a rope and saw the body of the child partly covered with the dirt. I could not think at first how we could get the body up, but afterwards got grappling irons and obtained the assistance of Mr. Chas. McGinty.

DR. R. W. BELL, sworn, said,—I have just examined Bridget Sullivan, and find her in such a condition as women usually are in a few hours after confinement. She is not very weak, but not in fit condition to be out of bed. She acknowledges giving birth to a child this morning. She also stated she knew it was alive as she heard it cry. I don't think it would be wise for her to come out to attend this inquest for at least eight or ten days. I did not make as close an examination as if otherwise would have done had she not acknowledged giving birth to the child.

To a Juryman—She said she had supposed the child was dead before it was born, but after it was born she had heard it cry.

The CORONER said as this was the only material evidence that could be brought forward that evening he would suggest an adjournment of a week to permit of the mother of the child being brought before the jury to give evidence. He would suggest to the jury the holding of a post mortem examination as such evidence would be of the most vital importance should the case come before a higher court.

Dr. Bell was then instructed to hold the post mortem and report at the adjourned inquest, which was fixed for Friday evening, October 31st.

Latest Developments.

The latest development in the case is the escape from the Cheste House, of the mother of the child, on Tuesday evening. During the afternoon she had feigned severe sickness, and had to be moved in bed. About half past six the woman in attendance went to tea, and when she returned her patient was non est. Since then her whereabouts has not been heard of, and no one apparently knows by what means she escaped. We will not now say with whom the fault lies but will await developments at the adjourned inquest to-morrow evening.

THE MARKETS.

On Saturday and Wednesday the market was lively, and this with a good demand for family supplies, tempted a large turnout of farmers and their wives. The prices realized were fair. In wheat the quantity has fallen off, the price has also declined very much. $1.14 to $1.15 is the value of Spring—Fall still being 3 or 3 cents more. No excitement in the market at the decline. In Barley the receipts have also fallen off—prices still remain steady at quotations. The season for shipping is nearly over. In Peas receipts light—in good demand 58c to 60c. Oats are not plentiful but enough coming in to supply local demand—selling 28c to 30c. Rye in good demand from 55c to 60c.

Congregation Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all nervous complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. HERE MENTIONS.

—November will most likely bring us mixed weather.

—Snow! Did you see it?

—Close the door after you!

—The stereotype business is now booming us.

—Tally down for a candidate then footup and figures.

—Cold blows the blast and coal stoves are being purchased —The best way to mash a man of doubtful credit is to take no note of him.

—We hear of men sowing wild oats, but who ever heard of a woman sowing anything but tares!

—The trouble in this country is not so much that we cannot raise coffee as that we can't settle it.

—It takes a whole Legislature to change a man's name. A woman can change her's by the act of a single man.

—Next February will have five Sundays within its borders. Just to think of so much Sunday night billin jammed in the shortest month. But this won't occur again for forty years.

—The epitaph that might properly be written over many a grave shortly is "Died of This Holes."

—Did you ever before see such weather in October? Never! What, never? Positively never!

PULMONARY CONSUMPTION arises from a decline or deficiency of vitality in the natural bioplasm or germinal matter, and this deficiency manifests itself not only in a general wasting or atrophy of the whole body, but also in a peculiar degradation, chiefly in the lungs and lymphatic system, of portions of this bioplasm into a sluggish, low-lived, yet proliferating matter, which instead of maintaining the nutrition and integrity of the tissues (which is the natural office of bioplasm) clogs them and irritates them with a substance which is more or less prone to decay, and eventually involves them also in its own disintegration and destruction."

To remedy this deficiency by sustaining the vitality of the bioplasm, and thus provide for the general building up of the whole system, is the office and design of Robinson's Phosphorized Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Lacto-Phosphate of Lime.

VEGETINE.

BEHOLD HE A WELL WOMAN.

CANCER.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., June 26, 1878.

H. R. STEVENS, Boston:

DEAR SIR,—I have for years been a sufferer from a dreadful Cancer in my side which caused me untold agony, and as I am a widow with a family dependent upon my exertions for a support, my pain of body was only equalled by my pain of mind, at seeing my children want for bread. I was prevented by a kind friend in Cincinnati with half a dozen bottles of Vegetine, and although one bottle is still unlooched, behold me a well woman, completely restored in body and mind, and able to perform my accustomed duties. Long may you live! and may the history of my wonderful cure lead other like sufferers to purchase your valuable medicine, if it is with the last cent they possess.

Yours gratefully,
MRS. FULLER SUTT

I write this to certify that I have known Mrs. Fuller Sutt from childhood, and have seen the hours of agony, that her patient womanhood has been called upon to endure. She has suffered untold agonies and now she stands in perfect health with her child upon her knee. The prayers of this grateful woman will ever be yours, my noble sir, and we add our testimony to the thousand that favor the greatest of all modern discoveries, "Vegetine."

Yours respectfully,
MRS. CHELLET SUMNER.

PILES, RHEUMATISM.

GOODALE, Miss., May 4, 1878.

H. R. STEVENS, Boston:

I have been suffering for 25 years with the Piles and found but little relief from any medicine that I have taken for many years past. Last winter I suffered considerably worse than ever before, also in connection with Rheumatism, I was confined to my bed for several weeks. Having procured a bottle of Vegetine I took it with good effect. I continued the use and after taking four or five bottles, find myself comparatively cured. I can cheerfully recommend it for the benefit I have received from it.

Yours respectfully,
J. W. TAGGART.

LUNG DISEASE.

SELMA, Ala., May 12, 1879.

H. R. STEVENS, Boston:

I take great pleasure in recommending your Vegetine. I have been suffering for a long time with the Lung disease; trying every kind of medicine that I could get, but none seemed to do me any good, until I tried your great Vegetine Remedy. I had used it only a short time before I could discover a very great change in my health for the better. I don't consider that your medicine has its equal, for the disease which you claim it will cure, especially the disease that I have been afflicted with.

"Leaves and Blossoms."

Drop, drop from the green Old Leaf,
Drop, drop into the cooler;
Thy sunny days are over,
Dance, dance, dance no more—
Dance, dance, dance no more,
Drop, drop from the green Old Leaf,
Drop, drop into the cooler.

The birds in cadence, will earnestly sing
The praise of the sun and the rain;
The green leaves shall shiver in sad response show
Their wish, where it is not.
Remembrance the green, Old Leaf;
For what have life to do with death?
The death shows thankful.

What then? We true hearts both lived through
The sunshine and the rain;
And bless'd be He, to me and thee,
Who sent His sun and rain!
We've had our sun and rain, Old Leaf;
And God will send again, Old Leaf:
The sunshine and the rain.

Race after race of leaves and men,
Blossom, wither, and are gone;
As ripple and waters rise and fall,
So life and death roll on.
And busy as ocean heaves, Old Leaf,
And loud and fade the leaves, Old Leaf,
Will life and death roll on.

Here like me'd to thee, Old Leaf,
We'll drop together down;
Here like art them to me, Old Leaf,
We'll drop together down.
I'm gray, and then art brown, Old Leaf,
We'll drop together down, Old Leaf,
We'll drop together down!

THE DEACON'S STORY.

BY BELLA FRENCH.

I remember her well. She was a blithesome little creature—this Bertha Maynard—as happy as a bird, carolling her song all the day long. We all loved her very much, and I, for one, shed tears of joy, when she left the flowery paths of sin and came out on the Lord's side. I remember well the day on which she was baptized. Good old Edwards was our pastor then; and I believe I never heard him preach as well as he did on that morning. I never knew another who had such a voice, strong and powerful, yet having a peculiar sweetness, thrilling every nerve, and holding all listeners entranced while he spoke. The good man is with the angels now, where I hope to meet him in the great hereafter; but by many his name is cherished sacredly, for they that knew him loved him.

Bertha Maynard was just seventeen years of age, then, a pretty, girlish creature, slim and graceful, blue-eyed and sunny-haired. Yet, young as she was, she seemed very much in earnest, and willing to give all to the Lord; and none, unless Brother Gregg, even doubted her sincerity.

'She is too giddy a girl to make a good Christian,' he said, shaking his head doubtfully. 'She has commenced in the right way, but I fear she will, ere long, turn back.'

'The Lord has power to bring all into His fold,' I said, in a reproving tone.

'I know that; but I do say that it takes great stability of character to make a Christian. Now we all like Bertie, who is a petted and spoiled child, used, young as she is, to all kinds of dissipation, and with a score of fashionable friends whom she likes as well as she does any of the brethren and sisters in this church. Think you she will bear their temptations and remain pure? that she will pass through Satan's fire and come out unscathed?'

'I think so,' I returned; still his words set me to thinking, and I resolved to watch the poor girl and see how far Brother Gregg's words would prove true.

She had been a member of our church for nearly a year before I saw anything unchristian-like in her behavior. It was one night in early Spring that I happened to be kept at my office by business until after eleven o'clock. At last, having finished, I closed my books, and putting out my lamp, I stepped into the street.

Just opposite to my office was Burke's Hall, now all lighted up for a grand ball. I could hear the rich music and could see the magnificently dressed ladies as they glided through the dance. I resided about half a mile out of town, and my way lay by the Maynard Place.

'Sweet little Bertie is sound asleep, and not wanting the hours which God has given us for rest!' I said to myself as I glanced at the dark windows of her home. 'One and all of the family are enjoying the blessed boon—sleep!'

But no—just then a faint light glimmered from a window out into the darkness.

Involuntarily I ceased my rapid walk, and paused before the dwelling, wondering whether or not any of the family were sick; for I knew they were in the habit of retiring to rest very early.

I was not left long in doubt; the window was raised noiselessly, and a little figure sprang out. It was dressed in a rich evening robe, and wore a mask; but for all of that I knew it was Bertha Maynard.

How swiftly flew the little feet, as she took her way toward town, while, I like a wolf seeking for prey, followed on behind her. On, on she went in a kind of feverish haste, pausing not until she had reached the bottom of the broad steps which led to Burke's Hall, where she stopped long enough to give a hasty glance around her, ere she sprang up them and vanished from my view.

'So, so,' I mused bitterly, 'Brother Gregg was right after all. Bertha Maynard wears a cloak of religion and attends a masquerade! Poor foolish child, I must see her to-morrow. For the love I bear her, I will be kind and patient, and then if she does not mend her ways it will be my painful duty to report her to the church.'

Accordingly I called the next day at the Maynard Place. Mr. Maynard and his wife were out riding, and Bertha was alone as I hoped that she would be. She met me cordially, but her eyelids drooped under my piercing gaze, and I thought her face wore a guilty flush.

'Bertha,' I asked, 'where were you last night?'

I shall never forget the death-like pallor which overspread her face then, or how she grasped a chair to keep herself from falling. I pitied her, and felt glad that it was only I, of all the church that knew of her sin; another might not share her feelings as I would do.

'Bertie,' I said more kindly, 'why did you go there last night? Trust me, I am your friend.'

'Deacon Mar!' she exclaimed, with sudden energy, 'if you are really my friend, trust me. Do not seek to tear my secret from me; for, as the Lord lives, I mean no harm.'

Her pallid face was raised beseechingly to mine now, and I could not find it in my heart condemn her. I only said—

'Bertha, I believe you and will trust on, if you promise never to go to such a place again.'

'I will promise that readily,' she returned grasping my hand. 'I want to do right, but sometimes find it hard to tell what is right, I am not as guilty as you think I am, Deacon Mar.'

And so the matter was dropped for the time and I, although but not convinced, left her. As I at first decided, I made no mention of the matter to anyone; but not feeling quite satisfied with either myself or her, I kept a close watch upon her movements, staying purposely out late at night, whenever any kind of sinful amusement was going on in town, to see whether or not I could discover another error in her conduct, resolving if I should to report at once to the committee.

And so a month passed, and then there came another evening when Bertie's Hall was again lighted up for another masquerade; and on that evening I took my stand near Maynard Place, in a spot that would command a good view of Bertie's window, and where I could remain unseen by any passer-by. And there, hour after hour, I crouched like a wild beast ready to spring upon its prey, believing the while I was doing God's work in thus trying to beat down the poor girl.

The town clock had already struck eleven and I was beginning to think of going home, when I observed a tall, well-dressed gentleman come down the road, and pause before the Maynard Place.

Beginning to get more interested, I bent slightly forward to watch his movements. He walked at the gate a moment, as if to make sure that the inmates of the house were at rest, and then passed cautiously down the garden path to the house, where he paused, and glancing up at Bertie's window, uttered a low but peculiar whistle, which was answered in a moment by the raising of a sash sufficiently high for him to spring into the room, when it was lowered as cautiously as it had been raised.

I could have gone home now fully convinced of Bertie's perfidy, but I resolved to find out who the midnight visitor was; and so I waited in the chilly air of a Spring morning for him to come out again; but it was an hour from the time he entered ere he did come, and even then he lingered at the window for a good, night kiss from the fair occupant of the room, before taking his way back to town, whither I undertook to follow him; but being an old man, I could not walk as fast as he, and finding very soon that I could not overtake him, I turned my steps homeward, for once in my life foiled.

And perhaps for being thus foiled, I grew very angry with the girl.

'She will not find me so lenient now as she did before, I, one of the pillars of the church cannot see such iniquity and let it go unpunished. The church must deal with her,' I said to myself, a little spitefully, I think.

Accordingly, the very next day, taking Brother Gregg with me, I repaired to the Maynard Place, where I found Bertie seated with her parents in the parlor.

'I am glad that you have come,' said Mrs. Maynard, reaching out her hand to me, 'Bertie seems ailing to-day. I never saw her look so miserable. Perhaps you may cheer her up a little.'

'The wages of sin is death!' said Brother Gregg, sternly.

'What do you mean?' asked the lady, in a half frightened tone, while a spasm of intense pain passed over the girl's face, leaving it almost deathly in appearance.

'For an explanation, I refer you to Brother Mar,' he answered, without relaxing one feature of his stern visage.

Tell all I must, there was no help for it now, and though I wished myself a thousand miles away, I told what I had seen, while the mother listened with gasping sighs, and the daughter sat with her face buried in her hands, trembling violently. When I finished, Mr. Maynard asked, sternly:

'Bertie, what have you to say to this?'

The girl rose instantly to her feet. She was calmer now, though her face was death-like in its pallor.

'I have no reply to make, my mother,' she responded. 'What I have done I am not ashamed of, and may do again. I may have a secret, but if I have all the blood-hounds in the world shall not hunt it from me.'

Brother Gregg grew a little angry at this, and said, tartly:

'Miss, if you keep on in this way, you will have to get out from the sheltering arms of the church.'

How her eyes blazed then! I saw at once that we were taking the wrong way to bring the erring child back to His fold, and I said, kindly:

'Sister Bertie, if you have done wrong, confess your fault, and strive to do better. It is an awful thing to dare an Almighty God as you are now doing.'

But my words were of no use. In my anxiety to mend matters, I only made them worse, for drawing herself up to her full height, she said, proudly.

'Deacon Mar, I have no confession to make to anybody beside my Maker, and He, knowing my intents, does not wish any. This is all I have to say. Please consider me no longer a member of your church.

I would have expostulated; but she gave me no chance, for when she ceased, with the dignity becoming a queen, she passed out of the room; and, though I called several times afterward, I never again had a chance to converse with her. From that time she was always 'not at home' when any of the members called, and after a while she was turned out of the church. Subsequently, much sorrow came to this poor girl. First, the young people, even her best friends, refused to associate with her, and afterward sickness and death came to her home, robbing her of those who loved her best—her parents.

Mr. Maynard went first, dying with a blessing on the head of her who had attended him so faithfully; and a few weeks after his death his wife followed him into the dark valley.

I pitied Bertha more than I can tell, as I saw her bending over the new-made grave, weeping bitterly for the mother who had loved her so well, and stepping to her side, I placed my hand upon her fair young head, and said as kindly as I knew how,—

'The Lord loveth whom he chasteneth.'

'Then, Deacon Mar, I trust that He loves me,' she returned sadly.

A few moments afterward she took a stranger's arm and walked slowly homeward. And that was the last time she was ever seen in Elton. The next day the Maynard House was closed, and on it was a placard bearing the words, 'For Sale,' with directions to inquire for terms at a distant city.

How my heart ached then! Where in all the world was the poor child? I feared that she had no friends and might go rapidly to destruction. I would hunt her up and prove a better friend than I had ever been before.

I was preparing to set out in search of her, when one day a long, tear-stained letter came to me from the absent one. I will give it here:

'At last, Deacon Mar, I may make my confession to you; but in order to do so I must go back and commence at my childhood, thus giving you a sketch of my short but eventful life. In a pretty village, many miles from here, we lived—father, mother and I. We were poor, but for all that we were very happy; for love buttered our bread and sweetened our corn coffee. Still my father was not quite contented. He wanted to make his darlings more comfortable; yet, by doing his utmost, his scanty earnings were barely sufficient to give us shelter for our heads, and to provide the poorest food for us.

'Such were our circumstances when there arose the cry of 'Gold in California,' and a party of adventurers, among whom was my father, started for the far-off El Dorado. We had still harder times after he was gone, but my mother bore up bravely, telling all through the long days, and often the greater part of the night, for a sustenance for herself and child, until the news came that my father had died of fever in the land of promise.

'My mother sank beneath the blow and fell sick. It was many months after the day on which the dreadful letter came ere she was able to sit up again. During these long months I know that we should have suffered from want of food, fire and clothing, had it not been for the kindness of a gentleman, a stranger, who was recruiting his health at our little village.

'Indeed, so kind was he that, when after a time he asked for my mother's hand in marriage, she could not find it in her heart to refuse him. They were married at the little church in Afton, and soon after their marriage they purchased the house known as the Maynard Place, and removed to that town, where, in accordance with my step-father's wishes, I passed for his child.

'But my own father was not dead, though he had stood upon the boundaries of the other world; and, after months of hard labor he returned to find the ones for whom he had toiled claimed by another.

'At first,' said this dear father to me, on the night when he met me by accident at the masquerade, 'I thought that I should go away, and none would know that I was still alive; but my love for my child, overcame my resolution, and I resolved to see her at all risks.

'After that, I met him oftentimes in my own room, sometimes in the woods—for it always gave me joy to live a moment in his presence.

'I have heard it said that I am too unstable by half to be a good Christian. Perhaps it is so; still I have been strong enough to resist one tempting for my mother's sake. To keep my secret from her, I knew myself an outcast from society, and the object of the jeers of even those who had professed to love me the best.

'It was only in the closing hours of my mother's life that those beautiful, dark eyes of mine unmanned; bright eyes filled fearfully upon me, and she, raising her emaciated body, 'God bless you, my darling!' the suffering of years was amply repaid.

'This is the confession you wished me to make—this is the dreadful thing for which you took away my good name, and expelled me from the church.

'Well, these bitter days are over, and, thank God, they can never return:

'The last sod has been placed upon my mother's coffin-lid, and I go away with my only remaining, earthly friend, never to be parted from him until God shall have called one or the other to the eternal rest.

'And now, Deacon Mar, I entreat you for the love you once bore me, to clear my name of the blackness with which you have surrounded it. Do this and you will ever have the prayer of

'BERTHA ALLEN.'

This letter I read aloud in church, as it was right that I should do so; and when I had finished, there was not a dry eye in that room, for all had loved blithesome Bertha Maynard, who signed herself Bertha Allen now. And I think one and all of us went home that day wiser and better for the lesson which we had learned.

Even stern Brother Gregg wiped his eyes and hoped that God would forgive him for the part he had in the matter, and not lay it up against him at the last day, when the book shall be opened, and all, both great and small, be judged therefrom.

I have never seen Bertha since the day when, in bitter grief she stood beside the new-made grave; but I hear of her sometimes—always as a gay woman of the world—and I cannot get rid of the thought that if she, who was once such a bright bud of promise, is lost at the last day, I shall, in some way or other have to answer for it.

Another Elopement.

Paris, Ont., now is stirred to its very centre over an elopement, which ended, as most elopements do, in the marriage of the parties. It appears that one Charles Neary, of that burg, has had considerable experience as a lover, he having at different times wooed and won several of the fair ones of that locality. Finally he won the affections of a school mistress at Galt, and the pair were engaged to be married. The young woman gave up her situation and returned home to make preparations for her wedding. Charley went to board with the young lady's family, and then commenced the troubles of the hitherto happy turtle pair. About a month ago Charley's affections commenced to rove. The blandishments of the girl's elder sister were too great for Charles, and his attentions commenced to become so extremely irregular that the mother's suspicions were aroused. She remonstrated with the erratic lover, but he was firm and insisted that he would not marry a woman who couldn't cook a goose. On Wednesday of last week sister Kate was raising after tea; which not being a usual occurrence in that household, set the old lady a-thinking, and she hied her forth in quest of her daughter. She went to Charley's drug store and asked him where Kate was. He said he didn't know, and the lady said she didn't believe him. She watched for some time and saw him leave the store shortly afterwards. The mother followed the pair to the station and took the girl home, but next morning, Charley, nothing daunted, came with a rig, carried the young woman off and drove to Rev. Mr. McLeod's, who procounced the words which made Kate and Charles Henry one.

Rough on Solomon.

The attempt of Solomon White, M.P.P. for Essex, to cheat Her Majesty's Customs by smuggling two cows into Canada, gets rough handling from the Detroit Free Press, which says:—'Mr. White has in this instance violated two of the recent laws enacted by the Conservative Administration since they came in power at Ottawa. First, the customs regulations requiring an entry to be made of all imported articles, and the duty to be paid thereon; second, the regulation which forbids the coming of American cattle into Canada under any pretence. This last regulation has for its object the protection of Canadian cattle-raisers who are allowed to send their cattle into Great Britain without these restrictions, which virtually prohibit the exportation of cattle from this country into England. If the British officers discovered that Mr. White, M.P.P., had imported cattle from this country into Canada, they might shut out Canada from their market, as far as cattle were concerned. Thus Mr. White, M.P.P., touched his Canadian constituents and fellow-citizens in a sore spot—viz., the pocket. He has appealed to Ottawa, but it is not likely that the laws will be swerved for his benefit, and the bitter protection pill he helped to prepare for others he will have to swallow himself. Besides the confiscation of his $2,000, which is a luxury every smuggling Canadian may enjoy, he has the additional privilege of paying $1,000 fine which is imposed on members of Parliament for violating Her Majesty's laws, which is a privilege the ordinary citizen of the Dominion does not enjoy."

The "Mutual Friend."

The name of Mr. Francis D. Moulton comes once more to the surface. The gentleman will be remembered as being the friend of Tilton and the repository of Mr. Beecher's alleged great secret. That is to say, he was the "mutual friend" of Beecher and Tilton at the outstart, but became the enemy of both before the celebrated "explanations" was over. Mr. Moulton has just been suspended from the New York Produce Exchange for "conduct inconsistent with the just and equitable principles of trade," because as one of the firm of Moulton & Hazard, he had "declined to furnish an account of transactions in salt during 1876 and 1877." Mr. Moulton denies the jurisdiction of the Exchange, which is regarded as a strange thing by one who had subscribed to obey the rules. The denial revives the memory of the New York Tribune, which gives it to the public after this fashion. The paragraph refers to the notorious Tiltone Beecher trial:

Mr. Moulton, in his testimony during the trial, reconciled all his contradiction of himself, by saying that then he was lying, now he was telling the truth. He represented himself as having carried on an extensive scheme of falsehood over a period of years to save the foundations of society and preserve the reputation of the man whom he constantly flatly to try to crush. "Did you tie for him?" asked Judge Porter of Mr. Moulton. "I did." "We have your word for it."

"This scene," remarks the Tribune, "produced a profound dramatic effect."

Poultry at Fairs.

In the Canadian Poultry Review for October, Mr. James Lochie, of Waterloo, one of the leading fanciers of Ontario, calls attention to the increased interest manifested in pure-bred poultry, as shown by the stress of public attention they now receive at the fall exhibitions, and the better provision made for them. He also alludes to the many abuses that exist, and complains that only $287 and two medals were offered at the Provincial Exhibition for so important an industry. It is certainly an anomaly that a pair of Bonhams or Cochin chickens, recently bred and transported at considerable expense, should be rewarded with only two dollars, while the owner of two pumpkins, a couple of pails of meals, or a bunch of grapes: gets a dollar more. Similar inequalities appear in the prize lists of all the other fairs. Then as to the judging, that is notoriously defective, as any one must have noticed, but not exactly shown for the most part manifested by the first set of judges that met through their work in other classes, and as likely to be decided by the toss of a copper as any other way. Poultry breeders are beginning to understand this matter, and their interested efforts certainly insist on getting the prize tickets at their hands of fair managers that their generous demands.

Mrs. Scott-Siddons has separated by mutual consent from her husband. A division of the property has been made, her husband getting an estate in New Zealand which is very valuable. Although Mrs. Siddons has made a great deal of money by her readings, she is left comparatively poor, but it is said that no sacrifice would be too great that would rid her of her drunken, worthless husband.

A New Dodge.

Sauntering up to the counter he began to harpoon the eatables at the free lunch table, and as he sawed away the articles under his vest he began, in a tone of melancholy sadness: "Gentlemen, my actions may seem ill-bred, but with a half starved man hunger must be satisfied before good manners can be attended to." The bar tender reached for a club and told the apologetic stranger that if he wouldn't leave at once he'd go for him. "My dear sir," resumed the gaunt-looking new arrival, with a deprecatory wave of the hand and a child-like smile that was spoiled by his having a mouthful of pickled cabbage to attend to, "I can understand your astonishment at what may seem impudence on the part of an entire stranger, and I am not offended at the anger it causes you to display. But when I say that I am a poor, homeless, wandering refugee from the fever stricken City of Memphis——" Five schooners of beer were laid down upon the counter with a simultaneousness that showed prompt decision, and five panic stricken men perambulated toward the door with a celerity of action that was admirable. The man behind the bar had vanished into airy nothingness, and as the weary stranger polished off the free lunch and gathered in schooner after schooner until, beer laden, he ambled toward the street, that saloon was as bare as the upper lip of a sixteen year old youth. And the poor, homeless, wandering refugee from the fever stricken City of Memphis, who had so suddenly descended to plain "bill," laconically replied, with a deflection of the left optic: "Immense!"

The latest silliness that Cincinnati indulges in is public marriages at Inwood Park. A society was established not long ago by ex-Mayor Moore and others who ought to know better, and this society has for its object the "Promotion of Marriage." The society gives a gold ring to the bride and some furniture to the newly-married couple, and furthermore, does the marrying for nothing. The marriages are, of course, done wholesale, and consequently the society gets the very lowest obtainable rates. The society gives a big picnic at Inwood Park, when those interesting ceremonies take place, and thus they pay expenses, and probably reap a large profit. The city is flooded with handbills advertising the picnic. The society announces its aim to be to promote in all honorable ways the marriage of citizens, giving material aid to young couples to begin married life by securing homes and getting employment for the husband. The invitation in the bills reads: "Young men, come with your sweethearts, and if you have none there will be thousands of handsome girls to select from: young ladies, come and bring your beaux with you; old maids and deplorable bachelors, don't fail to be on hand with the hope that you may yet be saved. Come one and all and enjoy yourselves."

PETITT'S EYE-SALVE.

An Infallible Remedy for all Diseases of the Eye (acute or chronic), Granulation of the Lids, Ulceration of the Lachrymal Glands, Films, and Weakness of the Vision from any cause.

THE AMERICAN EYE-SALVE is presented the public with the assurance of its efficacy as a curative of the most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflamation whether induced by scrofulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diminished tone of the optic nerve, or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ. Also for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the Salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, where weakness, pain, and misery may have long threatened a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe, and effective remedy ever discovered. The materials of which it is made are pure, perfect, and costly, compounded with elaborate care and exactness safe in its application, being used externally, and, of course, lessening the pain and danger, which necessarily attends the introduction of minerals and eye-washes. Rheumom and Old Chronic Sores, of scrofulous origin, or resulting from whatever cause, yield to the American Eye-Salve. It is used successfully for Piles. Its soothing effect is immediate, permanent cure requires but a few applications. The proprietors of "Dr. J. Petitt's American Eye-Salve," while making new and improved machinery for making a more perfect box for the Eye-Salve, have changed the Trade Mark on the cover so as to correspond with the Cut on the Wrapper, Circulars, Advertisements, etc. We call attention to this, as it might otherwise be regarded as counterfeiting.

Mitchell's Hellandona Improved India Rubber Porous Plaster.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been treated by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

The principal ingredients used in making these Plasters are Gum Olibanum—or better-known as the Frankincense of the Bible—Rubber, and Burgundy Pitch which, when scientifically compounded, is full of electricity and when combined with the pure medicinal gums, is found to be one greatest healing mediums ever brought before the human race.

They are acknowledged by all who have used them to act quicker than any other Plasters they ever before tried, and that one of these Plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other Plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different; the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.

They possess all the soothing, warming, supporting and strengthening qualities of all other Plasters. Many who have been relieved of RHEUMATISM, TIODOLOREUX, and various other pains in the KIDNEYS, BREAST or SIDE, and believe it is solely done by the electrical qualities which the Porous Plasters contain, and which is imparted to the system, thus restoring them to a healthy condition.

They are very soft and pliable, still very adhesive; and a sure cure for WEAK BACKS PAINS IN THE SIDE AND BREAST, and are invaluable to those who have a COLD of long standing, and often prevents CONSUMPTION. Some even tell us they believe they were entirely cured by the use of them of a long fleshed Consumption.

Joy among the Children.

Cuticle's Surrey Castor Oil, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 600 Coasters in Canada.

The difficulty of administering nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having them pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Surrey Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and while equally safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither pain nor griping. Some children say it is heavy; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—'My children drink it like water;' another—'We had to hide the bottle or they would have drained it right off;' another—'My little girl has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she hates the ordinary Castor Oil and we never could get her to take it without a fight; yet another—'I wish you manufacture your Surrey Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing comes to take the place of all the common oils.'

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a simple household medicine has induced T. Copland to place it before the market, but the public can guard themselves against substitution (which unprincipled parties are attempting to sell on the reputation of this article) by seeing that the name of 'Copland's Surrey Castor Oil,' is on the wrapper and directions inside.

WHOLESALE

Manufacturer of Boots & Shoes,

16 FRONT St. EAST, TORONTO.

PETERBORO' BRANCH, - DIXON'S BLOCK.

Goods Sold Direct to the People at Wholesale Price.

The Only Business in Canada Conducted on the Same Principle.

Over $200,000 Worth of Boots and Shoes so Supplied Last Year.

The great loss annually sustained by selling to Dealers, first led to our establishing of Branch Stores, where we could supply direct to the people for Cash all the goods we could manufacture, thus giving to the people the goods less the dealer's profit, and saving to ourselves the annual loss. We were the more forcibly impressed into this step from the fact that cheap Eastern-made shoddy goods were being palmed off as our goods. We now sell our own goods, warrant what we sell, use no shoddy or inferior material of any kind, and can and do supply goods of the best quality 3c per cent. less than they can be bought elsewhere.

Everything Marked in Plain Figures. Only One Price.

CUSTOM DEPARTMENT.

Our arrangements are now complete in this department, and we can make to measure promptly either Ladies', Gentlemen's, or Children's Goods, in the Latest Styles, at little over half the price usually charged.

"Not as I Will."

Humbled and alone I stand
With unknown thoughts on each hand.
The darkness deepens as it comes,
Afraid to face, afraid to flee,
Is this one thing I crave to know
Each day more surely as I go,
"Not my will, but Thine, O Lord, be made,"
Darkness are lifted," was my plea
By some great law unseen and still Unfathomed purpose to fulfil
"Not as I will."

Humbled and alone I wait;
Less seems the bitter, each the late;
Two heavy burdens in the hand,
And low foot-holes up the stair;
And joy is weak, and grief is strong,
And years and days of easy to long;
Yet this one thing I crave to know
Each day more surely as I go,
That I am glad the end is still
By changeless laws are ordered still.
"Not as I will."

"Not as I will" the utmost trust sweet
Each time my lips that words repeat.
"Not as I will," the further step
More calm than birth, when this thought stands
Like wicked voices in calms and blasts
All "unused," and "all unknown."
"Not as I will," becoming the One
Who loved us first and best, and has gone
Before us on the road, and still
For us must all His laws fulfill.
"Not as we will."

Trent Valley Canal.

The Toronto Tribune in an article relative to the meeting of municipal representatives held in this town a short time ago interested in the construction of the above work, after speaking of the practical manner in which the committee went to work says :—

"All this shows an amount of energy that betokens a spirit determined to deserve success. But these great canal projects for connecting Lake Huron with Lake Ontario, and thereby shortening the distance from tide water to the far west by many hundreds of miles, have thus far failed to enkindle the necessary amount of enthusiasm to ensure their construction, and therefore it may be imagined that the Trent Valley scheme is about to share the same fate. It is one of the oldest projects of the kind, and in recent years has attracted far less attention than either of its rivals. But it is the only one, as far as appearances go, that has found favour in the eyes of the Dominion Government, and certainly the only one in whose support such a display of popular feeling can be got up as that indicated by the meeting at Peterboro'. It would be a mistake, therefore to suppose that it must always remain an unrealised scheme. Assuredly there will some day be one canal constructed to connect the Georgian Bay with Lake Ontario, or the St. Lawrence, so that the question is not so much one of a canal, as it is one of which route shall the canal take—whether by the Ottawa, the Trent Valley, or the more western and far shorter route of the proposed Huron and Ontario Ship Canal. From what we have heard we judge that there is a firm determination to press the claims of the Trent Valley route on public notice, and if by the superior energy and influence of its promoters the support of the Government can be secured, there does not seem to be any insuperable difficulty in the way of its being undertaken, even if it can be made nothing better than a respectable ditch. With the rapid development of the western trade, new outlets to the markets of the world will assuredly be looked for, and the time has come for Canadian enterprise to undertake to supply the want. The opportunity is at hand, and the country ought to be prepared to raise the means. The real question which should engage public attention is the route. Whether it is to be the Huron and Ottawa, the Trent Valley, or the Ottawa and French River scheme, is a proposition that can neither be too soon nor too thoroughly discussed, for it is in harmony with the anticipated progress of the development of the country's resources that one of them will some day be chosen, and of the highest importance to the country is interest that the choice should fall upon the best."

ANOTHER OPINION.

The Barrie Gazette says :—Those municipal Councils which are spending money in paying the expenses of deputations to consider, and pamphlets to describe the Trent Valley Canal project have evidently allowed their hopes and imaginations to run away with their reason and judgment. Why should a canal with numerous lockages be built in ample opposition to the Welland Canal, now in process of enlargement? If a new canal to take the place of existing works, and shorten the distance to tide water, be built at all, would it not be well to carry it past the Lachine Canal, as well as the Welland Canal? This can be done by means of a canal from French River, through to the upper waters of the Ottawa. This must be the canal of the future, even if it cost more than other mooted projects. The present activity in connection with the formerly exploded Trent Valley Canal scheme can only be explained reasonably on two grounds. One is, that work had to be provided for a certain engineer; the other, that political capital might be made out of the scheme in certain localities. We feel confident that there is nothing more in the sport that has lately been given the project by the Government; and would therefore advise municipalities not to throw money away upon an unprofitable scheme.

Charged with Kidnapping.

The trial of James Hamilton for kidnapping William Horton took place at Whitby on Saturday before His Worship Judge Barnhart. The Oshawa Vindicator says, on the 23rd of September last a son of the prisoner had run away from school. He suspected young Horton with enticing him away, and chased the two, finally catching Horton in Mr. Brenker's barn. He took the boy, and after kicking and striking him, went in pursuit of his own, but not finding him, returned to the barn and tied the boy to an upright ladder, and left him until sometime in the night, when he returned and took the boy to his own residence, letting him go when his father came to enquire about him in the morning. At the conclusion of the evidence for the prosecution, His Honor held that it could not be a case of kidnapping, as Hamilton had not taken the boy secretly, as he had spoken to a number of persons respecting his intention of keeping him until he got his own. He was then held in the second count of false imprisonment. The witnesses for the defence failed to effect the case, and His Honor found Hamilton guilty, and after some sharp remarks on his conduct, inflicted a fine of $20 and costs.

Winnipeg.

Those who are considering whether or not to go to Winnipeg would do well to reflect on the prices which are now current in that city. Board cannot be had under $5 per week, and it ranges from that figure up to $8 and $10. The washing of a shirt, 25c.; a hair cut, 25c.; a shave 15c.; coal is $13.50 a ton, and the poorest firewood is $8 a cord. Houses that in Ontario would not fetch $7 a month, rent readily for $20. Business of all kinds is exceedingly active, but if anything overdone. There are, in fact, too many people in the city—more than is required to do what is to be done, and consequently many cannot get about half idle, and find the times hard enough, considering what they have to pay for their living. Out in the country, however, it is quite different. Those who go farming cannot help doing well if steadily and economically whatever about them, together with some capital,

The Captive Zulu King.

Cetewayo is enjoying himself. At last accounts he was at Cape Town, whither he went by water. When just out of sight of land he held up his hands in astonishment, but like all savages, expressed no word of surprise. He has left off beer drinking; not from reformatory reasons, but because he likes gin better. He prepares his appetite for beef by devouring a pot and a half of jam. He sticks to his dignity and exhibits it by keeping the photographer waiting several hours. The smiling face he put on showed that he knew what a photograph ought to be. His wives giggled till he spoke to them, and then they stopped in a way to prove that they had not forgotten the temper that ruled them in Zululand. He declined sitting again, because he said he did not want to make a fool of himself three the same day. When asked to sit with his wives he advised the photographer to cut some into the pictures and put it in the middle of theirs. He measures sixty inches around his waist, is very tall, not ungainly, good-natured, sociable, struts about with a black "tile," is learning to write, is subject to sulks, and is very dignified.

The North West.

New Land Regulations Issued by the Dominion Government.

The Government Railway Land regulations, which have occasioned so much unfavorable comment, are to be amended. The country lying on each side of the railway is divided into belts, as in the previous regulations, and then it is provided that the even-numbered sections in each township throughout the several belts above described shall be open for entry as homesteads and pre-emptions of 160 acres each respectively. The odd-numbered sections in each of such townships shall not be opened to homestead or pre-emption, but shall be specially reserved and designated as railway lands." Under the old regulations, Belt "A" was withdrawn from homestead entry and pre-emption, and held at $6 per acre. Under the new regulations it is provided that the railway lands within the several belts shall be held as follows:—In Belt A, $5 per acre: in Belt B, $4 per acre; in Belt C, $3 per acre; in Belt D, $2 per acre in Belt E, $1 per acre. The pre-emption lands will be held at the following rates: In the Belts A, B and C, at $2.50 (two dollars and fifty cents) per acre; in belt D at $2 (two dollars) per acre; and in belt Est $1 (one dollar) per acre. The terms of sale are the same as before. All moneys received in payment of pre-emption lands shall inure to and form part of the fund for railway purposes, in a similar manner to the moneys received in payment of Railway Lands. These provisions shall be retroactive so far as relates to any and all entries of homestead and Pre-emption Lands, or sales of Railway Lands obtained or made under the regulations of the 9th of July, hereby superseded; any payments made in excess of the rates hereby fixed shall be credited on account of sales of such lands. Provision is made for cases of persons who have taken up land under the previous Order-in Council, and also that all entries of lands shall be subject to certain provisions respecting the right of way of the Canada Pacific Railway, and of any Government colonization railway connected therewith. There is also the further provision: "With a view to encouraging settlement by cheapening the cost of building material, the Government reserves the right to grant licenses, renewable yearly, under section 52 of the "Dominion Lands Act, 1879, to cut merchantable timber on any lands situated within the several belts above described, and any settlement upon, or sale of lands within, the territory covered by such licenses, shall for the time being be subject to the operation of such licenses." The regulations are dated 14th October.

Clark Brown.

The Murderer of His Father and Sister Launched into Eternity. Full Particulars of the Solemn Occurrence. Text of his Confession.

CORNWALL, Oct. 31.—The execution of Clark Brown, convicted of the murder of his father and sister at West Winchester on the night of the 2nd September last, took place here this morning at 8 o'clock. The early hour set by the Sheriff for carrying the law into effect debarred many from being present. As it was, quite a crowd gathered at the Court House door seeking admission, but only those holding tickets issued by the Sheriff were admitted. Not more than seventy-five persons witnessed the execution. The scaffold was a plain structure erected in rear of the jail. At ten minutes before the hour, the bell of St. John's Church began to toll, and the prisoner was interrogated in his devotions by the hangman, who was clothed in a tight fitting suit of black, with a mask over his face. The Rev. Dr. McNish, Rev. Mr. Bennie and Mr. F. A. Morrow had been engaged with the prisoner for some time in devotional exercises, singing and prayer

At the appointed hour, the prisoner was pinioned and the solemn procession started from the cell to the gallows, led by the Sheriff, followed by the reverend gentlemen, the prisoner, and the hangman bringing up the rear. The prisoner walked with a firm step, but said nothing on the gallows. His confession has been given, under seal, to Rev. Dr. MacNish.

After being placed on the trap door the black cap was drawn over his face, the noose slipped over his head, and during the delivery of the Lord's Prayer, the bolt was drawn, and the prisoner launched into eternity. Not a muscle moved; everything passed off without the slightest hitch. The pulse ceased to beat eight minutes after the bolt was drawn, and the body pronounced dead by medical gentlemen present. The body was afterward cut down and deposited in a rough coffin. After the usual formalities it was interred in the gaol yard, and then ended the first execution during Sheriff McIntyre's tenure of office.

BROWN'S CONFESSION.

The following is the confession which was read by Rev. Dr. MacNish after the execution :—

I, Clark Brown, who is so shortly to appear before God my Maker, make this my last confession. I told the whole truth before of the murder of my poor father and sister. I kept nothing back, and I alone did the murder, and no one helped me to kill my father and sister. I am charged with poisoning my uncle, Warren Henderson, and poor Georgie Williard. I positively deny the charge, for I am innocent. I am also charged with poisoning a lady in a ball-room. I positively deny that charge, for I am innocent; I deny telling Theodore Sharp that I intended killing my wife, and I hope in God's mercy she will never believe such a thing of me. It is my dying request that no suspicion should rest on my mother, or my darling wife, for I, and I alone, am guilty, and I am willing to suffer the punishment of death for my awful crime. When we all parted for the night, on the 2nd of Sept., I had no thought that I would be in this awful position now. I heartily thank Rev. Dr. MacNish and Mr Bennie for the great kindness they have shown me. I [illegible] all the officers of the jail for their great kindness to me, especially Mrs. Shaver; I pray that God's Blessing may rest on herself and family. I cling to the firm belief that the blood of Jesus Christ will cleanse from all sin, and even I hope to be forgiven through the mercies of the Son of God.

CLARK BROWN.

Independent Order of Foresters.

The sixth annual meeting of the Most Worthy High Court of the World, Independent Order of Foresters, convened in London, Ont., last Tuesday morning. A large number of delegates from the United States were in attendance.

This order was founded on the 17th of June, 1874, by Col. A. B. Caldwell, of New York, since which time, being a period of five years, a membership has accrued of about 12,000, which have paid out over $200,000 of endowments to the widows and orphans of the deceased members. This order has also paid during this time for weekly benefits, medical attendance, temporary relief, and funeral benefits, $36,376.68. The value of property owned by the Courts within the entire jurisdiction is $70,980, besides cash in bank, $33,693. The number of Courts, Camps, Merium Degree Courts, and Right Worthy High Courts is 846. During the last year the Executive Committee have planted Independent Forestry in nine new States, Territories and Provinces, viz: Arkansas, Arizona, District of Columbia, Dakota, Georgia, Province of Quebec, and Manitoba, Texas and South Carolina. Eighty-seven new Courts have also been added to the fold, and is rapidly increasing, embracing the leading fraternity men of the United States and Canada. The great feature of the legislation of this body during its present session was the endowment law.

The meeting was a lively one throughout and considerable interest was taken in the proceedings by the members of the Court. We take the following from the London Advertiser of the 25th ult :—

In consequence of the secession from the Order of certain of the officers and others of the High Court of Ontario, arising out off dissatisfaction at the action of the Supreme High Court of the World, held in this city, regarding the separation for endowments of this High Court, there was no adjournment last night, but those who remained to the Order met this morning at Victoria Hall, for the purpose of filling the vacancies caused by such secession.

Dr. Oronhyatekha, by virtue of his position of Past High Chief Ranger, took the chair and opened the proceedings by explaining the situation and laying down the law of the matter, and asked the members present their pleasure respecting the future of Forestry in Canada.

After a somewhat lengthy discussion, it was moved by Bro. Wynn, of Court Goderich, No. 32, and seconded by Bro. Botterill, of Court Ottawa, No. 41, that this High Court do now proceed to the election of officers, to fill the places left vacant by the secession of the disaffected Foresters.—Carried.

P. H. C. R., Dr. Oronhyatekha then opened the Court in due form, when the following brethern were elected and installed to office :

Bro. Dr. Oronhyatekha, of London, H. C. Ranger.

Bro. W. Shepperd, editor of the Belleville Intelligencer, H. V. C. Ranger.

Bro. Col. H. P. Attwood, Court Victoria, High Secretary.

Bro. H. A. Crane, Court Rideau, H. J. Woodward.

Bro. Geo. McBroom, Court Maple, No. 4, H. Sen. Beadle.

Bro. J. W. Jones, Principal of Commercial College, H. Jun. Beadle.

Bro. Rd. Botterill, Court Ottawa, P. H. C. Ranger.

Bro. Williams, ex-Mayor of Napanee, Court Napanee, representative to the Supreme Court for one year, in the place of Bro. McRobie, seceded.

Bro. Capt. T. Peel, Court Hope, Auditor.

The late High Chief Ranger acknowledged the fealty of this High Court, and delivered over the Ritual to the present H. C. R., and he with the late High Secretary, retired from the Order.

The High Secretary was instructed to notify the Supreme Court of the allegiance of this High Court, as at present constituted, and a committee was appointed to address a circular to all Courts in the Dominion, stating the facts of the case, and embodying a copy of the new endowment law as adopted by the Supreme High Court at the session just closed, together with the exact amount paid by Canadian Foresters for endowments, and also the sums received by Canadians from that fund.

The next annual meeting of the High Court will be held in London on the last Tuesday in September, 1880, at 9 o'clock a. m.

The Simcoe Defalcation.

Exposure of the Modus Operandi—Liabilities, $70,000.

Fresh instances of defalcation by D. T. Duncombe, barrister, who lately absconded from Simcoe, are constantly coming to light. A monetary journal gives currency to the statement that numerous cases of swindling have been practised upon too-confiding clients. One of his practices was, when receiving partial payments upon mortgages, to insist upon a new mortgage being made for the amount of the unpaid balance. He would promise to release the old instrument, but this was seldom attended to and the consequences is that he has pocketed these payments, and the unfortunate client now finds himself not only minus the amount of money paid, but saddled with an additional claim upon his property. From apparent developments, his liabilities cannot fall short of $75,000 to $80,000. How the money has been disposed of is unknown. The whole affair promises much litigation, and his old associates in the profession will have some fine pasturing. There is one strange feature about the affair, namely that Mr. Duncombe appears to have been watched by town constables for several days before he took his departure from his house, but he was afterwards permitted to escape.

Breach of Promise Case.

A man may not marry his aunt in Michigan; but if he promises and fails to do so, a New York jury is liable to bring in damages. One Orson Crampton has been sued by his aunt, six years younger than he, for promising to be true to her in Mobile, Ala., and subsequently at her brother's house in Fairfield, Mich. She had the documents to prove it, and after a vein effort of her counsel to show that she was a resident of Michigan and not of New York, the jury brought in a verdict of $10,000. It is said she could have got $50,000 if she had claimed it. Crampton closed one of his letters by remarking that "when life's fitful journey is over, darling, hand in hand, we will enter the portals of the golden gate." "We'll enter the portals of the golden gate," said Miss Campbell's counsel to the jury, as he sat down. And he was right.

The Great Forger.

Cooper, the American forger, in his address to the Court on Saturday, said he was a gentleman, and thought that when he took a house at Hemel Hempstead he could honestly maintain it. He and his wife furnished it with hopeful anticipation, but nemesis came and he was subpœned to look into his wife in the face. He was taken and fell. The prisoner groaned and wept and said he had lost everything except a sense of

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, NOV'R 6, 1879.

OURSELVES.

We have pleasure in announcing to the merchants and business men of the town and county of Peterborough as well as to our advertising patrons in general, that we have arranged to issue each week during the next three months (commencing with this number) five hundred copies over and above the usual number required for our subscribers. The previous large circulation of the EXAMINER, together with the present special edition, place it far ahead of any other paper in this section as an advertising medium, and as it is an acknowledged fact that the larger the circulation the greater the benefits accruing to the advertiser, we can confidently solicit an increased patronage from amongst our merchants, now that we have a circulation greater than the combined circulation of any other two weekly journals published in this county.

In connection with our job printing department, we may state that during the past month we have added largely to our former well assorted plant by the purchase of a number of fonts of the latest and handsomest designs in plain and ornamental card and circular type, as well as a quantity of poster type, which will be further augmented in the course of a few weeks by the receipt of a quantity of Scotch wood type and borders, at present being specially manufactured for us in Edinburgh. We are therefore in a position to satisfactorily fill all orders for any description of job printing with which we may be favored, in a style not inferior to the best city work. As our facilities for expeditiously turning out work are now very complete, we can guarantee our customers that all orders with which we may be entrusted will be promptly and carefully attended to at still lower prices than formerly. We therefore confidently solicit a continued patronage from the public, believing that we can give them better satisfaction than ever.

ALL FEAR TO CALL IT FRIEND.

Protection has done and is doing no good to the general people of Canada; but is rather injuring them. It has utterly failed to accomplish even a tithe of what its advocates claimed for it. Why then was the change of tariff adopted? And, above all, why continue it? The people are only burdened by an increased taxation from which they receive no benefit whatever. Bread is made dearer; wages remain stationary, or are lower; the poor look their usual supply of food; and all for what? To perpetuate the foolish policy of Mr. Samuel L.—now Sir Leonard—Tilley. The labor of the artisan, the farmer and the salaried servant is sadly hindered by restrictions placed on it by law; their wages, earned by earnest work and amid weariness and life-wear, are severely handicapped by paying taxes on the necessities they have to buy with the few dearly bought dollars that come to them during the year. Why is this? Who gets the gain? Men say the manufacturer. But the manufacturer denies it. Where then is the profit for all this sacrifice? In the name of Truth; in the name of Justice! in the name of Mercy, we ask the government to do away the consequent blessing (if such there be) or remove the cursing cause. Does fraud means less here? Or the man with fixed income; and he accordingly demands the extra work and increased wages granted him in so many words by Tory advocates of Protection in 1878. If he cannot have these anticipated advantages, which led him to vote for what he could now count himself, in this regard, as all that is untrue, can not he, at least, free him from the oppressive burden that feed.

The farmer who pays [illegible]

RAILWAY MATTERS.

The promoters of the Grand Junction Railway have been collecting all the evidence possible with a view to testing the validity of the county by-law once passed, granting $75,000 to that enterprise, but believed to be invalidated by the company's delays and neglects. The majority of the ratepayers of this county have no sympathies with the Belleville enterprise, and we believe that the Warden has instructions to defend any suit brought to force payment of that sum, or any part thereof.

The Toronto and Ottawa Railway is the scheme that enlists the support of the ratepayers, and now that Ottawa city has passed its by-law granting a large bonus, and that Lemark is about to do likewise, we may hope to hear of the President, Mr. Scott, making application to the Ontario Government at an early day for aid to this important road. Mr. Scott is sure to feel somewhat awkward in approaching the government, after shouting himself hoarse in the Ontario election campaign, declaring the government had not a cent in the treasury but what they had wasted, thus rushing the Province into direct taxation and immediate bankruptcy. It would be amusing and pleasing to watch his facial movements as he addresses the Attorney-General, soliciting aid, but then he must do it, and it will be a suitable comment on his election speeches. His inconsistency, however, will not deter Mr. Mowat from doing his duty to this important section of country, and as there is a surplus yet, the Ottawa road may receive a portion thereof, even though Mr. Scott should be compelled to admit that he knew there were a few dollars in the Ontario Treasury, while he was declaring the contrary. Humanity is a strange piece of inconsistency, and Conservative politicians do not exhibit any better specimens than other mortals.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

To-day has been set apart as a day of thanksgiving to the Great Dispenser of all good, for the abundance he has been pleased to bestow in the bountiful harvest just garnered. The gifts of God are too generally received without acknowledging his goodness in the bestowment. Man is forgetful that the early and the latter rain is the outflow of divine beneficence so undeserved that it might be justly withheld. Even this season which has brought a more than usually abundant harvest to the people of this continent, does not promise a very full supply in the fatherlands—but the beneficence that has given Americans a full crop, enables them to send it, at remunerative prices to those who require supplies. While some persons will be ready to accept without even acknowledging whence it comes, all who profess to believe in a divine Providence should be ready to unite in returning praise and thanksgiving for all the mercies so generously and graciously bestowed. We fear that many will look upon the day as one for recreation, and will spend it in disregard of the principles which indeed our government to set it apart; but the disregard, by a few, of christian duties, should only stimulate the more thoughtful and pious to spend the day, or some part of it as it ought to be, in rendering heartfelt and devout thanks to Him who scattereth so liberally and withholdeth not. Services will be held in all the churches during the day.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The writ for West Durham has been issued. The nominations will take place on the 17th inst., and polling on the 24th.

Sir Alexander Galt is to assume the position of Canadian Minister in London, England.

Wm. Dempster, manager of the Molson's Bank at Ingersoll, has been arrested. It is charged that he is a defaulter to the Bank in over $30,000.

The campaign in Levis, Province of Quebec, opened on Saturday, where Mr. Paquet, the new Provincial Secretary, is seeking re-election. Mr. Tarte, of the Canadien, a leading Conservative, spoke in opposition.

Ontario shoe manufacturers have resolved to advance their prices 25 per cent. all round, and a circular to that effect has been issued to the trade. The National Policy seems to be doing very well for a policy that was not to increase the price of any manufactured article. The straws are being gradually piled on the camel's back.

The "Mail" newspaper has been doing good service in the interests of "pure religion and undefiled" by its expose of the dens of infamy that like great cancers are eating out the moral life of the city. It is to be hoped that the public will be as clear and emphatic in calling for reform as has been the press. The "Mail" deserves all praise for the good work that it has begun.

With the beginning of the new year the Daily Globe is to be issued in an enlarged and improved form varying from an eight page sheet of 48 columns to a twelve page sheet of 72 columns and, when pressure of news calls for it, a sixteen page paper of 96 columns. The Mail also is to be similarly enlarged, both offices putting in Web presses and new machinery of the most approved kind.

There is a political storm brewing in England which the great leaders of parties are evidently expecting to burst forth in fury at an early day. The popular speeches of members of the Cabinet and the leaders of the Opposition are too much in earnest to mean anything short of an appeal to the electors. There are various rumors afloat of changes in the Ministry and a dissolution of Parliament, but these rumors are only surmises at best. The fact of the further prorogation of Parliament to the nineteenth of December, indicates that no change is contemplated before the holidays, but the general feeling of the country will demand an account of the stewardship of Ministers at no distant day.

The Guelph Herald, out-and-out Conservative, writes thus:—"Let the consequences be what they may, if this be the direction the Ministry desire to lead, we will not follow. None in Canada loathed more earnestly for the success of the Conservative party a year ago, but if the Belfast address of Sir A. T. Galt is to be the key note of the policy of the Government then it becomes a question of opposition to the Government or treason to the best interests of Canada, and our choice, though an unpleasant one, will be made regardless of all consequences." Yet Sir Alexander stated to the audience at Belfast that he spoke to them for Sir Leonard Tilley.

Two few inches of snow on Sunday morning was the means of enlightening a number of citizens to the fact that there is a new monopoly in rubber goods. It will be remembered that the M. P. P. gave to our single rubber-shoe factory a protection of 20 per cent. Well, as a natural consequence advantage was taken to increase the wholesale cost in some lines 20 per cent. At the same time when these increases were being made the trade discounts were being cut down, and now, instead of ranging from 20 to 25 per cent., as was the case a year ago, the discounts are but 5 and 7½ per cent.—the latter rate only being allowed to the largest dealers. The rise in the price of rubbers will therefore amount to 40 per cent. as far as the public are concerned. How are the people of this county satisfied with the increase? Rubber goods are necessaries of life in this country, and why should their price be raised enormously to poor people to build up the fortunes of a few individual manufacturers.

The Marquis of Lorne's despatch to Sir Michael Hicks-Beach shows that the suggestion of referring the dismissal of Lieut.-Governor Letellier originated with Sir John Macdonald, and that the Governor-General himself was decidedly opposed to the dismissal. He not only refused to do what he was asked to do, but he based his refusal on reasons that were cogent and quite unanswerable. He objected to the dismissal of Mr. Letellier, because (1) it would "set a dangerous precedent"; (2) that on his appeal to the people Mr. Joly assumed full responsibility for the course pursued by Mr Letellier, and had been able after the election to carry on the Government with the confidence of the new Assembly; and (3) that "to dismiss the Lieutenant-Governor for acts for which Mr. Joly had declared himself to be responsible to the Provincial Legislature is a new exercise of the Federal power." Had Sir Michael Hicks-Beach simply contented himself with giving an interpretation of the doubtful point in the statute and expressing his opinion adversely to the dismissal of Mr. Letellier, there cannot now be much doubt as to the course which events would have taken.

Weights and Measures.

On Tuesday evening of last week, Mr. Cahill returned from Belleville whether he had gone to meet Mr. W. J. Johnstone, one of the clerks in the Inland Revenue Department, who was sent out by the department to instruct the Inspectors of weights and measures and their assistants in the duties of their offices. The following are a few of the provisions of the law, that it will be well for every person, at all engaged in trade, to know.

(1.) Wine measures will only be tolerated until the first of May next. Until that time traders using Wine measures, must distinctly inform parties purchasing from them, that the measure used is Wine measure. Should a trader sell by Wine measure without stating the fact to the purchaser, he is liable to be fined in the penalty provided by the Act.

(2.) 4lb., 7lb, 28lb. and 56lb. weights will only be tolerated until the last day of June next.

(3.) Spring balances will not be allowed at all, and any party using them in trade is subject to the penalty provided.

(4.) Dealers having both a disk and scoop, a counterpoise being used to balance the scoop, are not allowed, and must be put away as the party using them is liable to penalty.

(5.) Nails driven in the counter or elsewhere, for measuring purposes, are not allowed, and should be replaced at once by verified rules of substantial material.

(6.) Battered measures; measures coated with oil or other material, etc., must be exchanged for clean, sound, verified measures.

Manufacturers of measures should make no more Wine measures. Traders in scales and balances should buy no more of the condemned kinds, and the public in general should endeavor, as soon as possible, to have one weight and one measure, and those correct.

The office in Peterboro will be ready for the verification of Weights and Measures shortly.

Rag Baby Convention.

A Rag-baby convention, or in other words, a meeting of the advocates of a national currency for Canada, was held in Toronto last week, when the following was adopted as the platform of the League:

1. That it is the duty of the Government to exercise its undoubted and inalienable right—the coinage and issue of money; that no individual or corporation shall be allowed to issue any note or bill to pass current as money, and that the money of the Government shall be a legal tender for all debts, as at present.

2. That the ruinous system of borrowing money abroad for the construction of public works shall be discontinued, and that in future all public works shall be paid for with Government money.

3. That the currency of the country shall be convertible into Government interest-bearing bonds, and the proceeds of these bonds shall only be used to reduce the foreign debt of the country.

The following officers were elected:—President, Wm. Wallace, M. P; 1st Vice-President and Treasurer, Hon. Isaac Buchanan; 2nd, Reuben Wyan, St. Catharines; 3rd, J. I. Evans, Toronto; 4th, W. O'Meara, Parkhill; Secretary, A. W. Wright; Assistant Secretary, J. A. Livingstone; Assistant Secretary for Hamilton, Watson Griffin.

MR. JOLY DEFEATED.

The Joly Government in Quebec was defeated on Thursday last by a majority of 35 to 29, and it is with regret that we announce the defeat. The gallant leader of the Quebec Liberals has fought a long, an honorable and a patriotic warfare against the machinations of the Conservative wire-pullers and railway rings of that province. It is now nearly two years since Mr. Joly was called upon to undertake the formation of a Government, in the place of the DeBoucherville Administration which had brought the sister province to the verge of disgrace and bankruptcy, and notwithstanding the odds against him (29) succeeded on the first of May, 1878, in carrying the province. Words fail to express the bitterness and the hatred with which he has been followed since that time by the opponents of honest and constitutional government.

The Legislative Council was used to stop the supplies in contravention of the plainest principles of responsible government, and the myrmidons of the Dominion Premier have been at work, sapping the confidence and soiling the honor of those of Mr. Joly's following, who were open to their advances. They have succeeded at last in their designs, but the end is not yet. The people of Quebec have expressed confidence in Mr. Joly, and that confidence he still retains. He has managed the affairs of the province with marvellous ability, considering the circumstances in which he was placed, honorably, honestly and economically has he faithfully served the people who confided in him. A man of chivalrous honor, he has courageously refused to descend to the level of his opponents, and retain his majority by the arts so peculiar to them. Some of his supporters have been bought like sheep in the shambles, and if he has failed, he has failed in [illegible] Thanks! he may be, but neither disgraced nor dishonored, and if permitted to appeal to the country, he would have received a larger and more faithful support than ever before. The people of Quebec repudiate in Mr. Joly a statesman, than whom none more honorable, more talented, more disinterested, or more unexpected ever served the province; and if given an opportunity they will use means to record their confidence in a more substantial manner. And it is to be deplored that this issue—which was one literally between the people and an irresponsible oligarchy—should not have been decided by the ballot box and squarely upon its merits. Practically the Legislative Council has taken the victor in the contest, for it has succeeded in bringing about the defeat of the Joly Government, a task which the opponents of that Government in the Assembly failed to accomplish.

Mr. Chapleau has got together a Cabinet composed of five Conservatives, and two energetic supporters of Mr. Joly. The Ministers with their offices are as follows:—

Mr. Chapleau—Premier and Minister of Agriculture and Public Works.
Mr. Robertson—Treasurer.
Mr. Ross—President of the Council.
Mr. Lynch—Solicitor-General.
Mr. Lesauger—Attorney-General.
Mr. Flynn—Commissioner of Crown Lands.
Mr. Paquet—Provincial Secretary.

Messrs. Flynn and Paquet have been rued their price. Over a score of times during the short session of a few weeks ago they voted confidence in Mr Joly's Government, and since the adjournment the Government have done nothing to forfeit the confidence of any honest man. Mr. Joly, it is true, declined to go out of office at the bidding of the Legislative Council, but as Liberals Messrs. Flynn and Paquet should only have clung the more closely to him on that account.

The Ministers were sworn in on Friday, the Legislative Council voted the supplies, and the Legislature was prorogued. The elections of the new Ministers will take place on the 20th inst.

MINDEN.

A few days ago, about twenty-five men in the employ of Mr. Haslett, of Peterborough, left the shanty in the township of Anson with their baggage, and travelled to half way between Minden and Kinmount, where they built a fire with the intention of remaining all night. The foreman, James Aitkens, followed them to Minden, where he got a warrant, which he placed in the hands of the constable, who took six specials and pursued the runaways, whose personal effects he seized and took back to Minden. The owners returned next morning to that village, and, having come to an understanding with the foreman respecting their grievances, went away with him for the purpose of resuming work.—Gazette.

FENELON.

COMMUTED.—Petitions having been largely signed by the leading residents of the county, Wm. Dewart, of Fenelon Falls, has had his sentence commuted from two years in the penitentiary to six months in the central prison. He had been in penitentiary only one hour when the news was received, and Mr. Dewart was the happiest of men.

TO WORK AGAIN.—Hilliard & Mowry's sawmill situated on the east bank of the Fenelon River close to its mouth, has, after lying idle for three or four years, been leased by Messrs. Alexander McArthur and John Thompson, of this village, who have secured it upon favorable terms, with, we believe, the right of purchase. Towards spring the mill will be put in first-class working order, and when the cutting season commences will give employment to sixty or seventy of the hands now in the woods, and who, but for the new firm, would, at the breaking up of the shanties, have to seek a market for their labors elsewhere.—Gazette.

Omemee.

We learn from the Omemee Herald that Mr. Richard Henderson of that place, met with a serious accident while at work at a circular saw a few days ago. He reached over his left hand to remove a piece of board from the table, and the hand coming in contact with the saw, the fingers were nearly severed. The bone of the little finger was cut through, the second joint of the third finger was badly broken, and the first and second fingers badly cut. It is likely the third and fourth fingers will have to be amputated. The injured man is doing as well as can be expected under the skilful care of Dr. Cornwall.

Lindsay.

THE SHOPPING EXCURSION FROM HALIBURTON.—Over two hundred and fifty people from Haliburton and places south, came down on the shopping excursion per Victoria Railway, on Friday last, and returned home with a large number of parcels. It is estimated that they left not less than $800 with the merchants in town—and those merchants who had representatives on the train with circulars got the lion's share. The excursion was a good thing for Lindsay, and the manager of the Victoria deserves thanks and credit for promoting it. It paid the company, and it paid the people who came, and the merchants who sold, therefore why not have another soon.

EAST VICTORIA TEACHER'S ASSOCIATION.—The association will meet on Friday and Saturday November 7th and 8th. Mr. Jas. Hughes, P. S. Inspector, Toronto, and Mr. Braden of Peterborough, will take part in the proceedings, as well as teachers and others in the county. The Midland and Victoria railways will issue return tickets at one and a third fare to teachers on presentation of their programmes of convention.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS OLD.—One of the tombstones at the entrance to Riverside cemetery, removed some time ago from the old cemetery, bears an inscription to the memory of "Donald McPherson, died Dec. 31, 1837, aged 110 years." Can any of our elderly citizens give further information concerning one who lived so long over a hundred.—Post.

Fire Protection.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER.

SIR,—I understand that at the regular meeting of the Fire Brigade held on Tuesday evening last, a large number of the members sent in their resignations, and, as the vacancies are not filled, we are practically in the position of having only half the number allowed by the by-law, which is 30 men. Should a large fire occur in the town with the few firemen and the county apparatus, it would be impossible to prevent a large destruction of property. I think the time has now come, that a town with the population of ours, should not be depending on one fire engine, and that almost used up. Should it break down at a fire, where would we look for help? I am convinced that if the town would but provide the necessary apparatus, a first-class volunteer brigade would be formed by the young men of the town who would take an interest in it. Hoping some of the citizens who have the welfare of the town at heart will give us the benefit of their opinion through the press, on this subject,

I remain yours, &c.,
CITIZEN.

DRIVING OVER A ROUGH ROAD last winter, one of my horses became suddenly very lame—a bad sprain of the right ankle. Applied all the remedies I knew of and those suggested by horsemen without any benefit. The horse was entirely useless for two months, and thought him permanently disabled. Giles' Liniment Iodide Ammonia took away the lameness and restored him. HENRY LIVINGSTON.

The Scientific American.

THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN is a large First-Class Weekly Newspaper of Sixteen Pages, printed in the most beautiful style, profusely illustrated with splendid engravings, representing the Newest Inventions and the most recent Advances in the Arts and Sciences; including New and Interesting Facts in Agriculture, Horticulture, the Home, Health, Medical Progress, Social Science, Natural History, Geology, Astronomy. The most valuable practical papers, by eminent writers in all departments of Science, will be found in the Scientific American.

Terms, $3.20 per year, $1.60 half year, which includes postage. Discount to Agents. Single Copies, ten cents. Sold by all Newsdealers. Remit by postal order to MUNN & CO., Publishers, 37 Park Row, New York.

PATENTS. In connection with the Scientific American, Messrs. MUNN & CO. are Solicitors of American and Foreign Patents, have had 35 year's experience, and now have the largest establishment in the world. Patents are obtained on the best terms. A Special Notice is made in the Scientific American of all Inventions patented through this Agency, with the name and residence of the Patentee. By the immense circulation thus given, public attention is directed to the merits of the new patent, and sales or introduction often easily effected.

Any person who has made a new discovery or invention, can ascertain, free of charge, whether a patent can probably be obtained, by writing to MUNN & Co. We will also send free our Hand Book about the Patent Laws, Patents, Caveats, Trade Marks, their costs, and how procured, with hints procuring advances on inventions. Address for the paper, or concerning Patents.

The most wonderful remedy of the age is now placed within the reach of all. "Is he rich or is he poor." In every case nothing to give this great remedy a trial. Dr. Kenyon's Canadian Catarrh Cure cures, or Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Loss of Appetite, Sour Stomach, Coming up of Food, Yellow Complexion, General Debility, Insomnia and Drowsiness, Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Piles, &c. Every patient is a certain and speedy cure. No person should be without it. In order to prove that it will do all that we claim for it you are given a bottle free of cost at our store. If you are troubled with any of the above diseases we will convince you of its truly wonderful merits, and place you about a regular one dollar size bottle will do. For sale by T. Bennett, successor to F. Lane & Co.

"Common Sense."

No other medicine in the world can ever given such a test of its curative powers as Burdock Blood Bitters. In three years the sale has reached one hundred and fifty thousand small bottles of this medicine were distributed free of charge by Druggists in this country to those suffering from Scrofula, Erysipelas, Cancer, Cancerous Humors, Pimples, and other diseases of the blood. Such a record is unparalleled in the history of the American people. Burdock Blood Bitters are sold by all Druggists at one dollar per bottle. Try a small bottle. Sold by all druggists in the Dominion. Agents in every town and village in the Dominion. Circulars free. Druggists supplied by the wholesale trade. Large bottles 10 cents. Regular size, 25 cents. These doses will relieve any cold.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, NOVE 6, 1879.

L. Robinson & Co. are selling off a large lot of paper patterns at 20c. each. Usual price 30 cents.

Personal.—Mr. W. J. Watson, formerly of the Lakefield News, has secured a lucrative position on the Times, Port Hope.

Pay Night.—The members of the Fire Brigade received their half-yearly pay last Tuesday evening. We presume there was a full attendance.

Perhaps So.—Knowing ones tell us that this snow storm will be followed by fine, warm weather, and that we may now expect our real Indian Summer.

For Colorado.—Mr. James Graham left town on Monday morning last for Colorado, where he is to join his brother who has been there since last spring.

Enjoying It.—No sooner had "the beautiful" fallen in sufficient quantity to cover the ground than the instinctabulation of the merry sleigh bells was heard in our streets.

Cheap Printing.—Merchants and business men requiring bill circulars, cards, billheads, or memorandum headings, should leave their orders at the EXAMINER office.

Wind Statistics.—The following births, marriages and deaths have been registered in the office of the Town Clerk during last month:—Births, 15; Marriages, 5; Deaths, 1.

Scarcity of Change.—The scarcity of small change—small bills and silver—is greatly complained of. It is not an unusual thing to see several junior store clerks hunting up change.

School Board.—There was no meeting of the School Board on Tuesday evening for want of a quorum, there being only four members present.—Messrs. Stevenson, Dumble, Errett and Edwards.

Mall & Ostrom's New Shop.—The work on Mall & Ostrom's new steam biscuit and confectionery works is being expeditiously pushed forward, and the firm expect to be in occupation in a few weeks.

Ashburnham School.—Mr. Wood, the present teacher of the Ashburnham School, having determined to resign his charge at the close of this year, the position has been offered to a Mr. Hallet, of Lindsay, at a salary of $600.

Militia Regulations.—Copies of "The Regulations and Orders for the Militia of Canada, 1879," a consolidated work on militia matters, are now being mailed to each district to each field officer and captain and adjutant of the active militia.

Admiration and Satisfaction.—The new stock of boots and shoes opened out by Foote & MeWhinnie is greatly admired by all who examine them. Their custom work is giving every satisfaction—good fits, neat styles, and best material.

Liberal Grant.—At the regular meeting of the Peterborough Fire Brigade on Tuesday evening, the Brigade, with their usual liberality, voted a donation of $20 to their band, to assist in purchasing some new instruments needed by them at present.

Chancery Sale.—We would call the attention of our readers to an advertisement in another part of this paper, "Chancery sale of valuable dwellings in the town of Peterboro." The property is pleasantly situated in a convenient locality.

Dupont de Benedict's Minstrels.—As previously announced this popular organization gave one of their entertainments on Friday evening to a crowded house. The several parts of the programme were well filled, and the performers received frequent encores.

"Star" Grocery.—Those requiring groceries should remember that the "Star" grocery is offering special inducements. Notwithstanding the rise in prices you can still get 14 pounds of good sugar for $1.00; 6 lbs. of currants for 25c; and 3 lbs. of extra Young Hyson tea for $1.00.

The Rush at the Red Boot during the past week has been greater than ever before in its history, and customers are going away each day more than satisfied with the bargains they obtain. A large stock of felt and rubber goods just opened out, which will be sold cheap for cash.

Keene Volunteer Company.—A new volunteer company has been organized in the village of Keene, with M. P. Dean, M.D., as Captain. The arms and accoutrements of No. 6 Company, Peterborough, which is now defunct, has been removed for the use of the new company.

Annual Meeting.—The annual meeting of the Midland Central Dairy Association for the election of officers will be held this (Thursday) evening at 8 o'clock p.m., in the Constable's room, adjoining the Council Chamber. A full attendance of the members is particularly desirable.

Mr. Heathfield's Concert.—Mr. Heathfield's annual concert is announced to take place tomorrow evening, in Bradburn's Hall. The programme promises to be an attractive one, and from the names of those announced to take part, we should think the entertainment will be a very pleasing one.

French Dress Goods.—Messrs. Fairweather & Co. in this issue announce the receipt of a very large stock of French dress goods in thirteen different shades bought in bond for two-thirds their value, and now offering at less than half what they can be bought for elsewhere in town. Now is the time to secure bargains.

Cattle for the Woods.—Yesterday morning Mr. Robert Wainwright started for the Monck Road with a drove of 39 fat cattle with which to furnish beef for lumber shanties in that section. Mr. Wainwright has ten shanties in the back country to supply this winter, and will in a short time leave with another drove for a different section.

At Work Again.—We are pleased to see that Mr. W. Toole has again commenced the manufacture of cheese boxes and staves at his new factory erected upon the site of the old one recently destroyed by fire. In a short time the necessary machinery will be placed in the building to do planing and the other branches formerly carried on by him.

Great sale of Boots and Shoes.—Mr. Samuel White having purchased his present stock at a very low figure, will, in order to turn it into cash, during the next thirty days offer the entire stock at prices such as we have never been quoted before in this town. The stock being good and well assorted in all lines genuine bargains may be looked for.

Trying to Scare P. C. McGhee.—Constable McGhee has shown us a postal card which he received the other day from "One that will do it," threatening that if he is caught in Ashburnham his brains will be scattered over the street and his carcass torn limb from limb. The threatening epistle however will not deter our "Custodian of the peace" from doing his duty.

Hallowe'en.—Friday evening last, all Hallow E'en, passed off quietly in Peterborough, and so long as the boys content themselves with "tip-tapping," and the use of cabbage stalks of a moderate size, there is not very much to complain of. It is also very pleasing to observe that the Hallowe'en nuisance is gradually dying out in this country. Such anniversaries may properly be the occasion of home pleasantries and family reunions.

Tonsorial.—Messrs. Mitchell & Robinson have placed a new pole in front of their hairdressing establishment on Hunter street, or more properly speaking, suspended one of very neat appearance over the door. This firm, with their obliging and courteous assistant, Mr. Nicholson, are evidently favorites with those requiring their service from the large number who patronize them. Call around and see them when you want a shave, hair cut or shampoo.

Announcement Extraordinary.—Miss E. Delaney begs to announce the purchase for cash at a large reduction off manufacturer's price of a wholesale stock of Wool Fringes, Beaded Fringes, Gimps, Braids, Mantle Frogs and Ornaments. Plain and Colored Galloons. Dressmaker's Trimmings, which she will offer to her customers at prices that will defy competition in Canada. Dressmakers will do well to inspect these goods. George Street, Peterborough.

The Late Mrs. Davidson.—Mrs. Hugh Davidson, senior, of Smith, who accidentally fell into a newly dug cistern last Saturday week, per-leaks of which were given in last week's EXAMINER, died from the effects of the injuries on Thursday evening, having been in an unconscious state from the time of the accident till death relieved her of suffering. Her funeral took place on Saturday last, her remains being followed to their last resting place by a large number of friends and relatives.

"The Evening Hours."—This is the title of a new aspirant for journalistic honors and consequently to our sister town, Port Hope. It announces its policy as "Independent in everything and neutral in nothing." In size it is the same as its contemporaries—the Times and Guide, in very creditable in typographical appearance, and is apparently well supported by the merchants and business men of the town. It has our well wishes for its success. A weekly is also to be published in connection with it.

Important.—An important postal order has been issued in the States, which Canadians would do well to make a note of. The order instructs postmasters that a letter addressed to a city, town, village or other place will not be forwarded unless it has the name of the State written upon it. Then a letter addressed to "New York city" will be sent to the dumbletter office at Washington. The Postmaster-General evidently assumes that it is no duty of his subordinates to correct the mistakes of those taking advantage of the postal system.

Another outlaw.—The following notice was received by posters issued from this office:—

SATURDAY, Nov. 8th.—At the Chesto House, two splendid farms in Dummer, Farm No. 1 consists of the west half of Lot No. 9 in the 6th concession, containing 100 acres. Farm No. 2 consists of 120 acres, and is composed of the east parts of Lots No. 9 and 10 and Lot No. 11 in the 5th. Both farms are in a good

TUESDAY, Nov. 11th.—Important sale of 100 acres of land, being the south half of Lot No. 7, 2nd concession of Dummer, on the premises. Lot 7 is the first concession of the Township of Asphodel. McDonnell, Auctioneer.

A Melancholy Accident.—On Friday night last Mrs. William Clarkes met with a melancholy and fatal accident whilst on her way home from the residence of Mr. Chas. Osgood, where she had been spending the evening. The newly fallen snow of that afternoon and evening had rendered the sidewalk very slippery, and while proceeding down the hill, past the Union School buildings, she slipped and fell, striking her head on the sidewalk and receiving such injuries as resulted in her death a short time afterwards. The family have the sympathy of the community in their sudden and melancholy bereavement.

Runaway.—On Saturday afternoon a team of horses belonging to a Mr. Reid, of Otonabee, caused quite a commotion on George street. They had been tied in front of Mr. Bagsley's tin shop and, becoming startled, broke loose and started on full run down George street. At the time the street was crowded with vehicles and it is fortunate that no little damage was done—the extent of it being a broken axle to a butcher's cart, and a similar injury to the parcel express. When at Simcoe street crossing the horses were caught by a person on the street who succeeded in stopping them by the time they got opposite to the Chesto House.

Peterborough Tumpike.—The following officers were installed on Monday evening for the ensuing quarter by Temple Deputy Bro. H. Nesbitt:—

Bro. E. Hawthorne	W.C.T.
Sis. Mrs. John Mowry	W.V.
" Mrs. H. Nesbitt	W.S.
Bro. John Mowry	W.T.
" H. Nesbitt	W.F.S.
" R. Weir	W.C.
" R. Stewart	W.M.
Bro. J. Wilson	W.I.G.
Bro. T. Brown	W.O.G.
" R. Green	W.A.S.
Sis. E. Elliott	W.R.S.
" M. Pargo	W.L.S.
Bro. R. Lee	P.W.C.T.

Week of Prayer for Young Men.—The International Convention of the Young Men's Christian Associations, held at Baltimore last May, representing one thousand associations with a membership of one hundred thousand, recommended the observance of the second Lord's day of November and the week following, as a season of thanksgiving and of special prayer for God's blessing upon young men and upon the work in their behalf. The world's convention at Geneva, Switzerland (in which eleven nations were represented by 250 delegates), made a similar recommendation, so that in all parts of the world this season of prayer will be observed.

Annual Meeting of the St. Andrew's Society.—The attention of the members of the above Society is called to the notice in our advertising column of the annual meeting of the Society to be held on Wednesday evening next, 12th instant, at 8 o'clock, in the Court Room adjoining the Council Chamber. The election of officers for the ensuing year will take place and the manner of celebrating the approaching anniversary will be discussed. As this is the most important meeting of the year every member should endeavor to be present, and have a voice in the management of the affairs of the Society. All should remember the date and be present at an early hour.

57th Battalion.—The following appears in the Canada Gazette:—

"57th Peterborough Batt. of Infantry.—The special badge and device authorized for this battalion shall consist of a beaver, under which are the numerals LVII, encircled by a scroll or garter, clasped by a buckle, and bearing the designation "Peterborough Rangers," the whole surrounded by a wreath of maple leaves, intwined with the rose, thistle, and the shamrock, and surmounted by the Imperial Crown. Underneath all is the motto, "Quis separabit?."

The following promotions are gazetted:

No. 2 Company, Peterborough.—To be Lieutenant provisionally: Sergeant John Wesley Miller, vice Langford, promoted.

To be 2nd Lieutenant: Robert J. Lee, gentleman, M. S.

The Market By-law.—An interesting case in connection with violation of the Market By-law came up before the Police Magistrate on Monday last. Mr. Robert H. Green, grocer, was charged with exposing for sale and dispensing of fresh meats, without a license for that purpose. For the defence it was asserted that the meat in question, while being new pork was sufficiently salted to preserve it, and consequently should be accepted as salt meat. After hearing the evidence the Magistrate decided that the fact of throwing salt over the meat, which was to all intents fresh, could not be held to relieve it of the restrictions of the By-law, and consequently fined the defendant $1 and costs. Mr. Green intends to appeal to the Court of General Sessions.

The City Bakery.—Mr. John Chambers has again started in the bakery business, having leased the commodious oven and shop in the rear of Bell's Hotel, Simcoe street. He makes a specialty of the Vienna or Snow Flake bread and rolls which are so popular wherever introduced, and in the baking of which Mr. Chambers is very proficient, having for a considerable time worked at its manufacture in California. Already its introduction here is meeting with great success and is taking the place of the common bread at the tables of boarding houses and private families. We have "sampled" it, pronounce it good, and believe we ought to be competent to judge after passing through the ordeal of examining the "staff of life" at a number of our fall shows.

THE CHILD MURDER CASE.

The Postponed Inquest—Further Evidence—Another Adjournment.

Pursuant to adjournment, the Coroner (Dr. Kincaid) and Jury empanelled in the infanticide case, reported in the EXAMINER last week met in the Council Chamber on Friday evening when the following evidence was taken:—

HUGH BELL, sworn, said,—He was the stable boy at the Chesto House. On the morning of Friday, Oct. 24, he was called by Bridget Sullivan to go and tell Nellie Saulter to come to her quickly. He went and called Nellie Salter, who went immediately. It was about 5.30 o'clock—between that and six o'clock. It was on Friday morning Oct. 24. Knew the hour by his having just got up. It was the usual time for him to black boots. Knew nothing of Bridget Sullivan getting away on Tuesday evening. Saw no strange teams in the yard on that day.

NELLIE SALTER, recalled.—Knew something about the escape of the girl Bridget Sullivan. It was just at tea time, witness was away getting her tea. Did not anticipate she would attempt to get out as she was supposed to be too weak to rise. Her mother had been there to see her that afternoon. Mr. Johnston, the Chief Constable, engaged her to attend Bridget until she was able to be up. She could not be in the room with her all the time as she had other duties to perform. She had not the slightest idea that Bridget could get away, or would so soon be able to get up, as she appeared to be too weak.

DR. BELL was recalled and said he had performed the duty assigned him. He made the post mortem examination on Saturday afternoon last, and found the child to have been perfectly formed and healthy. He had no doubt that air had entered the lungs, although for a very short period. The child was alive when it was born. He found the skull fractured, but the brain had not been disturbed. The child was no doubt alive when born. The skull could have been broken by coming in contact with some hard substance. He had a written report of the post mortem examination ready. He examined all the organs of the body and found them to have been perfect, and there was no doubt upon his mind that the child was born living, healthy and perfect.

The CORONER after reading over the evidence to the jury, referred to the absence of the mother of the child. He said as jurisdiction in the case and was without power to hold the accused until the jury had rendered their verdict. At the last sitting of the jury it was not considered she would be able to be up before this time. After that sitting he had consulted a legal gentleman and acted in accordance with the law. Neither he nor the members of the Jury were responsible for the escape of the woman. Had the jury found a verdict against her it would then have been his duty to issue a warrant for her arrest, but not till then. It was for them to carefully consider the evidence and find out by what means the child came to its death, and then to render their verdict accordingly.

The Jury then retired and after deliberation reported they wished a further adjournment, in order that they might have the evidence of the girl who had resumed with the accused on the night of the 23rd of October. The inquest was then accordingly adjourned till Monday evening, 3rd of November, when on assembling the Coroner reported that although every exertion had been made to find the witness described by the jury, both he and the Chief Constable had been unable to ascertain her whereabouts. If reports were true her evidence was very necessary and was, he understood, favorable to the accused. As the jury were adverse to rendering a verdict until the evidence of this witness was heard by them the inquest was further adjourned.

—Instead of saying, "Be honest my son," the old man after admonishing the youth in question said, "My boy, never cut your toes and you'll find them enough."

TOWN COUNCIL.

A special meeting of the Town Council was held on Tuesday evening last to consider the acceptances of the tenders received for the culvert on Bethune street, and the filling in of the crib work at the Little Lake; the former at a cost of $92.65 and the latter at $89.50, and to provide for the payment of the same if so accepted, as the street and bridge appropriation was about exhausted.

The Mayor and all the Councillors were present.

CONSIDERATIONS.

From the Town Treasurer—on a statement of the receipts and expenditure for the month of October.—Referred to the Finance Committee. Another, complaining that he had acted for particulars of the amount paid him by Mr. Aaron Orr for the Licensed Commissioners some weeks ago and had not yet received the information.—Referred to the Government. From members of the Hook and Ladder Company asking that a house be procured to draw their wagon to from.—Referred to Fire Committee. From W. H. Moore, asking that a fence on Rubidge between London and Dublin streets be removed to its proper place.—Referred to Street Inspector. From Edward Webb, asking the remission of a dog tax.—Granted.

SNOW BY-LAW.

A snow By-law received its first, second and third readings, providing for the cleaning of snow and ice from off the sidewalks in the fire limits of the town by eight o'clock p. m., and also providing for the removal of snow and icicles from the roofs of houses where danger from such is apprehended.

STREETS AND BRIDGES.

The matter of opening a water channel on Bethune street, at Mr. Toole's shop was left over till the legal opinion asked by the Committee be obtained, and if that opinion be that the town is liable to costs then the committee is to have the work done. The filling in of the crib work at the Little Lake was also ordered to be completed at a cost of $89.50.

Mr. M. O'Donnell was ordered to be paid the balance of his contract for watering streets.

Council adjourned.

THE CENTRAL EXHIBITION.

Meeting of the Executive Committee.

We learn from the Review that a meeting of the Executive Committee was held in the Council Chamber, Peterborough, pursuant to notice, on Friday, the 31st October, there being present:—James Campbell, Esq., President, in the chair, and Messrs. Deacon, (Lindsay); Portier, (Brownsville); Carruthers and Legg, (Cobourg); and Dean, McClelland, Clementi, Bell and Walton, (Peterborough.)

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

The SECRETARY laid before the committee several minor matters relating to the prize list, all of which were easily disposed of.

The following approximate statement of the finances was submitted:—

RECEIPTS.

From Treas. of Cobourg Exhibition	$ 121 67
From Gate Money	2,237 00
From Secretary for Entrance Fees	81 00
Total receipts	$2,459 59

EXPENDITURE.

Total	$2,338 00

with committee expenses, auditors, special prizes, &c., to provide for. As compared with previous years, it was noted that due economy had been exercised this year, inasmuch as printing cost in 1876, $215; in 1877, $300; 1878, $216, and this year $187. Postage and stationery in 1876, $68; in 1877, $62; in 1878, $32, and in 1879, $12.25. Constables, &c., in 1876, $160; in 1877, $154; in 1878, $139, and this year, $113.

On motion of Col. DEACON, seconded by Mr. PORTER, the members of the Executive Committee were ordered to be paid one dollar and fifty cents for each day's attendance at the committee meetings and their actual railway fares to and from such meetings and to and from the exhibition, and that the Assistant Superintendents be paid the same as members of the committee during the exhibition.

This vote amounts to, in all, the sum of $130.45, the expenditure for the same being in 1876, $65; in 1877, $167, and in 1878, $197.

DISCRETIONARY PREMIUMS.

On motion it was decided to award prize money to the following discretionary premiums recommended by the judges, viz:

Fire Engine, by H. W. Cox	$2 00

Water Colored Flowers, by Mrs. Wright	1 00
Pinchbeck Inlaid Woods, by C. Wallis	1 00
Sofa Rug, by Mrs. McKibbon	1 00
Wood Turning, by F. Hobbs	1 00
Total	$18 50

On motion of Col. DEACON, seconded by Mr. MCCLELLAND, all the accounts submitted by the Secretary were ordered to be paid.

Moved by Col. DEACON, seconded by Mr. CARRUTHERS, that the accounts be prepared as soon as the prize list shall have been paid, and that if the expenditure exceed the gross receipts an item be inserted "to balance," showing the amount to be assessed to the several counties in the district, viz., 7-19 to Peterborough and 1-19 each to Victoria, Durham and Northumberland; and that the President, Vice-President and Mr. Foott be a committee to meet at the call of the President, to receive the Auditors' Report.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. LAPP, seconded by Mr. CARRUTHERS,—That the sum of $50 be tendered to Mr. Campbell as a slight token of appreciation of his services as President of the Association for the current year.—Carried unanimously.

Votes of thanks were then passed to the President, Secretary and Treasurer for the efficient manner in which they had discharged their duties during the past year, after which the meeting adjourned.

Port Hope.

A MYSTERY.—Yesterday (Friday) afternoon, a Mr Portugas, who lives on the 8th concession of Hope, near Rice Lake, was passing along the road and saw a large dog coming out of the woods with something in its mouth. He chased the animal and found it to be the body of a well developed infant. It had been partly eaten by the dog. He took the body into the house and notified Coroner Maxwell, who held an inquest.

FOUND DEAD.—For some years an old pensioner, familiarly known as "Mickey McFarland," has lived alone in a house belonging to Mr. Bell, on the lake shore, about six miles west of Port Hope. The old man has been ailing for a long time with an affection of the lungs, and the neighbors have occasionally visited him and ministered to his wants. Yesterday forenoon he was seen by a neighbor about 10 o'clock, and appeared to be no worse than usual, but this proved to be the last time he was seen alive. About noon Miss Kate McMahon went to see him and found his lifeless body. Coroner Maxwell was notified and proceeded to hold an inquest. Dr. Herriman made a post mortem examination of the body and deposed to the lungs being decreased. The jury, after a short deliberation, brought in a verdict to the effect that the diseased came to his death by exhaustion, produced from want of proper nourishment and care.—Guide.

On Saturday evening, about twenty minutes past six, the store house in rear of Dunn's tinware and stove store, owned and occupied by Mr. C. Quinlan for the storage of rags, hides, chaneral, etc., was consumed by fire. A building close by used by Messrs. J. Evans and D. J. MacLennan for storing coal oil was also burned. The fire was caused by the son of Mr. MacLennan undertaking to draw some coal oil, and lighting a match which fell amongst the oil. The losses are Mr. C. Quinlan, $2,000, insurance $800, and $1000 on contents. J. Evans, $60; D. J. MacLennan, $50.—Guide.

A FAMILY IN DISTRESS.—A respectable family, Mrs. Coleman's, and her three young children, living on Hayward st. near the G.T.R. viaduct was found yesterday in a pitiable condition, having no fire to protect them from the extreme cold, and nothing to eat in the house.

CLOUD LANDSCAPE.

We watched the clouds at break of day:
A few were white as driven snow,
And all the rest were black or gray.
He said: "Those must have made an omen
As you white clouds; but well I know
Such men are few and far between."
Asked little Alice, moving near:
"Why are those clouds so dark so loud
So near the hill-top, grandpa dear?"
"And why are those that look like men
So far above the rest?" He said:
"White clouds and men are created Heaven."
He rose and leaned upon his staff,
An aged man with pleasant eye,
And mellow sadness in his laugh.
The sunshine lingered overhead
Among the moving shapes; the sky
Was bright, the earth grew dark. He said:
"These ever changing, moving clouds
Well represent the men we know.
And faithful pictures of the crowds
"That ever change, but never rest,
Where many come and many go."
And then he smiled as if in jest,
But as the sun sank low and lower
The white clouds shone with many a ray;
The rest seemed darker than before.
He said: "This picture must decide
The fate of men; as clore of day
Only the pure are glorified."

CHAPTER I

WHAT CAME OF AN ACCIDENT.

As those broad meadows, this beautiful park, this lovely stretch of woodland, with the sparkling lake nestling yonder, and the grand old turreted mansion that frowns down upon me from the height beyond there—all these comprise the Chaloner estate. Ah! it needs no enthusiast's eye to discover in this delightful stretch of landscape one of the most beautiful spots in the kingdom."

Time mused Vernon Cheveley, as he threw himself down on the thick verdure of a little hillock that was delightfully shaded by a few specimen trees. At the foot of the hillock the limpid waters of a lake reflected the surrounding verdure and sparkled like an emerald jewel set in the bosom of Nature; while through the thick foliage of the gently-swelling height beyond, could be seen the massive proportions of Chaloner Hall. It was, indeed, a scene of quiet loveliness, that would stir up the depths of admiration in one less fond of the beauties of nature than was Vernon Cheveley—a scene to give pleasure, and win the human heart away from strife. And yet, looking upon it, Vernon Cheveley was strangely filled with bitterness.

"It was in that dear old mansion," he continued, "that I first saw the light of day: it was there my mother died ere trouble came, leaving me only the faint remembrance of her sweet sainted ways to linger with me, and refresh me like the perfume of a lovely flower; it was there that my father, in his years of manhood, looked out over the lovely stretch of lawn, and meadow, and forest, and called it his own! Yes, he was the possessor of it all, until George Chaloner came and defrauded him of it, and drove him a wanderer, into foreign climes. I was a child then; but oh! how tenderly the lonely, desolate, homeless, but patient man clung to me with a father's unchanging love during his wandering! I believe that my love and care for him in those later years made him happy, and caused him to forget his sorrows. Since that time, when he died blessing me, and I laid him tenderly under the ground in that distant land, I have labored unceasingly for one object; the securing of proofs of the wrong George Chaloner practised upon my father, that I might claim the property, which, since my father's death, is rightfully mine.

"At last, after years of unceasing toil, and study, and watchfulness, I have succeeded. Such convincing proofs have I of George Chaloner's fraudulent act, that I must speedily be acknowledged the rightful owner of this lovely estate, which shall again be known as Rokewood. And then will I again be known as Vernon Cheveley Rokewood; but until then same will recognize in Vernon Cheveley, simply, the son of Guy Rokewood, the former possessor of these lands. I will tear my abridged name a little longer, that I may avoid the selfish interest and pretended sympathy of people in my affairs, and discern who are worthy to be my friends.

"George Chaloner also is dead. Well, it is better for him that he died ere the disgrace came upon him, though I feel that I am thus cheated out of a part of my revenge.

He has left an only child—a daughter grown up to womanhood—a lovely maiden, report says, who endears herself to everyone by her gentleness, purity, and goodness. I do not believe these things of her. She must surely know of his wrong and guilty acts, and in her silent acquiescence in their fruits, her guilt is nearly equal to his. I shall entertain no weak sympathy for her."

The young man was so deeply engrossed in his musings, that were strangely mingled with pleasure and bitterness, that he did not perceive the approach of a mounted party from the mansion on the height, until the members of it were skirting the little lake within a few yards of him. There were two ladies and their grooms in the party, and in the course they were coming they would pass close by him.

The thought flashed upon him that one of these ladies was his enemy—George Chaloner's daughter; and he would have hastened away from the spot, but the ladies had already seen him, and were making some remark about him.

Resting his chin on his hands, he coolly awaited their approach; as the younger and more girl-like of the ladies was a little in advance of the other, and whether it was an sight of himself, or the stump of a tree at the roadside, her horses suddenly sprang aside with a snort of fear, drawing the reins from her hands, and unseating her.

Vernon heard her scream of alarm; he saw, with terror, as the frightened animal made his first plunge in his maddened, runaway course, her riding-habit had caught in the saddle, leaving her dragging on the ground; he realized her awful danger, and sprang in front of the runaway animal as he was dashing past him. He did not miss his aim—his hand clutched the bridle-rein close to the animals mouth, and then began a struggle between himself and the maddened, plunging horse. He was trampled to the ground, and the animal obstinated his course; but not until Vernon had disengaged the riding-habit from the saddle, and drawn the partied girl away out of danger.

When the other lady and the groom dashed up in mortal terror. Vernon was supporting the senseless girl in his arms, and looking down into her sweet, still face, with a strange, mute expression of fear and pain. It must have been the screams and lamentations of her companions that brought the life-tide back to the senseless girl, and made her open her eyes.

She was not hurt—only frightened; and when she became calm enough to realize her position, she withdrew with a little flush from Vernon's arms, and, after calming the fears of her lady friend, turned again to the young man.

"Oh! sir, how can I thank you for your brave act?" she said in a tearful voice, yet so full of melody, of an indescribable tenderness, that Vernon felt as if life would lose half its bliss if it ceased. "I owe my escape from a painful death to you. I fear you are hurt. Oh! are you not?" she added, hopefully.

"I am not hurt, beyond a few very insignificant bruises," he replied, politely. "Besides, I did no more than anyone would have done under the circumstances. I fear my presence was the cause of the accident."

"You must not think so," she earnestly replied. "Ruth has always been a very nervous-worthy animal, and I should not have ventured to ride him. But, sir, you are hurt surely!" she hastily added, with evident anxiety, as she noticed how pale he grew.

"I fear I have sprained an ankle," he stammered out, with reluctance. "It is not so serious, I think, but that I can limp away to where I am stopping."

He ventured to take a step, but it called a cry of pain from him. His injury was more severe than he had imagined it to be.

"If you will let your groom accompany me," he said to the frightened girl. "I think I can reach the village."

"No—no; I cannot permit it," the girl cried. "The village is several miles distant, no you must go up to the house with us. I am sure it is the best thing that can be done. Is it not, Juliet?" she added, with a little show of indecision to her lady companion. Then, bethinking herself, she said to the young man, before receiving an answer: "This is my cousin, Miss Chaloner."

Vernon bowed to the lady, who was older, more dignified, and less impulsive in her ways than her companion.

"This must be George Chaloner's daughter, and mistress of the Chaloner estate," he felt; and, when he bowed, he gave no name.

She acknowledged his bow, as she replied to her cousin's query in a quiet reasoning tone:

"Of course, Sibyl, the gentleman must go up to the house with us as it is impossible for him to return to the village. He can ride up on John's horse; and you must see when, for you are weak, after your nerveless."

Then it came to pass that Vernon Cheveley, through the weddings of a fate that he could not control, found himself an inmate of Chaloner Hall, and the guest of one with whom he must be at enmity.

CHAPTER II

THE DAWN OF LOVE.

Vernon Cheveley's ankle was more severely injured than he or the Chalonors thought it to be. For a couple of weeks he suffered great pain, and was quite powerless to aid himself in anything.

During this time he constantly saw Miss Juliet Chaloner. She was strongly pulled, heart and soul, as it became the interests of such a grand estate to be. She seemed wrapped up in the management of her household, too, and of those in her employ; and Vernon concluded that she was a woman of rare business tact. He was glad that it was so, for people could not say, when they heard of his claim to the estate, that he had taken advantage of the innocence of such a child as Miss Juliet Chaloner's cousin Sibyl was in business matters.

This Sibyl—Sibyl Chaloner he learned her name to be—was not so cold and diplomatic towards Vernon as her cousin proved; it was not long ere he, for them was nothing stately and dignified about her, nothing but joyous, girl-like life, though she was holding the remembered. When she saw how much he suffered, she at once took upon herself the duties of nurse to him. This was done at first in gratitude for his bravery in preserving her from a horrible death, and afterwards because it was the genuine delight to serve him.

Day after day, therefore, Sibyl was to be found by Vernon's side, reading him by the sympathetic glances of her eyes, the winning tones of her voice, and the magnetic touch of her fingers. The reverent pangs of pain were dispersed in her presence, and sometimes, when Vernon saw how she flushed and trembled under the eloquent looks of admiration from his eyes, he wished that he might ever remain thus in her care, and in the atmosphere of her innocence and gentleness.

Ah! those were dangerous days for Vernon, leading into a delirium that was less tractable than any that came from his injuries. Men with less of youth's romance in them would have been led into the same delirium, had they also looked day after day upon the little figure, clad in white transparent robes, that flitted near him in a noiseless, ethereal way, or stood and that pure face relieved in its purity of complexion by the scarlet ripeness of her lips, and the faint tinge of rose on her perfectly-rounded cheeks, or unveiled in the enchantment of her large, blue, smiling eyes, that changed their color, when she was deeply moved, into a soft, tender, velvety blackness, no subtle that one could feel it, but not define it.

There came danger to her, also; a little later, when Vernon was convalescent sufficiently to limp around the room, leaning on her arm, or when she listened in a dream of happiness to his eloquent description of other scenes and climes, or the rich, musical tones of his voice that seemed to carry her into the very plasma of life, love, and romances that he read about. There was a charm in having this strong man helpless as a child, and leaning tenderly upon her, and with all the amazing spirit that comes of suffering or sickness.

All this bore its fruits. There was no one to guard, counsel, and control those young, warm, sympathetic hearts, for Miss Juliet Chaloner was too deeply wrapped up in the proper management of her household matters to cast a serious thought upon what might come of this free communion of those young people; heedless she did not know enough to realize their danger.

Then it was with Vernon and Sibyl. They each jealously guarded their secret, burying it in the deepest crypt of their hearts, lest each other should see aught of it, when, foolish children that they were, it was making its way out in the most palpable form at every glance of their eyes, every trembling word uttered to each other, every tender clasp of their hands and so fully were they permeated with it, that it shone out in perfect radiant glory around them; it refused to be cramped in secret within their own being, and bursting its bonds, it flooded their lives with a sweet joy.

During those happy days, Vernon thanked Heaven again and again that Sibyl was only the poor dependent cousin, and not the wealthy mistress of Chaloner Hall. He would have been perfectly happy in Sibyl's love for him but his conscience troubled him for having won her out of the home of his enemy. His independent spirit chafed, too, at receiving benefits at the hands of George Chaloner's child. How unmanly she would think him! How unworthy Sibyl might think him, too, for receiving hospitalities under the guise of a friend, when, if they knew all, they would know him to be Juliet Chaloner's greatest enemy! He resolved to leave this place at the earliest possible moment, and he was thankful, too, that when his claims were prosecuted, they would not recognise in him Guy Rokewood's soon.

He had been a month at Chaloner Hall, when a letter came from his lawyer, informing him that a notice of his claim had been sent to Miss Chaloner. He felt that he could remain under that roof no longer; though it was night, he would have stolen away at once; but he had not recovered sufficiently from his injury to be able to walk any distance, and Sibyl clung to him, and refused to let the carriage take him away.

On the following morning, at the breakfast table, he watched Miss Juliet Chaloner narrowly. He knew that she must have received the paper from his lawyer; but if she had done so, it did not change the even tenor of her life, for she was as self-complacent as ever. His dear Sibyl, however, was troubled; there was a look of fear in her eyes, and signs of tears also; but he thought these were occasioned by her sorrow at his contemplated departure, and he tried to soothe her, and partly succeeded.

He returned that day to the inn at the village; but in the weeks that followed, he saw Sibyl very frequently. He loved her too fondly to be happy when removed from her. But he began to notice a change in her, that grew more perceptible as the days passed. She loved him as fondly—she was as affectionate in her ways towards him—she was happier in his presence; but, withal, there was some evident grief hidden away in her heart. Her merry nature had grown sad, her face wore an anxious look—a look of fear and trouble, and whenever he came upon her suddenly, he was sure to find her in tears.

Vernon grew anxious over all this. He remonstrated with her—he tried every means in his power to cheer her, and he succeeded only to find that when he returned to her, she had lapsed back into the old melancholy. When he questioned her about the cause of all this, she could only rest her head on his bosom, and murmur, amidst her tears, her fear of having to relinquish his love.

This matter was growing serious. Sibyl was making herself ill over the secret cause of her grief, when one day he received a note from her, requesting him to visit her at once. It was about the time that his claim for the Chaloner estate was to be tested; but though Miss Juliet must know how convincing were the proofs on which his claim was founded, and how certain it was that it would be acknowledged, she did not seem to give herself a moment's uneasiness about the matter. Vernon was bewildered at her indifference. But now he hastened to meet Sibyl, as she had requested, and, as usual, she was in tears.

"I cannot conceal the cause of my grief from you longer!" she burst out, on seeing him. "But first, Vernon, I want to explain a cruel deceit that I have practised upon you. Oh! I fear that you will not forgive me for it; but, indeed, I entered upon it innocent of any desire to wrong you."

"I can readily forgive the worst thing my poor Sibyl could be guilty of," he said, encouragingly.

"Then, Vernon, it is I who am mistress of Chaloner estate, and not Juliet, as you have all this time supposed. Vernon—Vernon!" she cried, startled at his look of terror. "Oh! why do you look at me so wildly? Are you very angry?"

"No—no, Sibyl," he managed to say, in a husky voice. "But explain how all this came to pass."

"Why Vernon, you see, you took it for granted, without having it told to you, that Juliet was mistress of the estate. It was natural that you should conclude so, I suppose, for she is older and more sedate than I am; and she is so much wiser, that I let her manage things after her own taste. When I perceived the mistake you had made, I resolved to arrange it so that you would not discover it; for oh! Vernon, I want to be loved for myself, not for my riches."

While she was talking, Vernon Cheveley took in at a glance the fearful position in which he was placed by Sibyl's confession. He could not think what he should do: whether to conceal all his own deception towards her, or to reveal all. He was chilled with terror, and listened helplessly while she continued speaking.

"And now, Vernon," she said, amidst bitter tears, "I must tell you that which, I fear, must for ever separate us. I have wept over it poorly, guarding it carefully from your knowledge, hoping it would not be so bad as my imagination pictured it; but oh! I fear it is worse, and it would not be right to conceal it from you longer. Vernon, another claims Chaloner Hall, and my attorney says the proofs of his right to it are so convincing, that it will be useless to contest them."

"But, my dear Sibyl," Vernon managed to utter, "why need this separate us? If another claims the estate, you shall still possess so much of my love; and, as my betrothed wife, even you rest must me to find you a home!"

"But, oh! Vernon, you do not understand all!" she replied, in a whisper of awe and terror: "All the expenditure since possession

MANHOOD:

NOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two post-age stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Dear Sir,—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me, I have used all this long to see if its cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as at first the happy effects seemed to me to be "too good to be true."

I was afflicted in my head for years before I commenced it to be Catarrh. In reading in your Circular for it says my nose should be [illegible] I was compelled to sit up in the bed. My head and eyes and a dreadful pain across my forehead. After using one bottle I found relief, and in the course of three months I was entirely cured. I have since had no return of the disease, and I can safely say that I am entirely cured. I have recommended it to many friends, and have not met with a case of Catarrh but what it has cured. I would advise all who are afflicted with Catarrh to use it, and they will find relief. Yours truly,

WHOLESALE

Manufacturer of Boots & Shoes,

16 FRONT St. EAST, TORONTO.

PETERBOROUGH BRANCH, - DIXON'S BLOCK.

Goods Sold Direct to the People at Wholesale Price. The Only Business in Canada Conducted on the Same Principle. Over $20,000 worth of Boots & Shoes so Supplied Last Year.

The great loss annually sustained by selling to Dealers, first led to our establishing of Branch Stores, where we could supply direct to the people for Cash all the goods we could manufacture, thus giving to the people the goods less the dealer's profit, and saving to ourselves the annual loss. We were the more forcibly impressed into this step from the fact that cheap Eastern-made shoddy goods were being palmed off as our goods. We now sell our own goods, warrant what we sell, use no shoddy or inferior material of any kind, and can and do supply goods of the best quality 25 per cent. less than they can be bought elsewhere.

Everything Marked in Plain Figures. Only One Price.

CUSTOM DEPARTMENT.

The Jolly Old Pedagogue.

BY CHARLES ARNOLD.

'Twas a jolly old pedagogue, long ago,
Tall and slim and limber, gaunt and gray;
His face was long and solemn, his gait was slow,
His long chin hair was as white as snow;
But a merry twinkle was always in his eye;
And he sang every night as he went to bed,
"Let us be happy these hours we're by,
The living should live, though the dead be dead."
Said the jolly old pedagogue, long ago.

His comfort his coupon the rule of three,
Writing was a paragon, and history, too;
He took the little ones on his knee,
For a kind old fellow was he, 'tis said;
And the secrets of the bigger child he knew;
"Learn while you're young," he often said,
"For then is when to learn your A-B-C; Life for the living, and life for the dead,"
Said the jolly old pedagogue, long ago.

With the steadiest hand he was kind and cool,
Spanking only in extreme cases;
The rod was hardly known in his school—
Whipping to him was a barbarous rule,
And too hard work for the old bones;
Besides it was doubtful, he sometimes said;
"We should make the pleasant days seem long below,
The living need charity more than the dead,"
Said the jolly old pedagogue, long ago.

The West in the Ribes by the hawthorn lane,
With roses and woodbine over the door;
His rooms were quiet, and neat and plain,
But a spirit of comfort there held reign,
And made him forget he was old and poor;
"I need no little," he often said,
"And my friends and relatives here below
Won't litigate over me when I am dead,"
Said the jolly old pedagogue, long ago.

But the pleasantest times he had, of all,
Were the sociable hours he used to pass,
With his chair tipped back to a neighbor's wall,
Making an unceremonious call
Over a pipe and friendly glass.
This was the finest pleasure, he said,
Of the many he tasted here below;
"Who has no cronies had better be dead!"
Said the jolly old pedagogue, long ago.

Then the jolly old pedagogue's wrinkled face
Mellowed all over in sunshiny smiles;
He entered his glass with an old-school grace,
Chuckled and sipped, and prattled apace,
Till the hours grew merry, from cellar to tiles.
"I'm a pretty old man," he gaily said;
"I have lingered long while here below;
But my heart is fresh if my youth is fled!"
Said the jolly old pedagogue, long ago.

He smoked his pipe in the balmy air,
Every night when the sun went down
While the soft wind played in his silvery hair,
Leaving its tender kisses there;
On the jolly old pedagogue's jolly old crown;
And, toasting the kisses, he smiled, and said,
"I'm a specimen of world down here below;
Why wait for happiness till we are dead?"
Said the jolly old pedagogue, long ago.

He sat at the door one midsummer night,
After the sun had sank in the west,
And the flickering lustre of golden light
Made his kindly old face look warm and bright,
While the odorous night-wind whispered "rest!"
Gently, gently he bowed his head;
There were angels waiting for him, I know;
He was sure of happiness, living or dead.
This jolly old pedagogue, long ago!

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, NOV'R 13, 1879.

DISTRICT NEWS.

Millbrook.

Captain Howden, during a little more than a month, has bought over 25,000 bushels of barley and 8,000 bushels of wheat.

Mr. Robert Deyell, for Mr. George Needler, has bought over 12,000 bushels of wheat.—Messenger.

Seymour.

BROUGHT HOME A CORPSE.—The body of Peter McNaughton was brought home to his sorrowing relatives and friends last week, the intelligence of his death having reached his father a few days previous to its arrival. Young McNaughton went away a few months ago to better his condition in life, and near Springfield, Michigan, he engaged himself in hewing railroad ties. Just as McNaughton had finished hewing a tie, the axe of his companion glanced and struck him on the foot, and almost entirely severed the heel.—Herald.

Haliburton.

SERIOUS MUSHAWAY ACCIDENT.—Mr. and Mrs. Steele of Minden, were visiting some friends here on Sunday and had stopped at Mr. Packet's house. Mr. Steele alighted from the waggon and as his wife was about to descend, their team of colts became frightened and ran off at a terrific speed across the field. On account of the roughness of the ground Mrs. Steele was soon pitched out and her head coming in contact with a pile of stones, it was found that she was very much injured, her skull fractured and one ear almost completely cut off. She is now under the care of Dr. Lowe. But little hopes are entertained of her recovery.—Post.

Penetanguishene.

A rather singular case of insanity has just been witnessed by some of the neighbors of Mr. R. Clark in Alnwick. It appears that about two weeks ago Mrs. Clark became the mother of an infant, and was recovering, when on Saturday night, 1st, she was seized with a fit of insanity. Her husband after trying to remonstrate with her received two slight stabs. He then alarmed the neighbors and soon seven able bodied men were on the spot, also Dr. Lane, but the poor woman became only more enraged and stood in the doorway brandishing an axe and butcher's knife. These brave men were kept in the cold from 7 p.m. on Saturday till 5 a.m. Sunday, and during this time repeated efforts were made to gain admittance in vain. When the poor woman saw matters getting worse she called up two little boys, aged 6 and 7, and armed them also, and really it was a sad sight to see the mother and little children armed as though to save their lives, she sometimes carrying the infant and brandishing the weapon. She has been similarly affected at a period of the same kind before, and although she has not taken any nourishment, saying that every thing contains poison, she is slowly recovering. She was captured by putting a board behind her in the door-way and holding her so until those without seized her, but not till she had been considerably abused.

Port Hope.

THE INFANTICIDE CASE.—On Thursday last the inquest on the case of child murder was continued at the eighth concession, Cavan, Coroner Maxwell presiding. The girl who is supposed to have given birth to the child, Mary Ann Weatherup, had been arrested for murder, and was present in charge of the constable. The evidence of several witnesses was heard, as was also that of the girl's two brothers; but nothing materially important was elicited from them that would tend to convict the girl. Dr. Corbett corroborated the evidence of Dr. Herriman that was given at the first inquiry, with reference to the child having been born alive, and subsequently held over hot coals in order to secure speedy death. The jury, after having considered the evidence, brought in a verdict that the child had been killed in the manner stated by the [illegible] by some person or persons as yet unknown. The prisoner was then discharged.

The Port Hope Times says:—Lakefield businessmen, like those everywhere else in this N. P. cursed country, are brightening up. Mr. Wm. Graham, of that place, who stayed here last night, speaks hopefully of Lakefield yet. We hope Lakefield will feel the town sufficiently to enable some of its residents now to utilize the immense water privilege it has at present going to waste.

SEPARATION OF THE COUNTIES.—The Port Hope Guide publishes a petition in favor of the separation of the County of Northumberland, at its next session, from the County of Durham.

Correspondence of the Port Hope Times.—Mr. Jones, of Cavan, has sold his farm to the Port Hope Cheese Factory Company for Tuesday Nov. 4th, as follows:—This morning as the mixed train was leaving Garden Hill, an Indian, who had been drinking too much, fell between the cars and was saved from instant death by the alacrity with which Conductor Richard Mimms jerked him out of danger. The managers of the Midland Railway have cause to be proud of their staff of conductors, as not a road in the Dominion has better men. Conductor Mimms deserves some recognition for his noble conduct. I might say that the Indian did not get his whiskey at Garden Hill."

Lindsay.

Owing to the financial success of the Peterboro Central Exhibition only $110 will be required from the South Victoria agricultural society as their subscription. The new basis has proved a complete success. Peterboro's management has been very creditable.

We understand that some time ago Mr. McFaul, headmaster of the Lindsay public schools, suggested to the education department:: the propriety of changing the order of subjects in the entrance examinations. Heretofore arithmetic, a most difficult subject, has been placed first, the easier subjects following. There have been instances where pupils fairly up in arithmetic have signally failed through nervousness or timidity during the first hour. The proposed change would allow them to become accustomed to the situation with results much more satisfactory to all concerned. Mr. McFaul has received a reply to the effect that arrangements will be made to carry out his suggestions. The idea is a very good one and will commend itself to examiners as well as candidates.

NARROW ESCAPE.—A hunter named Savage had a very narrow escape from death on Round Lake. He was deerstalking near the lake when he tripped and fell and the entire charge in his rifle was deposited in his thigh. His cries were heard by Mr. C. Foley, of Lindsay, who was on the lake awaiting the arrival of his dogs with a deer, and he paddled over to where the wounded man was. Savage's leg was bleeding very profusely and it was at first feared that an artery was cut, but this proved not to be the case, and the limb was dressed as well as circumstances would permit, and he was taken to the foot of the lake where a conveyance was secured to take him home.

PERSONAL.—Mr. W. J. Hallet, one of the teachers in the public schools, has resigned to accept a department in the Ashburnham school. Mr. Hallett is a thoroughly competent and energetic teacher and we wish him success.

VARIOUS TOPICS.

Just time enough between now and Christmas to finish a dressing-gown and a pair of slippers.

It seems as if all the tenderest and most romantic names of modern times had been stolen by tobacconists for brands and labels.

Take it of a cool morning and every man in a room will stand around a stove which has no fire in it just the same as if it was red hot. Why do they do these things?

The phrase, "Drunk as a lord" arose out of an older proverb, "Drunk as a beggar," and we are told that it was altered owing to the vice of drunkenness prevailing more among the great of late years.

Here is a simple method of getting a divorce, which it is believed, is not patented. As the husband of Mrs. Fanny Harris, of Brisbane, Australia, has not put in an appearance for some time, and as the lovely Fanny wishes again to enter the matrimonial state, she gives her husband notice that he must step up, claim his property, pay advertising charges, or forever after hold his peace. Here is the advertisement that Fanny causes inserted in the Queenslander: "I, Fanny Harris, have not heard of my husband, George Harris, for seven years, and if I don't hear from him previously I intend to get married again in two months."

There is something strangely parallel in the tragic fates of Donaldson and Wise. These men were intimately associated in former years. Donaldson went up from Chicago, and Wise from its rival city, St. Louis. Each had with him one companion. Neither of the balloons were ever found, and the exact fate of each is a matter of conjecture, although it is thought that both were engulfed in Lake Michigan. Each of the companions were found some days after the occasion, each on the shores of Lake Michigan, one with a copy of a Chicago paper in his pocket, the other with a St. Louis paper. Donaldson was never found, and neither has anything been heard of Wise. Up to the present time the cases are wonderfully similar.

CHIPS.—There has been money a hero born, lived, and died unknown, just for the want ov an opportunity.

There ain't nothing that will sho the virtews and vices ov a man, in so vivid a light, as profuse prosperity.

Mi dear boy, allwuss keep sumthing in reserve. The man who kan jump six inches further than he ever has jumpt, is a hard customer to beat.

Most wimmin would like to have their husbands hone—but well broke to their halter.

There ain't nothing on arth that will take the starch so klean out ov us, as to git kaught bi the phellow we are trieing to kourt.

It is a good deal ov a bore to have others luv us more than we luv them.—Josh Billings.

The project of making an international park at Niagara Falls moves slowly along. The Premier of Ontario and three of the Cabinet Ministers of that province visited Niagara to view the landscape o'er, and form some opinions on the practicability of the park project. It was estimated that the property on the Canada side could be purchased for $400,000, and that on the American side for $1,000,000. Olmsted, the designer of the Central Park, New York, Prospect Park, Brooklyn, Montreal Park and others, has been over the ground at the instance of the New York State commission. It is understood that a set of programmes or plans of proposed operations was submitted for consideration, in which it was suggested, 1st, that no efforts be made to make the lands into a park, but that the natural characteristics of the locality be restored and preserved, as far as practicable, and that the grounds be thrown open to all, subject to such regulations as may be necessary; 2nd, that the islands in the river and a strip of land on each side of it should be planted with trees so as to form a belt sufficiently dense to shut out all incongruous objects; and, 3rd, that a toll to defray cost of improvements and maintenance should be levied, but that such other fees as are at present collected—unless, perhaps, for special services, such as coaches—should be abolished. It appears that the citizens of the State of New York are favorably inclined towards the proposed reserve, as are also the leading newspapers of that State. The proposed scheme has not yet been much ventilated in Canada, but it will probably meet with a favorable reception there, also if the commercial Canadians do not think the expense too great.

—Crops on Prince Edward Island are generally good; hay turning out an extra one, with a good aftermath; wheat the best yield known for years. Of barley the statements have a lot to report. Potatoes are coming out in great order. Oat quantity available for shipment will probably reach two million bushels.

SCHOLAR'S HONOR ROLL.

NAMES OF PUPILS WHO TOOK HIGHEST MARKS IN THEIR SCHOOLS.

The following are the names of those who took the highest number of marks in each of the classes of the undermentioned schools during the month of October:—

S. S. No. 1, Smith.
(J. J. METCALFE, TEACHER.)

THIRD CLASS—1st, Robert Fowler, 2nd, Isabella Fowler, 3rd, George H. Tully, 4th, Robert Elliott.

SECOND CLASS, SENIOR—1st, David Mitchell, 2nd, Herbert Middleton, 3rd, Fred. Middleton.

SECOND CLASS, JUNIOR—1st, Maggie Elliott, 2nd, Mary Mabee, 3rd, John Mabee.

FIRST CLASS, SENIOR—1st, Bertie Tully.

FIRST CLASS, JUNIOR—1st, Thomas J. Calvert, 2nd, Minnie M. Calvert, 3rd, J. Albert Middleton.

S. S. No. 7, Otonabee.
(J. H. SUDBURY, TEACHER.)

FOURTH CLASS—1st, Jessie West, 2nd James McFarlane, 3rd, Lizzie McIntyre.

THIRD CLASS A—1st, Florence Rubidge, 2nd, Maggie Rubidge, 3rd, Willie Mels.

THIRD CLASS B—1st, Christina Thompson, 2nd, Ellen Hewson, 3rd, Herbert Drennan.

THIRD CLASS C—1st, Maggie Mels, 2nd, Jas. Drummond, 3rd, Hattie Nelson.

SENIOR CLASS.—(The report in this class does not include Arithmetic.)—1st, Charlie Thompson and Donald McFarlane, 2nd, Eddie Hewson, 3rd, Jessie Thompson and Patrick Doris.

SENIOR FIRST CLASS.—(Part II.)—1st, Mary Comrie and Lizzie Hewson, 2nd, Vina McFarlane, 3rd, Lizzie McFee and Effie Hunter.

JUNIOR FIRST CLASS—1st, Christopher Howson, 2nd, Amy Drummond, 3rd, Emma Taylor.

South Dummer School.
(R. J. KIDD, TEACHER.)

FOURTH CLASS—1st, R. Spence, 2nd, H. McMillan, 3rd, M. Scott, 4th, W. Spence.

THIRD CLASS—1st, Nina Spence, 2nd, Jane McMillan, 3rd, Andrew Knox, 4th, Maggie McMillan.

SECOND CLASS—1st, Hugh McMaster, 2nd, Lizzie Pegg, 3rd, Jas. Webster, 4th, Wm. Lamcox.

FIRST CLASS, SECOND PART—1st, Ellie Webster, 2nd, Edith Stevenson, 3rd, Harry Andrews, 4th, Etheline McMaster.

JUNIOR CLASS—1st, Edna McMaster, 2nd, Jane Pegg.

FIRST CLASS, FIRST PART—1st, Maud Kelly, 2nd, Mary Kelly, 3rd, Robert Webster, 4th, Fred Leamex.

S. S. No. 1, Dummer.

SENIOR FOURTH CLASS—1st, Mary Johnston, 2nd, George Rose, 3rd, Thos. Hawthorne.

JUNIOR FOURTH CLASS—1st, Christina Boland, 2nd, Sarah McDonald, 3rd, W. J. White.

THIRD CLASS—1st, Annie White, 2nd, Rose Kidd, 3rd, Patrick Welch.

SECOND CLASS, SENIOR—1st, Elizabeth Robson, 2nd, Edward Boland, 3rd, Albert McIntosh, 4th, John Spence.

SECOND CLASS, JUNIOR—1st, Maggie Kidd, 2nd, Michael Fitzpatrick, 3rd, Jane Parker, 4th, Ella Forsyth.

SECOND CLASS, No. 1—1st, Hattie White, 2nd, Edwin Kidd, 3rd, Jas. Welch, 4th, Charlie Fitzpatrick.

SENIOR FIRST CLASS—1st, Lizzie Kelly, 2nd, Hannah Spence, 3rd, Ella White, 4th, Robert Telford.

JUNIOR FIRST CLASS—1st, Frank Parker, 2nd, Walter Kidd, 3rd, Ada Kidd, 4th, Evaline Johnson, 5th, Annie Kidd.

S. S. No. 1, Monaghan.
(W. H. HILL, TEACHER.)

FOURTH CLASS—1st, Priscilla Payne, 2nd, Jennie Huston. Jennie Huston took the highest stand at the monthly examination in history, arithmetic and geography.

THIRD CLASS SENIOR—1st, Hattie Davidson, 2nd, Lizzie Tully. Hattie Davidson took the highest percentage at the recent monthly examination in the subjects of arithmetic, grammar and geography.

THIRD CLASS JUNIOR—1st, James Fowler, 2nd, Sarah Huston, 3rd, John Young, 4th, Sidney Payne, 5th, Archie Lillico.

SECOND CLASS—1st, Malone Davidson, 2nd, Edith Huston, 3rd, Agnes Telfy, 4th, George Payne, 5th, James Young, 6th, Richard Payne, 7th, John Henry, 8th, Wm. Lillico.

SENIOR FIRST—1st, Lizzie Young, 2nd, George Fowler, 3rd, Clara Payne, 4th, Frederick Galloway, 5th, Martha Paiem.

The average attendance for the month of October was twenty-eight.

The Collection of School Rates in Union School Sections.

Having regard to section 78 and 79 of the Public Schools Act and to section 11 of the School Act of 1879, all Public School rates are required to be levied through the Municipal Officers, so that the Assessor, Clerk and Collectors are required to discharge the like duties in the collection of Public School rates, as of other rates having regard to their respective Municipalities. Section 16 of the Amendment Act of 1879 expressly provides that in case of a union school section the area of the section shall be considered for all purposes of taxation and for all school purposes as within the particular Municipality in which the school house of the union is situated; and in case of unions formed after the 2nd March, 1877, and in all cases after 1st January, 1880, the contribution of each part of the union is to be levied according to the assessed value of the

PETERBOROUGH, NOV'R 13, 1879.

NEW PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS FOR ONTARIO.

The subject has again been broached of new Legislative chambers for the foremost Province in the Dominion. That such new buildings are badly needed none will deny who know anything of personal discomforts and dangers of public documents in the present Parliamentary pile. New buildings were proposed some months ago, but at that time there was a strong agitation against all exemptions from municipal taxation. Toronto which, as a large city, suffers greatly from exemptions was prominent in its outcry that all properties should pay a municipal tax—even properties owned by the Government, either Provincial or Dominion. This was taken up by some of the smaller cities and towns offering not only to exempt from taxation Provincial buildings put up in their borders, but also to give land on which to build them. Thus the question was not discussed fairly on its intrinsic merits, being mixed up with the rather mixed subject of tax exemptions. The proposal for new Parliament buildings is now again made, apart from the exemption puzzle, and having a new feature in a proposed change of site from one part of the city of Toronto to another. It is hardly likely that any proposition to build outside Toronto, or beyond its immediate neighborhood, would or could be seriously entertained by those whose province it will be to determine the question. Toronto is the largest, most central and otherwise most attractive city in Ontario; and, however petty rivals may rave, the sense of the Province is undoubtedly in its favor as the capital. The change of site then resolves itself into a choice between the lot on which the old buildings now stand, or some other in or near Toronto. A portion of the Queen's Park is proposed as a free site, by which arrangement the present Parliament Square could be advantageously sold and thus help to pay the cost of new buildings. The conversion of the Toronto Lunatic Asylum into Parliamentary chambers and Departmental offices was formerly proposed, and met with some favor, in spite of the doubtful compliment to the M. P. P.'s involved in the succession suggested. The great advantage in this plan, if it could be carried out properly, would be the removal of the lunatics from their present noisy and undesirable position to one quieter and more adapted to the treatment of such unfortunates, even if it were only to one of the outlying villages in the neighborhood of the city. It is probable that the subject will come up for discussion in some shape or other at the coming session of the Ontario Legislature, when we hope such a determination may be arrived at as will permit the early beginning of Parliament Buildings creditable to the Province, whether they go up on the old square or on a new site.

A LITTLE BIT OF "SHOP."

The Review has of late been almost exclusively devoting its columns to "talking shop." It feels the force of THE EXAMINER'S steady progress and makes frantic efforts to keep pace with its less excitable neighbour. To this end the subscription list of the defunct Lakefield News has been bought, and those who formerly received the modest little village paper are promised the pomposely pretentious town sheet each week, for the same price. What a fall is this to pride! We venture to predict that there are those who took the late Lakefield News who will have none of its obsequious substitute, at any price. We have before remarked that we would rather publish a good weekly paper than have anything to do with a needless daily, which invariably spoils the weekly edition issued from the same office. Practical experience of this truth is now forcing the Review to buy up old subscription lists and "give itself away" in more senses than one. Hear the Sanford Repositor on this point:—

"We never could, even under the most favourable circumstances, see the necessity for local dailies in towns and small cities, where the large city journals are distributed every day, and which, in spite of themselves, entirely eclipse the small local lights. If these newspaper publishers who now put forth their lamentable appeals, sickly daily sheets, would invest what they squander in this way in improving their weeklies and making them what they should be, their enterprise would be much better rewarded, and the towns they hail from would be vastly more creditably represented."

Coming nearer home, we have the Fenelon Falls Gazette speaking of crazy competition in a neighbouring town, as follows:—

"In our opinion the chief use of a daily paper in a town the size of Port Hope is to enable a prosperous publisher to get rid of his surplus funds."

The folly of the proprietor of the Review in issuing a despised daily, to the injury, and all but destruction, of a formerly creditable weekly is none of our funeral. Indeed it has done THE EXAMINER great good financially. But that the Review in its woe saw fit to speak in a splenetic manner of this journal,—which has always estimated its so-called rival, weekly and weakly, at its real worth,—we should not have inflicted even this much "shop" on our readers. Our business announcement of last week was legitimate and genuine. We then stated that our arrangements place THE EXAMINER "far ahead of any other paper in this section as an advertising medium." The weakly thing that envies it reminds us that our paper has long occupied that position. True enough; and it will continue to do so in spite of the purchase of subscription lists and reduction of rates by any other journal in the district. However we most courteously accept the Review's reminder, and cheerfully make the correction suggested:—"THE EXAMINER is further ahead than before of any paper in this section." There; that should be satisfactory.

MIDLAND CHANGES.

Mr. COX, we learn, has promoted Mr. W. B. Ferguson to the position of General Freight Agent in the place of Mr. Taylor who retires. The system of promotion inaugurated by the President is a wise one and must tend to make the officers on the road feel that their own interests and that of the company are mutual, and that employees best serve themselves in faithfully serving the company and in promoting its interests. The promotion of Mr. Ferguson will give very general satisfaction to all those under him and to the customers of the road. The Port Hope Times assumes the right to lecture Mr. Cox for making the change, but the thoughtful readers of the Times will be ready to believe that Mr. Cox must be a better judge of the necessities of the road and its management towards securing increased success, than a newspaper writer who perhaps passes over it once or twice in three months, or a year, and who, it is just to assume, knows nothing of the details of its management other than received through interested or disaffected channels. It is no part of our duty to reflect on any officer, unless his conduct be extremely reprehensible, but it is no more our duty or that of any newspaper to interfere with the general management of the President, unless that management interferes with public interests, or is cruelly severe or unjust to one removed without cause. It may be that too many such corporations have been burdened with a superabundance of officers, the lopping off, of which, may be in the interest of the company and of the public, and we have no right to assume that any other considerations induced the change. It may have been necessary at some period in the management of the Times office to remove a very efficient foreman, without announcing cause, but would it not have been intermeddling unduly in other peoples business, for outsiders to interfere, and without knowledge of the whole circumstances, condemn the proprietor, and we cannot help thinking the Times in intermeddling in the changes of management on the Midland Railway, leaves itself open to the charge of being a busybody in other men's matters. Mr. Cox is amenable for the conduct and action of all the officials of the road and must have the right to decide as to who is fittest to carry out his instructions.

A WARNING CRY.

The following from the ultra-Protectionist Montreal Gazette, is corroborative of the views expressed lately by the EXAMINER on the same subject. We look upon this ruinious competition as the natural effect of Protection. It was spoken of by the Reform press before the present highly protected tariff was pressed on the country; but the Tory journals could not or would not see it. Now they are trying to stem the rush of the stream they were so largely instrumental in damming up. The torrent has head and they may cry to it or about as vainly as did King Canute order the tide to cease its flow. All attempts, too, to change the natural and disastrous course of Protection, while the thing itself lasts, will be like the old woman who tried to keep back the sea with a mop. The Gazette sees cause and effect plainly enough; but is either silly or most brazen when it now tries to advise to hold their hands those whom it so lately encouraged with delusive hopes. But, without further comment, here is the article:—

"The impetus which the National Policy has already given to the manufacturing industries of the Dominion and the promise which it holds out of still greater advantages in the future, has caused many towns and villages throughout Ontario and Quebec to offer inducements either in the shape of a cash bonus or exception from taxation for a long term of years, to manufacturers to erect mills and workshops within these localities. The motive which prompts the offer of special advantages to new industries is a commendable one, and one with which we are fully in sympathy, but it is worth while pointing out that great care should be exercised by the Municipal Councils of these several localities in the choice of the industry upon which a bonus or exemption from taxation is conferred, and the chief aim should be to encourage the establishment of such industries as have not been fully developed within the country, and such as are, therefore, more likely to be rewarded with success. For this reason it is questionable whether it would be wise to encourage the establishment of new cotton factories in this province, as some towns are disposed to do, because, with some half-dozen large and well-equipped mills already in operation within Ontario and Quebec, whose products satisfy a prevailing demand, the erection of other mills would simply lessen, and possibly destroy, each profit as those now in existence can obtain without adding to the general prosperity of the whole. It were at best a hazardous and uncertain task to attempt to compete with the large and well appointed mills now in operation, managed by men whose experience has been obtained not without considerable cost, and we would therefore advise the people of any town in this province or in Ontario, who may be prepared to offer inducements for the erection of mills within their confines, to select such industries as are new to the country, or as are not yet fully developed within it, because in this way they can be best assured of the permanent success of their venture.

It is probable Parliament will be called together for the despatch of business on the 6th of February.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

It is considered likely that the Ontario assembly will meet in the first week in January next. A new speaker will have to be elected.

The London Standard says the rumor that the Imperial Parliament will be immediately dissolved is absurd. It was not silent for stock-jobbing purposes.

The Treasurer of the I. O. O. F. at Halifax has forwarded a draft for $333.75 to the fever stricken Oddfellows of Memphis. This, with last years donation makes $1,400 contributed by the Nova Scotia Oddfellows.

The Brockville Recorder suggests as a programme for the liberal party: "Less legislation, fewer provinces, fewer officials and smaller salaries; the abolition of the senate and councils; a liberal land policy to encourage immigration, the construction of the Pacific Railway; reduced expenditure; less taxation and a revenue tariff."

It is said that whiskey flowed like water, and votes were bought like sheep, in the interest of the Conservative candidate at the West Hastings election last June. This is shown by the evidence so far taken. A basket of whiskey was placed in a room for those who voted for Robinson, and $2.50 was above the market price for votes.

The settlers in the vicinity of Fort McLeod, N. T., have sent a petition to the Minister of the Interior, setting forth that they have been put to a great deal of loss by the Indians in that section. They have lost a large number of cattle, all killed, it is said, by starving Indians. No blame is attached to them, as all the buffalo have left and they must have something to eat. The Dominion Government is asked for indemnity and also for provisions for the Indians.

Gen. Grant is a man of few words, but when he does speak it is to the point. Many of his brief speeches have become historical, and the address at Galesburg, Ill., will stand out prominent among them. He said: "I am glad to get into Illinois again, and I am very glad to see you all; but I have great sympathy with the newspaper men here behind me. I am a man of economy, and as they have to go to the expense of telegraphing every word I say, I will make no speech."

The "Illustrated London Almanack" for 1880 gives the following significant computation from returns issued by the National Debt Commissioners:

MR. GLADSTONE'S FIVE YEARS.

Net Reduction of National Debt	£696,196,91
Net Remission of Taxes	12,451,286
Total relief	£38,648,217

LORD BEACONSFIELD'S FIVE YEARS.

Net Reduction of National Debt	£1,294,482
Net Increase of Taxes	1,278,986
Total increase	£ 174,496

In this statement no account is taken of the large amount of unfunded debt created by the present Government.

The Hon. J. Norquay, Premier of Manitoba, has, in view of the approaching general election in that Province, issued an address which may be regarded as the Government manifesto. The only policy foreshadowed is one embracing (1) a scheme of local road improvements, to be carried on rather by local municipal organizations than by the Provincial Government; (2) a system of drainage for the improvement of wet lands; (3) economy in conducting the public service. He favors an enlargement of the Province in order to obtain an increased subsidy and increased representation in the Dominion Parliament.

The Reformers of West Durham met in Convention at Bowmanville on Saturday, and made unanimous choice of Hon. Edward Blake as their candidate at the election to be held in that constituency on the 24th inst. The proceedings through out were harmonious and enthusiastic. Mr. Blake telegraphed his acceptance of the nomination. He will visit the riding before the election. The Conservatives nominated Mr. Stephen Washington, a farmer of Darlington Township. He having declined the nomination the Conservatives decided on Tuesday to allow Mr. Blake to be elected by acclamation.

The Postmaster-General of the United States has a communication from the postal authorities of Canada stating that all publications styled "police gazettes," &c., are prohibited from circulation in the Dominion on account of their immoral character. Despite the utmost precaution of the Canadian postmasters, some copies of the obnoxious papers are still received in the mails from this country and delivered. It is therefore requested that the United States Government take measures to prevent forwarding this class of matter in Canadian mails. The Postmaster has therefore issued an order that all such publications addressed to Canada shall be unmailable.

The Ottawa Free Press says bread higher, groceries gone up at least 10 per cent., stoves and hardware generally 12½ per cent., rubber overshoes from 35 to 50 per cent., coal in Montreal from $4.50 to $7.50 per ton, all descriptions of dry-goods higher—and yet no rise in wages, and no possible diminution in the number of the unemployed in the great centres of business. Well may Sir Leonard Tilley, in the face of these facts, talk of a modification of the tariff next session. In its present shape it is an enormity which the great majority of the people of this country have made up their minds must be blotted out of the statute book altogether. Ministers went in on the N.P., however: on it they ejected the Mackenzie Government and a proper sense of the fitness of things would dictate their retirement rather than their patching up a proven failure.

Where are the special telegrams, a la New York Herald, that the Mail blowed so much about the other day? It was to have begun their publication immediately; but so far none have appeared. The Globe on the other hand has been publishing from one to two and more columns of special telegrams each day. These, too, are received direct from correspondents or agents engaged by the Globe itself and not through an arrangement (such as the Mail proposed for itself, but has as yet failed to carry out) with an American paper notoriously hostile to Britain and British institutions, regarding which the Mail would not only accept its 'specials'; but display an idiotic pride in its shame. It is the old story of 'Brag' and 'Hold-fast,' over again. We don't know how to be too grateful that THE EXAMINER in a local sense should have been likened to the Globe in point of steady and enduring enterprise. Yes, in Peterborough as in Toronto journalistic circles it has been proved that 'Holdfast is better."

—A young man living at Smithfield, Colchester County, who committed a lady some time ago, was dragged out of a hayloft where he was attending a party, taken to the barn and treated and tarred by a number of men in disguise.

FIRE PROTECTION.

We have received the following communications in reference to fire protection in the town, indicated by "Citizen's" letter in last weeks EXAMINER, and to which we direct the attention of our City Fathers. The subject is one which will bear discussion and to which we may have occasion to refer shortly.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER.

SIR,—A "Citizen's" remarks anent fire protection in your last issue, are pointed, and as a large property owner in town, I would impress on the town council the immediate necessity of providing additional security against fire. Say the formation of another company, and the purchase of another engine, or the construction of waterworks. Thanking you for your space.

I remain, &c.,
PROPERTY OWNER.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER.

SIR,—Having read the letter of "Citizen" in the last number of your valuable paper, I must say that I was deeply impressed by the facts stated by him. I think that the present Fire Brigade have done good service whenever called on, but then we must remember that we have not had a serious fire in town since its formation, and we cannot tell when one may occur. Now, if a serious fire occurred in the north end of the town, or on Smithtown hill, the whole district might be burned down before the arrival of the brigade and apparatus, or perhaps (as was the case last spring) when they did arrive at the scene of the fire they could do nothing on account of lack of the necessary equipments. I think that the fire, water and gas committee would be attending to the public interests if they saw that the present brigade were provided with all the apparatus necessary, and the number of men increased to a force sufficient to handle the same in an efficient manner. Hoping to hear from others on this important subject,

I am yours, &c.,
FOURTH WARD.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER.

SIR,—I read with a great deal of concern the letter of a "Citizen" in last week's EXAMINER. Now, fire protection is a subject to which I have devoted considerable time and study, and have come to the conclusion along with a great many other residents of the town, that our interests would be better looked after in this matter by a thoroughly volunteer brigade than by a half-paid one as at present. The salaries of the present brigade amount to something like $600 per year, if another engine was purchased and another fire company organised on the volunteer system, great rivalry would exist between the two companies (as in Cobourg) and in a short time Peterborough could boast of one of the best brigades on the continent, for there is no doubt that the material can be had, and the $600 that is now paid as salaries could be used in the purchase of equipments for the department.

Thanking you for thus encroaching on your space.

Yours truly,
A FIREMAN.

An English Farmer on California

Although Canada does not possess the delightful climate of California it presents a better field for agriculturists than the Pacific State. An English farmer of fourteen years experience in California writes to the London Times warning them that at present prices of produce, farming in that State is entirely unremunerative. Rents are proportionately as high as in England. On the Salinas plains one-third of the crop, sacked and delivered at the warehouse is an ordinary rental. Taxes are higher than in England. One and a half per cent. on capital, in any and all shapes, is the yearly levy, in addition to enormously heavy indirect taxes and road and poll taxes. Watches, guns, hens, sewing machines, pianos, and pigs, all find there allotted place in the assessor's blanks. If England suffers from floods, California is more continuously plagued by drought. Scarcely one season in four do they get sufficient rainfall to insure a general crop. The majority of the farmers in the southern portion of the State are reported to be virtually insolvent, and are "carried" from year to year by the storekeeper, who sends his agent to the harvest field and stencils the sacks of grain with his brand as they come from the thresher. The picture painted by this practical English farmer is about as gloomy as that presented lately by emigrants to Texas.

Sir Leonard and the Tariff.

All the flap-doodle about the visits of the Hon. Mr. Tilley to the factories seems to be got up to order. The real state of affairs is well shown in this extract from a letter written by a workingman of Toronto to a friend in Ottawa:

"It is pretended that the reason why the Finance Minister was not shown all through Mr. Hay's is because the hour was late; but the truth is that he was shown through every part of the factory where a man was working. Mr. Tilley was not taken up to the top-flat because he would only have seen an array of empty benches. The Mail reporter omitted to state that Mr. Hay directed Sir Leonard Tilley's attention to the large stock of chairs he had on hand, and remarked that that did not look much like busy times, or that the factory was put on short time this week, or that there are nearly one hundred less men working to-day in it than there were when the Hon. Mr. Mackenzie was Premier, or that first class mechanics are to-day working for Mr. Hay at a York shilling per hour. Sir Leonard Tilley also visited Clark's trunk factory. He was told that their orders had greatly increased, but forgot to ask the men whether or no they were doing increased work for the same pay they received when Mackenzie was in power. Yet such is the case. If Sir Leonard Tilley really desired to know the state of trade, he should have gone incognito among the journeymen cigar-makers, stonecutters, bricklayers, carpenters, etc., and learned the truth from their own lips."

A Danger in the Jury System.

(Boston Herald.)

The dry, cutting satire practised so much by the cross-examining lawyer of to day is sometimes as dangerous in the court as it would be in the street. A short time ago a jury was sitting on a case in Southern Colorado. A woman took the stand and was somewhat unceremoniously treated by the lawyers. At last a particularly dry and caustic fellow began to practise on her with the cross-examination. Now, among the jurymen was one gentleman who was drawn with apprehension and fear of consequences. He was a free, wild miner, with no more idea of the restrictions of law and justice than a buffalo. He had twitched uneasily while the woman was being examined, and could only be kept still by being provoked into a whispered conversation with the foreman. As the cross-examination reached a particular point, he astonished the Court by jumping up, thrusting his hand into his hip pocket, and exclaiming to the lawyer: "Hi thar, Mr. Stick-in-the-mud!" This from a juryman brought every eye in wonder and amusement upon him. He heeded nothing, and proceeded: "Jack McCabe wont 'low no man to talk to a woman in that shape; not while he's round!" The Judge rebuked honest Jack, and he slunk into his seat, embarrassed, but mad. The lawyer, turning upon him with withering scorn, began, bombastically: "Of what weight with me is the opinion of an ignorant juryman?!"—"That's what I thought," said Jack, as with one bound, he cleared the rail and wound himself around the lawyer. Before a constable could reach the struggling pair, Jack had mastered the lawyer so that he was obliged to give up the case and go home on a shutter. The jurymen nearly cleaned out the court before he could be placed under arrest, disabling two constables and putting the prior and judge to flight. Another argument against the jury system.

—Eight deaths from yellow fever in Memphis last week.

—The West Hastings election trial has been adjourned till December 16.

—A shoemaker named Michael Dwyre attempted to commit suicide on Saturday at Brantford.

—Captain Webb wants to swim thirty-six hours, naked, in the open sea. Let him swim.

—The shipment of lumber for this season has ceased at Lindsay. The stock at Waubaushene seems inexhaustible.

—Antoinnapp, the Arthur wife murderer, has been sent to the London Lunatic asylum.

—Sir L. Tilley resumes next week his western pilgrimage in search of prosperous manufactories.

—Gen. Grant intends to spend the winter in a tour through the Southern and Western States.

—Mr. Edward Shehyn, father of Mr. Jos. Shehyn, M. P. P. for Quebec East, has died at Berthier, Que., aged 100 years.

—On board the steam tug Dauntless an explosion took place, near Montreal, on Saturday, resulting in the killing of the fireman.

—The Norseman will make her last trip to Rochester on Friday. When she returns (on Saturday) she will lay up in Port Hope for the winter.

—The book-keeper of the Manufacturer's and Merchants Bank, New York, is a defaulter to the extent of $38,000. He is in Canada, it is thought.

—Three carpenters, Wm. Elliott, Wm. Kerby and Samuel Longhead, were injured by falling from a scaffold in Toronto on Friday.

—Floods have occurred in the Province of Jaen, Spain, causing great loss. There has been a renewal of the floods in Murcia.

—A few ladies moving in good society in Toronto have formed themselves into a committee for the moral protection of female immigrants.

—The sentence of death on Susan Kennedy, of Montreal, has been commuted to imprisonment for life by the Governor General.

—A dog fight took place in Ottawa county on Friday, between animals owned by two men of that city. The dogs are said to have been almost literally torn to pieces.

—On Tuesday morning Mr. Fairchild, who worked a rented farm in the township of Vaughan, near the village of Richmond Hill, committed suicide by hanging himself in his barn.

—The propeller Argyle, reported missing two or three days ago, was safe at Prince Arthur's Landing on Saturday. She sustained some injury by ice in the river.

—Miss Annie Hostetter, daughter of the patent medicine manufacturer, was married in Pittsburg on Thursday. It is stated that her father gave her bonds to the value of a million dollars.

—In some quarters in England it is believed that "Sir Roger" Tichborne will be released before the next general election, and that he is sure to get a seat in Parliament.

—It is reported from San Francisco that at a meeting of Kearneyites it was resolved to adopt a policy of hanging any merchant who should employ or in any way encourage Chinese labour.

—Margaret Baker, aged 18, had both legs so badly crushed on Friday by a Northern Railway train that she had to have them amputated. She was seeing her parents off to Barrie.

—There is a prisoner committed as a vagrant to Goderich jail whose age, so far as can be ascertained, is 102 years. His name is Rose, and he hails from Embro, County of Oxford.

—The Fishery Inspector seized a load of salmon trout, which were exhibited for sale on the Belleville market yesterday morning. They were caught near Brighton.

—Wm. Cassidy, ex-Treasurer of West Garafraxa, after some months, imprisonment in Guelph gaol on a charge of embezzling county funds, was on Saturday released, on bail being given to the extent of $14,000.

—It is denied that the disease lately reported as prevailing in London township is black tongue. The disorder which proved so fatal in the family of Mr. Richard Weatherally was a malignant form of diphtheria.

—Affairs in Ireland are assuming a very serious aspect. The Government has sent an agent to investigate the condition of the Irish people. Few of the Irish landlords can get any rent paid at all, and matters are evidently approaching a crisis.

—Trouble between the pork packers of Chicago and their hands, numbering 8,000, has broken out again, and it is likely to prove serious. The Workingmen's Union recently demanded an advance of 25 cents a day for labor in packing houses which has been refused.

—By the collision of the Octavia and Champion off the Delaware coast on Saturday morning the latter was so badly cut that she sank in less than five minutes. It is believed that about twenty-five lives were lost. The Captains tell very different tales of the collision.

—Many English farmers are turning their eyes towards New Zealand as a future home and field for their energies. Two farmers from Lincolnshire have just been sent out to that colony to make a personal examination and report upon it as a field for emigration.

—The cashier and a director of Molson's Bank are to visit Ingersoll in a few days with a power to appoint a new cashier of the branch at Ingersoll. It is, of course, unknown to whom the position will be assigned, but the present Mayor of Ingersoll is among the applicants.

—England is crying out about the great depression which is taking its departure so tardily. Her agriculturists are abroad looking for new homes. Their farms, they say, they cannot work profitably now because of American competition, unless indeed the landlords are willing to reduce rents greatly.

—John Russell Young says that General Grant's expenses abroad were heavy, although he is worth only $150,000, so tied up that it yields him but a meagre income. Mr. Young is also credited with the surprising observation that Grant is constantly contributing to the aid of his relatives, and take pleasure in doing so.

—At the municipal election throughout England Saturday, wherever political considerations were involved the Liberals were mostly triumphant. This is a straw that all parties will make a note of. The Parliamentary elections will probably not be held till next year, as the Beaconsfield Government will postpone the day of doom as long as possible; but when these elections do occur look out for a Liberal tidal wave.

—The Minister of Justice has appointed Mr. H. St. Ormond, the agent at Montreal of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, a commissioner to enquire into the operation of the Dominion Police Force, and he has been here for several days past prosecuting the investigation. It is understood that the Government contemplate a general reconstruction of the whole system.

—Mr. A. D. Holmes, took a benefit at London on Friday night. Between the acts Mr. Edward Haalan, the champion sculler appeared on the stage, and had a rousing reception. He made a speech saying that he expected to meet Mr. Courtney this fall in a fair race. He said there was not money enough in Canada to buy him. He intended to go to England to row again for the Sportsmen Cup, and also to Australia to row Trickett for the world's championship, after which he would retire from the field as a sculler.

—James E. Jones, a young man who recently started business as a grocer in St. Catherines, who arrested on Thursday evening at the Welland Railway station on a warrant issued at the instance of John May & Co., charging him with having obtained groceries, etc., from the firm under false pretences to the value of $482. The prisoner was arraigned and then remanded until Monday. Jones has only been in business about three weeks.

(a). Sale of North Shore Railway to the Federal Government.
(b). To pay us the just claims of the Province on the Dominion.
(c). To liquidate the Municipal Loan Fund.
(d). Reduction of expenses.
II. Development of our resources.
(a). Encouragement of manufacture of beet sugar.
(b). Encouragement of phosphate mining.
(d). Revision of general mining laws.
(e). Attention to education.

Masonic.

Bro. Robert Ramsay, of Orillia, has been appointed by the Imperial Grand Council of the Ancient Arabic Order of the mystic shrine for the United States of America, "Deputy-at-large for the Dominion" with power to open and establish Temples in Canada and confer the degree upon those possessing the necessary pre-requisite qualifications, which are the possession of either the Templar Grade or the thirty-second degree of the Ancient and Accepted Rite. The Order was originally Mahomedan in its character and in ritual abounds in Moslem tradition, but on this continent it is Christian and in the United States is perhaps as exclusive as the A. and A. Rite. The Order in spreading very rapidly in the neighboring Republic, and is very generally appreciated by those who have received it.

Our North-west Indians.

A SITUATION OF EXTREME GRAVITY—THE PLAINS INDIANS DESTITUTE—A LARGE BODY OF SIOUX COMING INTO FRENCH ALBERT DISTRICT.

On Saturday Col. Smith, Deputy adjutant-General, returned from his trip to the Saskatchewan, where he has been organizing new militia companies. He is accompanied by Mr. C. Acton Burrows, Military Secretary, and Rev. D. M. Gordon, of Ottawa. Mr. Burrows says the Indians' situation is one of extreme gravity. Many rumours of the appearance of buffalo have been spread, but it appears certain that very few have come in, and the greatest number authoritatively spoken of is seven small bands. The result is that the Plain Indians are already dreadfully destitute. The Department has rendered considerable help, and has probably made arrangements for further supplies, but it seems certain that great suffering will be experienced during the coming winter, and it is more than probable that, goaded by hunger, provisions may be forcibly taken and complications ensue. A new element of danger is introduced by the immigration to the Prince Albert district of a large body of Sioux. A few have been there for the past two or three years, and have been peaceful, lawabiding, and useful to farmers: but the new element is of a different nature, being principally composed of Agallallahs, while some are from Sitting Bull's camp. Nearly 1,000 have already arrived, and a still larger number is reported to be on the way. They are thoroughly well supplied with ammunition. They have already had several begging dances, and are pursuing the American system of itinerant begging from house to house. The settlers are naturally somewhat alarmed, and at a public meeting which was held at Prince Alberta a strong desire for still further protection was expressed. This account of the situation contradicts previous reports of Mounted Police officers

Canada Temperance Act.

JUDGE PALMER ON ITS CONSTITUTIONALITY.

St John, N. B, October 31.—When the Supreme Court of New Brunswick gave its opinion respecting the constitutionality of the Canada Temperance Act at Fredericton two days ago, holding that it was unconstitutional, Judge Palmer dissented, he prepared an opinion and read it yesterday. It occupies nearly four columns in the Telegraph. Judge Palmer holds that the Dominion Parliament had power to pass the Act, but, although coming to this conclusion, he says that he desires to claim no right to express any opinion on the policy of the Act. In concluding his remarks, he says: "Whether the enforcement of such a law will benefit or injure the community is a question with which sitting here as a judge I have nothing whatever to do. That question must, in my opinion, be decided by the persons who control the legislature of the country. I do not deny that I have an opinion on the question, and as a citizen of Canada will by any influence I possess endeavor to influence legislation in that direction, which I think will be for the benefit of the Dominion in that regard; but after the Supreme will of the State has decided the question, and passed the Canada Temperance Act, and thereby declared that it is not legal to sell intoxicating drinks for a beverage, and made it an offence against the State to do so I think it my duty as far as the matter may properly come before me to compel by all legal means all persons from doing so."

—In the early hours of Friday evening last, a man wearing a mask and carrying a parcel in his hands, knocked at the door of a house in Moncton, N.B. The lady of the house, upon answering the summons, was somewhat affrighted to see a masked man at the door; but he coolly walked in, placed his parcel on the table, with the remark "that a man had sent him with the present of a Hallowe'en goose for her," and then left in a hurry. She then opened the parcel and to her astonishment she saw, instead of a nice fat goose, the smiling features of a healthy-looking infant, apparently about six weeks old. No one has appeared yet to claim the baby.

The most perilous hour of a person's life is when he is tempted to despond. No one should despond—not even the young man who is enfeebled, both mentally and physically, by habits of early indiscretion, as Victoria Bucbu and Uva Ursi will cure the most distressing cases of kidney disease, etc. For sale by all dealers, at $1 per bottle. 45-26

A Household Necessity.

Ragganff's Yellow Oil is the best remedy in the world for the following complaints:—Cramp in the limbs and stomach, pain in the side, rheumatism in all its forms, Colds, Neuralgia, Fresh Wounds, Spinal Complaints, Sprains and Bruises. Don't fail to procure it. To spinal injuries it has been known for nowwigs pain in all cases. For internal and external use. Sold by all dealers. 50-26

Murder Will Out.

A few years ago "Anpeil Flower" was discovered to be a certain cure for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint. A few thin Dyspeptics who knew its value found how easily and quickly they had been cured by its use. The great merits of Gunn's Anpeil Flower became bandied through the country by one sufferer and another, still without advertising, to such an extent that Druggists in every town in Canada and the United States are calling for it. No person suffering from Sour Stomach, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Palpitation of the Heart, Indigestion, Dizziness, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Biliousness, or any of the troubles these drives inflicted child, go to your Druggist and get a bottle for 75 cents and try it. Sample bottles 10 cents.

Poultry Association.—At the annual meeting of the Midland Poultry Association held on Thursday evening last the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—Robert Hall, President; John Taylor, Vice-President; Jas. Saulter, Secretary-Treasurer. Another meeting to make arrangements for the holding of the annual show will be held on Tuesday evening next, in the room adjoining the Council Chamber.

Chatsa Grocerias.—Mr. Charles Butler announces the receipt in of an excellent stock of choice family groceries, crockery and glassware. He is offering 14 lbs. of sugar for one dollar and ten lbs. from thirty-five cents a pound up, and all other goods proportionately cheap. Farmers and others laying in their fall and winter supplies, and buying in quantities, will receive liberal reductions. Store on Hunter street, a few doors east of George street.

Reception.—The Grillia club this year plays with the Peterborough club for the Caledonian medal. Pending this event the Peterboroughs have invited Grillia to participate in a benefit at the former place, in which it is expected two rinks each of ten clubs will take part. Keene, Lindsay, Cobourg, Port Hope, Bowmanville, Newcastle, and Whitby having already signified their intention of joining in. A $30 cup will be offered for competition in the match.

Announcement Extraordinary.—Miss E. Delaney begs to announce the purchase for cash at a large reduction off manufacturer's price of a wholesale stock of Wool Fringes, Beaded Fringes, Gimps, Braids, Mantle Frogs and Ornaments, Plain and Colored Galloons, Dressmaker's Trimmings, which she will offer to her customers at prices that will defy competition in Canada. Dressmakers will do well to inspect these goods. George Street, Peterborough. 41-26tf

New Rooms for Mechanics' Institute.—We believe that the Directors of the Mechanics' Institute have accepted an offer from Mr. Nicholls for the rooms in the building next to Messrs. Peacock & Roger's office, and that arrangements are now being made for the removal. The new premises, being much larger and commodious than those at present occupied, will enable the Directors to make better provisions for the successful management of the Institute.

Church Parade.—On Sunday last No. 1 and No. 3 Companies, 57th Batt., headed by the Fire Brigade Band, in military uniform, marched from the Drill Shed to St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, where the Rev. W. C. Bradshaw, Incumbent, preached an appropriate sermon. After service they reformed and marched to the Peterborough Drill Shed, where they were dismissed. On the march to and from the church the Band played several selections of sacred music.

Grain, Beef and Rotten.—We have received a copy of the advance report of Mr. Brown, Professor of Agriculture and Farm Superintendent at the Agricultural College, in which he deals at length with some scientific and practical facts in relation to the production of grain, beef, and mutton at the Experimental farm in connection with the College. The experiments are detailed at length, and their results are given in full, and these, together with the observations of Mr. Brown are of the greatest value to all classes of farmers.

More Steel Rails.—We understand Mr. Cox, the energetic President of the Midland Railway, has purchased another large quantity of steel rails—sufficient to renew the track from Millbrook to Beaverton. They will be put down early in the spring. The best of the old rails have been put down where most needed, and the whole track with more ballast, more ties, and good rails will be in first-class condition for the summer time-table next year. Then there will be fast trains and more of them. The community will heartily wish Mr. Cox all success in his enterprise.—Post.

Last Week's Snow Storm.—The severity of last week's snow fall has caused a hunting up of old diaries by some of the oldest inhabitants," and Hon. Billa Flint informs the Belleville Intelligencer that on the 28th of October, 1844 snow fell in that locality to the depth of two feet; in the same year and on the same date snow fell in the north of Brockville to a depth of four feet. Since the year above mentioned many severe winter storms have occurred, but such an early period of the winter is to seldom that a storm of such severity as this has made its appearance.

Friendship Temple.—The following are the names of those elected and installed as officers of Friendship Temple, No. 147, I.O.G.T., for the current quarter:—

Bro. Wm. H. White	W.C.T.
Sister M. A. Nethercott	W.V.T.
" M. A. Duncan	Chap.
" L. Fanning	Secretary
Bro. Robt. J. Hamilton	F.S.
" D. Pentland	Treas.
" W. H. Mitchell	Marshal
Sister Theresa Rieber	Dep. Marshal
" Jane Buller	Inside Guard
Bro. Cole Barrett	Outside Guard
Sister Alice Lamsden	R.H.S.
" Elizabeth Greystock	L.H.S.
" Heather	Organist
Bro. R. J. Kelso	P.W.C.T.

Volunteer Inspection.—On Tuesday afternoon last, Nos. 1, 2 and 3 companies of the 57th Batt., were inspected by Col. VonStrahenzie, Inspector of the District, and Col. Worsley, Armoury Inspector. Owing to the unfavorable absence of the weather, the inspection took place in the drill-shed. At its conclusion the Inspector addressed the troops commending them on their appearance and bearing, and the efficiency with which they acquitted themselves in their drill, considering they were nearly all new recruits. He suggested they should meet one night each week during the winter, and thought the Government would bear the expense of lighting the drill-shed. Were they to do this, by next annual drill they would be as fine a Battalion as there was in the District. Before dismissal the companies bugled by the Band marched through the streets, and elicited favorable comment.

Complimentary Supper.—On Monday evening Mr. William Baillie, late of the EXAMINER office, was entertained by the Peterborough Lacrosse Club to a complimentary supper at the Choate House. Mr. B., who was one of the principal promoters of the club, was handsomely banqueted by his friends. The spread, prepared by Mr Choate on very short notice, was excellent in every respect, and the table appointments presented a very neat appearance. Toasts, songs and sentiments followed for a couple of hours after the cloth had been removed. The gathering was pleasant in every respect, and Mr. B. must feel gratified at this happy parting with his many friends. They all join in wishing him prosperity, and his lady friends extend to him a cordial good-bye, as well as those with whom he transacted his duties during his sojourn in Peterborough. The chair and vice-chair were occupied by Mr. A. D. Smith-wake and Mr. T. Munro, respectively, President and Vice-President of the Club.

Mr. Heathfield's Concert.—Mr. Heathfield's annual concert was given in Bradburn's Opera House on Friday evening. The audience was very small, but considering the management, was too large. Those who took part in the performance acquitted themselves with credit. The playing of the Misses Gibson was deservedly praised. Mr. Davis was in good voice, and was, as usual, well received. Messrs. A. Elliott and T. Rush sang well, and were warmly applauded. Miss Rosbo sang very nicely, and for her first appearance in Peterborough was well received. Some on the programme did not put in an appearance. This is attributed to the non-appearance of Mr. Heathfield, caused, it was generally said, by his being unable to refrain from his accustomed weakness for even one evening. When Mr. H. brings talent from a distance, and also receives the aid of local talent, common decency expects that he be in a position to treat those ladies and gentlemen, and the audience as well, with more courtesy than he was able to on Friday. In the interests of musical endeavour we make these comments, and we respectfully indicate that any repetition of such conduct will be severely censured.

If You Want a real good Blanket, cheap (either Grey or White), go to I. Robinson & Co.'s.

Tuesday.—We have to thank Mr. H. Rush for an abundant supply of New Orleans papers. Mr. Rush is visiting at present in the South, and his many friends wish him an enjoyable time.

H. M. S. Pinafore, the crackpot attraction of the day, by McDowell's Shaughraun Wonderville Company at Opera House, Thursday, Nov. 20th. Reserved seats at Wilson & Davis' Bookstore.

The Lanky Farmer.—The "Lanky Farmer" in Dummy advertised to be sold on Saturday last, did not meet with a purchaser, the bids given being so low that the property was withdrawn.

Personal.—We were yesterday favored with a visit from Mr. R. E. Rowie, of Charlestown, P. E. I. He is looking healthy and well. The air of the maritime provinces evidently agrees with him.

Bargains in Boots.—Mr. Samuel White is offering still greater bargains than ever this week, as he is determined to turn his stock into cash as soon as possible. Now is the time to replenish your "understandings."

H. M. S. Pinafore will next another at the Opera House, Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 19th and 20th, having the honor a first-class crew, with his sisters and his cousins and his aunts. Reserved seats at Wilson & Davis' Bookstore.

Chancery Sale.—On Saturday last the Fraser property recently advertised for sale in the EXAMINER was disposed of at our Chancery Chambers. Parcel No. 1 was purchased by Mr. Geo. Hilliard for $600, and parcel No. 2 by Mr. Geo. Dunford for $600.

St. John's Church Bazaar.—A bazaar in connection with St. John's Church Sunday School will be held during the first week of February next. Parties desirous of contributing either by money or otherwise are requested to hand such contributions to Mrs. Weller, treasurer of the bazaar fund.

The Canada Life.—Mr. Duncan McLeod has been appointed sub-agent in the county of Peterborough for the Canada Life Assurance Company. From the high standing of the company and Mr. McLeod's wide acquaintance we doubt not but that much new business will be secured for the Company in this county.

The "Central" Grocery.—Mr. G. L. Mitchell is now offering for sale at very reasonable prices a choice lot of fresh groceries, provisions, ales, wines and liquors. To meet the requirements of his increasing trade Mr. Mitchell has laid in a heavier stock than ever, this fall, and having purchased in low markets is determined to give his customers the benefit.

Thanksgiving.—On Thursday last places of business throughout Canada were closed and the day in a manner generally observed by the day as one of thanksgiving for the bountiful crops garnered during the past season, and for peace and happiness within our borders vouchsafed by the Almighty. The attendance at the various churches was large, and sermons appropriate to the occasion were preached.

McDowell's Shaughraun Co'y.—This talented and popular company are announced to give performances at the Opera House on Wednesday and Thursday evenings of next week, when 'Arragh-na-pogue' and 'H. M. S. Pinafore' will be produced. The bare announcement of such will be sufficient in itself to secure crowded houses. No Canadian Manager has been more successful than Mr. McDowell in securing the continued support of the drama loving public, and we believe his third reception in Peterborough will be even more enthusiastic than either his first or second visits.

Serious Accident.—A very serious accident occurred on Sunday to a man named Crowe—a pedlar—which, it is feared, may yet prove fatal. He had attended the horse sale at Carnegie's Hotel, on Saturday last, and purchased one of Mr. Ledgate's horses. On Sunday he hitched it up with his own, and accompanied by Mr. Bryan, went for a drive to Bridgenorth. When near the village the new horse became unmanageable and started to run away. Unfortunately at this time the lines broke, and the horses dashed madly ahead. Crowe attempted to jump out of the buggy and in the fall had his leg very severely fractured. A messenger was despatched for Dr. Kincaid, who, on arriving, had proper facilities procured or the man's removal to the Stewart House, where he is now lying in a very critical state. Fears were entertained of his recovery, but at latest accounts there was a slight change for the better.

The Red Beet.—We would call the attention of our readers to the two-sheet mammoth posters, printed in colors, at this office, for our enterprising boot and shoe manufacturer—Mr. W. J. Larmour, announcing his fall and winter stock. The constantly increasing business done by Mr. Larmour is one of the strongest proofs of the benefits of printers ink. Although much of the success of his business is due to the superior stock and excellent workmanship both of which the "Red Beet" is noted for, still Mr. L. is willing to admit the benefits of liberal and judicious advertising. He believes, however, that in advertising, as in everything else "honesty is the best policy," and with this in view makes it a point to fulfil his announcements, by keeping in stock and turning out only such work as he advertises. By strict adherence to this principle the public know when they want an article in his line know that if it is advertised they can obtain it. This fall he has purchased extensively, and invites the inspection of the largest and best stock he has yet handled, which will be sold at moderate prices.

The Child Murder Case.—Constable Johnston having succeeded in finding the whereabouts of the missing witness, Maggie Leahy and inquest on the body of the infant found in the water closet of the Choate House on the morning of the 26th of October, was resumed on Wednesday evening last. On being sworn the witness deposed that during the night she had been called by the accused, Bridget Sullivan, to go for a doctor, but being tired and sleepy she had told no attention to her request, but had gone to sleep again. She knew nothing of the condition of the accused, but had a slight suspicion. She knew nothing as to how she got away from the Choate House. The Coroner then addressed the jury, summing up the evidence, and requesting them to render their verdict accordingly. After a short deliberation the following verdict was returned:—

"That Bridget Sullivan, did on the twenty-fourth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine, at Peterborough, in the county of Peterborough, feloniously and unlawfully kill and slay her infant son, against the peace of Our Lady the Queen, her Crown and dignity."

A warrant has since been issued for her arrest.

A New Kind of Cheese.—Occasionally we hear of frauds being perpetrated upon buyers of farm products, such as stones being counted in cakes of lard, fairies of butter, and even large boulders in loads of hay, but it remains for one of the cheese makers of this County to equal if not outstrip anything in this line yet heard of. On Tuesday afternoon while a car was being loaded with the cheese recently purchased at one of the fortnightly cheese markets established in town this summer, from the rattling sound in one of the boxes it was thought the cheese had become broken, on opening it, however, imagine the surprise of those present to find the box packed full of clay. Who the inventive genius is that perpetrated the fraud cannot be positively stated at present, but we understand sufficient evidence is forthcoming to ferret the matter out. It is to be hoped the measures will be taken to punish the guilty party with the utmost severity. Since writing the foregoing, we are informed it is supposed that the fraud was committed after the load had left the factory, during the night, previous to its being brought to market, but not by the owner of the team.

MERE MENTIONS.

—The market on Saturday was very large.

—The advance in rum has stiffened the backs of bakers.

—The streets presented a lively appearance on Saturday and the merchants did a good trade.

—It seems now-a-days as if the only object in sending a man to prison for life is to give some authority a chance to pardon him out.

—Many ladies look well with a man's hat on. Many ladies would also look well in men's boots and their feet would feel far more comfortable.

—Verner believes that a severe cold snap will set in abruptly toward the end of the present month and continue through a portion of December, with but little snow fall.

—The revision of the Bible, now nearly completed, has been a far more expensive work than most persons imagine. There are fifty-two members of the Committee, and these meet for five days in every three weeks. No salary is paid to any of them, but they are allowed their travelling and inn expenses. These with other items, will bring the cost of the first editing of the Revised Bible, as estimated by the University Press Company, which is responsible for it, to about $300,000, and consequently, it has been determined to sell the few copies at a high price. The new Bible will receive no "authorization" either from Parliament or Convocation. It has been discovered incidentally during the sittings of the Committee that the so-called Authorized Version never was, in fact, authorized either ecclesiastically or politically. It made its way by its own merits, and the Revised Bible expected to do the same.

The Peterborough Lacrosse Club.

The regular semi-annual meeting of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club took place at the Choate House on Friday evening, Nov. 7th, the President, Mr. A. D. Smith-wake in the chair. The business before the meeting was the reception of the auditors' report and the submission of the Secretary-Treasurer and the election of his successor.

Auditors' Report of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club, Nov. 7th, 1879:—

Your Auditors appointed at the last regular meeting to audit the books of the Secretary-Treasurer of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club for the season just ending, beg leave to report that they have carefully examined the books, papers, vouchers, &c., and have found them to be correct, as per statement annexed. We find what is usually an arduous duty to be in this case an easy one. The masterful and business-like manner in which the accounts of the club have been kept reflect the highest credit on the Secretary-Treas., and we mark the great services he has frequently rendered the club. Taking everything into account since we first "found the ball," the matches played and postponed, the great drawbacks of not having a suitable enclosed ground, and over we could control, and the many difficulties every young club experiences, in the beginning, we say, taking everything into account, we have reason to feel proud of our success at this, the close of our first season.

Before closing the report, your auditors would strongly urge and recommend the club to secure a suitable ground for the next season, and the Peterborough Club will join with them."

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Signed, S. H. HENDERSON,
H. M. HACKETT.

The above report was accepted unanimously. The Secretary-Treasurer, Wm. Baillie, stated that it was his intention to leave Peterborough on Tuesday, the 11th Nov., and handed in his resignation of the offices he held. His resignation was accepted.

A vote of thanks was unanimously tendered to Mr. Baillie for the able manner in which he had performed the duties of his offices.

R. Fortye was then chosen Secretary-Treasurer to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Mr. Baillie.

The following resolution was then presented by Mr. T. Munro, and being seconded by Mr. S. Henderson was unanimously adopted:

Resolved.—That it having been made known to the members of the Club that Mr. William Baillie, our late Secretary-Treasurer, is about leaving Peterborough, the members wish to show him their high appreciation of the services rendered to the Club, by giving a farewell supper on the eve of his departure from among them, at the Choate House, on Monday evening, November 10th.

The Club has been prosperous, as the following statement of its finances indicate: The receipts have been $98; expenditure, $63; leaving a balance in the treasury.

LAKEFIELD.

(From our own Correspondent.)

—Mosquito blinds are giving away to double windows.

—Tuesday we had a fine rain which was much needed.

—Root crops which were out during the late cold spell are now being got under cover.

—Our Reeve, John Dinwoodie, Esq., has been on a visit home for the last ten days, but has returned to Longford to repair the mill. He will more up in the spring leaving Lakefield for good.

—The "Cotton Brigade" has been reorganized, they made their first parade on the 6th inst., when Messrs. Dinwoodie, German and T. Wallace killed five rabbits in a two hours hunt. The General is rusticating at Burleigh but is expected down for the next hunt.

Opening of a New Y. M. C. A. Hall at Cobourg.

COBOURG, Nov. 5.—The new Y.M.C.A. hall, which was lately erected in this town was opened last evening by a dedicatory service. Several gentlemen were present from a distance, and a large number from the neighborhood. The chair was occupied by Mr. J. W. Bickle, President of the Association. After opening remarks from the chairman, short addresses were delivered by the Rev. H. Pedley, Rev. W. C. Beer, Rev. L. B. Hutton, Rev. J. L. Ballantyne, Rev. T. W. Jeffrey, and Rev. E. H. Dewart, of Toronto. The meeting was one of intense interest. The different addresses, though brief, were exceedingly comprehensive and interesting. Tomorrow evening addresses will be delivered by Mr. W. H. Howland, of Toronto, and others, after which the Hon. Vice-Chancellor Blake will deliver his lecture on "Success."

COUNCIL MEETING.—Council met at Town and Agricultural Hall, Warsaw, on the 1st inst. All the members present. Minutes of last meeting confirmed. An abatement of $1 20 on taxes of 1878, being the taxes on the personal property of a tenant who left the property before paying his taxes, was made to Thomas Henderson. The clerk was instructed to notify the collector to abate the statute labor tax, on the receipt of a properly certified list from each pathmaster who failed to return his list through neglect. Hamilton Davis was allowed to do a road contract to amount of $9.41, in lieu of taxes as assessed E. ½ 18, con. 9, under Richard Taylor, the clerk to notify county treasurer to abate the same when he receives the certificate from Taylor that the work is done. John Middleton was allowed to do a road contract to amount of $4.85 under George Forbes in lieu of arrears on E. ½ 26 con. 4; clerk to notify the collector to abate the same on receipt of certificate that the work is done. On motion, the bond of James Taylor, collector, and his sureties Warren Taylor and John Wesson, jr., in the sum of $30000 was accepted by council. Moved by D Wigmore, seconded by D. Dr.—that David Kelly be empowered to cause a brigge to be built over the river Otonabee between lots 5 & 6 in con. 2, and to draw not exceeding $40, from the first general road appropriation towards paying for building the same.—Carried. Orders granted. To Hugh Spence, as collector of roll of 1878, $45; Zebulon Cross, statement of arrears of taxes placed in error against his land $3.59; F. Cross, abatement of arrears of taxes placed in error against his land $3 60; A. R. Kidd, reeve, as selector of jurors, $2; W. Darling Clark, as selector of jurors $2; Samuel Spence, assessor, as selector of jurors, $2. By laws passed. One to confirm the sale of part of the fifth concession line; one to appoint the place for holding the nomination; the polling places; and deputy returning officers for municipal elections of 1880, and one to provide for the payment of money.

Council adjourned to meet at old Town Hall on 20th December next.

$30,000 Defalcation.

MR. W. DEMPSTER ARRESTED AS A DEFAULTER IN THE MOLSON'S BANK, INGERSOLL.

On Saturday morning last, Mr. Wm. Dempster, Manager of the Ingersoll Branch of the Molson's Bank, was arrested as a defaulter to the Bank.

Many rumors were circulated as to the extent of the defalcations, but so well and favorably was Mr. Dempster known, and his character for integrity and honesty so firmly established, that although it was generally believed that something was wrong, none but those who were well informed believed that the defalcation was so serious in its extent.

From what can be gathered the suspicions of the head offices in Montreal were aroused, and an Inspector of the Bank was despatched to Ingersoll to inspect the books, and it is reported that Mr. Dempster was called away to Montreal by a telegram at the same time, the parties thus crossing on the road. The Inspector was thus permitted to make the desired investigation in Mr. Dempster's absence. Another report states that the Inspector and Mr. Dempster were engaged together until midnight at the Ingersoll Bank examining the books. Be this as it may, the investigation revealed a deficit of some $30,000. The head office was immediately notified by telegraph and Mr. Dempster was immediately arrested. The news of the arrest caused great excitement in Ingersoll, where he was also much respected. An investigation was immediately instituted in order to arrive at the exact amount of the defalcation, and the result is looked forward to, especially in Ingersoll commercial circles, with the greatest anxiety. The amount of security in guarantee bonds held by the bank is $5,000, and the goods of Mr. Dempster will probably realize a good sum, so that they may not have as much as they at first expected. The loss, however, will be considerable.

District News.

A man named Andrew Bovey, residing on Francis street, Lindsay, narrowly escaped losing his life on Wednesday evening. It appears he was repairing the roof of his own house when he slipped and fell to the ground, breaking one of his arms in two places and severely injuring his head.

PAINFUL ACCIDENT.—A few days ago, while Mrs. Farquharson was standing on a chair in her own house, reaching for something, she slipped and fell heavily on the chair, breaking it and fracturing a couple of her ribs. Under Dr. Herriman's care the injured lady is recovering.—Guide.

CATTLE EXPORT.—The Port Hope Times says:—The present week has been a busy one with Mr. James Eakins, our popular and extensive cattle buyer, he having shipped two car loads of cattle and two car loads of hogs to Montreal, besides two cars of sheep and lambs to New York city.

Owing to the lowness of the water in the Port Hope harbor, it has been found necessary to remove the dredge from the old harbor, where she has been working for some time past, to the new harbor, to deepen the channel in order that loaded vessels may get out without experiencing the difficulty they have had lately.

The Guide says Mr. Quinlan, in order to mark his appreciation of the services of the Fire Brigade at the late fire, invited them in a body, to partake of an oyster supper, on Monday evening, at the St. Lawrence Hall About 40 sat down. Speeches were made, and after a pleasant couple of hours the company broke up.

MORE CONTRACTS.—In addition to the contract for 80 cars for the C. P. R., Mr Crossen of Cobourg has secured further contracts which will keep the shops going until half the winter will have gone. Two second class cars for Q M.O. & O.R. One first-class, one second-class, one mail and express car, 50 box and 50 flat cars for the Canada Central Railway.

CATTLE.—The Bobcaygeon Independent says:—Eighty head of cattle, from Peterboro', but bi for the two lumber firms of Hilliard and Ully tt, passed through on Thursday, on their way to the shanties in the north. Forty-one head of fine beef cattle were despatched from here on Monday to Mr. Gilmour's shanty in Galway. They were bought for the purpose by Mr. Jackson Reid.

The Norwood Volunteer Company commenced its annual drill on Tuesday morning, with a full complement of smart, soldierly looking young men, and perhaps is the best company in this respects ever turned out in the village. The members are attentive to drill, and will rapidly acquire a knowledge of military field manœuvres, as well as of the manual and platoon exercises. On Monday, 3 company, at any rate will be a credit in appearance and efficiency to the 57th Battalion.

WHEN YOUR HORSE IS LAME AND YOU have tried every remedy without success, and you despair of curing him, and begin to think of trading him off—before doing so, obtain a bottle of Gile's Liniment Iodide of Ammonia, and see its effects in twenty-four hours. These are the kinds of cases Dr. Giles likes; where all other remedies fail, his is the one that never disappoints. The doctor will willingly prove and demonstrate what he says, on application to him at his office, 451 6th Avenue, New York.

State Elections.

The political contest decided in the United States is the finale to a sharply conducted campaign. The returns show the result has brought surprises to all. The result in York State has been anxiously watched for, as elements were introduced that baffled the skill of the most experienced politicians to forecast the effect of. The "bolt" of Tammany and the subsequent division of the Democratic ranks, have led to the defeat of the party, and a Republican occupies the Gubernatorial chair. In other states the Republicans have gained substantial victories, and this is deemed of the utmost importance as giving an indication of victory in the coming Presidential campaign. One question is settled, and that is that Tilden is buried beyond the hope of resurrection. Butler's defeat in Massachusetts was not entirely unlooked for, but the fall of the old war horse on the political battle field is one of the surprises alluded to. A despatch from Chicago says:—"The Republicans are jubilant over their success in the local elections, and the news from all parts of the country.

The Peace River Country.

A LAND OF PROMISE.

Rev. Mr. Gordon has arrived in Winnipeg overland from British Columbia, via the Peace River country, accompanied by a party of Canadian Pacific Railway engineers, from Victoria, B. C., along the Pacific coast. He ascended the river Stuina, passed over the northern part of British Columbia by way of lakes Babcuia and Stewart, and came down Peace River through the Rocky Mountains by boat. He spent several weeks examining the Peace River country. Of the resource of that district he speaks very highly. The soil is excellent and timber abund

Be Ye Not Remember?

"Oh, that men would praise the Lord for His goodness and for His wonderful works to the children of men."—PSALM cvii. 8.

In balmy breezes wafted, in sunny rays that
With light and heat, God's goodness to mankind doth appear;
All charming hues of beauty, all buds and blossoms fair,
Yea, all creation's splendor, his goodness doth declare;
In every breath life-giving, the hand divine we find;
All things witness, within us, His wondrous works reveal;
In circling air right-temper'd, in herbs and fruit and grain,
Whereby all living creatures meet sustenance
doth gain
Such gifts of royal bounty from age to age the same
proclaim;
For dealings of His providence so manifest, but these,
We, for the better blessings of grace His Name address,
For greatness of His goodness in our Redeemer shown,
When He, by us in mercy His Father's heart made known.

In early times God wonders for His own people wrought,
And by His gracious promises them out of bondage brought;
But unless sins now in surety doth'r'nances do share,
When to defend or succour for them His Arm made bare.
Most dear the sweet remembr'ance of hours
when they did appear
With God, and He did send them supplies for every need,
"This proof of love we'll never forget," they cried, "rehearse
Rehoboth, Gerar, never to help us in night we'll ever leave."
Should any of God's children o'er doubt whether Are sent, should not past mercies be ever fresh in view,
Like Israel's pot of manna kept sacred, so should we,
The God's ground of encouragement also and trust for His;
Hath by the deep still waters, by His own hand
there led,
In green and smiling pastures, their souls with good things fed.

God heard our land's sorrowing pleading, prosperity once more
Revives all hearts, rejoicing in farmer's richer store,
And shall we fail to ponder God's doings or to praise
Him, who in loving kindness with goodness crowns our days,
Shall songs of joyous anthems alone exhaust
our love?
No words and deeds of kindness our gratitude must prove,
That blessed in serving things blessed the Lord
Will multiply our blessings as promised in His Word.
His benefits remembering 'mid varied scenes
well known,
God, mercy, will, and goodness through all our life bestow.
Life's pathway's blest measure's will brighter hopes inspire,
And stronger faith to gladder psalms wake our tuneful lyre,
Or wrestle His many mercies into a garland fair.
For Him whose name is goodness in Heaven's courts to wear.

PETERBOROUGH, NOV'R. 13, 1879.

MARION'S HERO.

BY ALLIE B. GATES.

'There, I'm ready,' said Marion Vernor, giving a final pull to the wrist of her long glove.

Beneath the simple words sounded a perceptible thrill of expectancy; and the rather languid young lady reclining up from a page of The Shadow of Hampton Mead, to meet the glance of a pair of brown eyes shining out from under the visor of a jaunty little hat.

'Why, Marion, child,' cried the languid young lady, surprised for the moment into quickness of speech, 'what a radiant face! One would imagine that you were going to Paris, instead of poking off to that out-of-the-world old Yarmouth. What do you expect to find there, anyway?'

'Oh, I don't know. Aunt Rachel, of course. Perhaps a hero, and my fortune besides,' lightly answered Marion.

'Among the country bumpkins,' retorted the afore-mentioned young lady, with a supercilious curl of her thin lips. 'Now, for mercy's sake don't make a fool of yourself, Marion,' she continued with unwonted energy. 'Remember that you are a Vernor.'

'I'll at least remember that I am a woman, my aristocratic sister,' gayly responded Marion. 'But here comes the carriage! Good-by, dear,' and a tender kiss was left on Miss Flora Vernor's white cheek and a caressing touch on her blonde hair in patent crimpers by the fitting Marion, who with a bound settled herself on the carriage cushions, and so cut her face in the way of her pilgrimage.

To the end of this modern pilgrimage of four hours' duration, through which she was guided in turn by the hackman, the railway conductor and the stage driver, let us follow her—happy Marion whose life counted not up a score of years, and to whom the future promised all the beautiful and blessed things.

At precisely three hours and fifty-five minutes from the time of the departure from home, note escapast—save for the presence of him who handled the ribbons—of a clumsy vehicle which bore upon its side the dignified inscription, 'Yarmouth Stage,' Marion began the ascent of a long and winding hill. Upon its summit lay her Mecca—a church, a schoolhouse, a store, with a dozen dwellings clustering around them.

'It's old-maid Gaynor's you want to be dropped to?' called out her companion over his shoulder. 'Well, here ye be, then. Twenty-five cents.'

'Land sakes, little Marion, is that you?' cried a woman's voice from the door of the trim box of a house before which Marion was dismounting. 'Yes, little Marion?' still came the question, as Aunt Rachael Gaynor herself, glasses pushed up over her forehead, cap streamers flying, with blue-checked apron full of patchwork gathered hastily in her hand, hurried down the walk, 'Bless me, yes, my sister Mary's youngest child, as true as preachin'; all grown up, an' pretty as a pink too. Cy Peters, take her trunk into the entry forthwithly.

'Now, little [Marion,' went on the voluble old lady, again addressing her niece, as she conducted her within doors, 'take off your jockey and set down in that rockin' chair an' let me look at you. It's four years sence I've seen you, an' then you was fifteen an' wore short dresses. Yes,' after a moment's critical survey, 'you're a Gaynor through an' through—the perfect image of your ma at your age; an' I should think she'd be thankful to have one child look an' act like her. Grace an' Flora is clear Vernors—spare an' pale, high an' mighty. Have you got a beau?' abruptly, following an instant's pause.

'O, no ma'am,' promptly answered Marion; though a quick dash of color tinged the fair face to a brighter hue, and from before the brown eyes Aunt Rachel's cozy sitting room faded away, showing under the summer sunshine a stretch of sandy beach whereon the foam-capped billows rolled and broke, while Aunt Rachel, standing there, was by some swift miracle transformed into an Adonis in a straw hat and light plaid suits, who carried her sunshade and paid her pretty compliments.

'No matter. There's time enough for that yet. You set right still now, little Marion, and I'll get on the supper in a jiffy,' she heard Aunt Rachael say, as one hears words spoken afar, then leaning back in the chintz-covered cozy-chair she gave herself up to sweet reminiscence of the weeks just past and Graeme of Frederic Lenhart. The summer was over and gone. The lotos-eating days at the sea-shore were ended. But was everything over and ended, she wondered. Would Prince Frederic—for so she named her handsome cavalier—fulfil? 'Better stay at home, Marion, and bag your game,' was Flora's practical advice when Marion first made known her purpose to visit Aunt Rachel. She smiled at thought of it, and then fell to speculating on the strange fancy that, with each slight excuse, had spurred her on to Yarmouth.

'Come, little Marion,' called Aunt Rachel, and the maiden's reverie was displaced by the bright [illegible] frame, or thereupon seated [illegible] the quaint little tea-table with [illegible] delicate viands.

'Do eat [illegible] see my [illegible] Aunt Rachel, as they at [illegible] supper. 'Five different varieties [illegible] —a character [illegible] mankind so rarely [illegible] and Marion, starting, beheld passing by a stalwart youth whom borne sign of knighthood, a shouldered hoe, proclaimed his order to be of The Soil.

'Tom Harding,' continued Aunt Rachael, come over here an' see my niece, Marion Vernor. She's all the way from New York to-day. Come along, Tom.'

Tom then edged, effusively, with a half-deprecatory glance at his thick boots and jean apparel, crossed the road to Miss Gaynor's gate, and with a slight flush of embarrassment on his bronzed face, somewhat awkwardly lifted his hat to the pretty girl among the posies—he called the sweetest flower of all. During his brief terry Aunt Rachel completely monopolized the conversation, touching on such topics as the weather, the potatoe rot and Deacon Crowfoot's fitsun.

'Tom's worth his weight in gold,' she overshortly declared, as the young man walked away.

'High-priced, then,' laughed Marion.

'But he is,' reiterated Aunt Rachel, leading the way into the house. 'Take a chair an' let me tell you. You needn't look such a fuller Tom, I'll be bound to say. If he was my own he couldn't be kinder to me than he is. He lives right down there under the hill—Healy you noticed the house when you come up; 'tain't much for looks, for the old man won't [illegible] a red [illegible] anything. He [illegible] a hayfield [illegible] where [illegible] ain't been able to do a day's work since. Tom was co'lasting to enter college that fall, to fit himself for some high station, an' 'twas a dreadful disappointment to him to give it up. His mother's sick, or thinks she is, all the time—though it's my opinion two-thirds of her ailments are hypo and nervousness—an' she's touchy's a nettin' hen. None of the other boys'll stay there, an' the old folks won't go anywhere else; so there th'. Tom's just tired; but la; you'd never know from him that he had anything to stand under. He's so cheerful; and he's up in the books, too, college or no college. Somehow he's managed that.'

Do the following afternoon and evening occurred a gathering of the Yarmouth sewing society, and to this mild entertainment Marion accompanied her aunt. After the lighting of the lamps, her brown head bent low over the finishing stitches of a basket-bouquet block, the young lady was accosted with a pleasant 'Good evening, Miss Vernor,' and looking up, met her newly-formed acquaintance, Mr. Tom Harding, before her. His frank gray eyes gave warmer greeting than the commonplace words that his lips uttered. He was, moreover, more at ease than previously, possibly because of presentable attire, the consciousness of which oft does no better mend than vast assurance of innate gentlemanliness or indyhood. He seated himself beside her, and then, till arrested by a motion of the big sun-browned hands, Marion forgot that the man who talked so well of tools and plows, men and life, was 'only a farmer.' Recollecting it she became straightway filled with astonishment which invariably takes hold of city people—even the best and most reasonable of them—on finding that any good has come out of Nazareth—Nazareth, their Nazareth, being all that portion of the world not counted by blocks or laid with pavements.

'I'd no idea that your societies were so nice,' she remarked to Aunt Rachel, on their homeward way.

Seven days later Marion, watching from Aunt Rachel's kitchen window the cornfield' which Tom Harding was slowly turning into a wigwam village, along whose streets a company of golden-headed pumpkins strayed, was handed a letter. Prince Frederic's elegant scrawl superscribed the missive, and, under the seal lay a declaration of his love. Why had she run away, he asked; and might he follow her to tell more than he could write, and get his answer from her lips? A thought of how ill that luxuriously accustomed person would adapt himself to Aunt Rachel's rag-carpets and chintz furnishings, and the unconcealed contempt with which he would regard Tom Harding's lowly employments (though why should she care for this?) decided the matter at once. A prim little note was accordingly written, waiving the question till she should return, and he could see her in her own house. 'Of course I shall accept,' she said to herself as she folded the delicate sheet wherein her present will and pleasure were made known; half-wondering, the while, that she felt so little joy at the earnest suit of her hitherto quasily-admired Prince Frederick. 'But I shall accept,' she repeated, putting away her writing materials.

Shortly after Aunt Rachel's early dinner the considerations of the morning sauts, Marion, according with a previous agreement, set out with Tom Harding, who had promised to take her to see the view from Long Hill five miles distant. Over the hills and valleys brooded the warm, hushed tenderness of September noon. The roadsides flamed with purple and scarlet and gold. Tom entered into it all with the zest of one to whom holidays were a rarity, and Jet, his shining black horse, catching something of the general gladness, curbed his handsome neck and tried his prettiest paces.

Yet when finally Tom and Marion stood upon the summit of the minature mountain, and—the haze of the earlier hours being lifted and cleared—gazed into what seemed like infinity, their light and mirthful mood gave place to one of deep and solemn emotion. He had been speaking of himself—his frustrated plans and defeated ambition. 'Nevertheless,' said he in conclusion, 'I do believe the life that knows no struggle, bears no burden, makes no prayer, fails of life's truest meaning. I would not change places with any man on God's earth.

That evening in her own room, musing on the happenings of the day, there came to Marion the queer conceit of measuring her companion of the afternoon with her would-be-lover. If called to account for the reason of this proceeding she would have laughed and answered, 'O, just for fun.'

However, she was quite alone, at liberty to divert herself as she chose, and the comparison went on after this wise:

'Prince Frederic has beauty; Tom is undeniably plain.' She hesitated an instant, recalling time when Tom's rugged countenance, illuminated by a rarely radiant smile, and the cot-looking coal behind his clear gray eyes, had worn an expression far nobler than any mere prettiness could give. But so it should stand as it was. His features were irregular, his hands and feet a shade too large, and he did not carry himself altogether gracefully.

'Prince Frederic is very accomplished. An elegant dancer, has faultless drawing-room manners—and—style,' this last with emphasis as a happy summing up of the indefinable grace and finish of a man of the world. 'Tom—well, Tom really has a great deal of natural ability, I admit,' and here into Marion's mind flashed some of the royally shaped thoughts and singing truths which she had heard fall from the [illegible] brought him conclusively proving him in possession of superior intellectual powers that had not been left to grow rusty amidst the engrossing cares of seed-time and harvest.

'Prince Frederic,' she continued, pausing to quicken pulse, 'will take it a fortune at his father's death, and receive meantime an allowance sufficient for the most expensive tastes,' and, woman-like, she plumed herself a Rule, anticipatively, on a vision of possible splendor far beyond opened up to the not distant future. 'Tom, after nobody knows how many years of delving, will fall heir to one-fifth of a worn-out, unproductive old farm, and a paltry two or three hundred dollars.

'Tom is quietly-fleeting gentleman. 'Tom is so good and kind and helpful! He'd own brotherhood with all the human race, and share a hope and a blessing with the poorest creature.'

Prince Frederic's contrasting callousness and indifference passed in unfavorably upon review before her thoughts.

'And Tom has such a grand Christian character and [illegible] too,' she continued —'a character [illegible] mankind so rarely attains [illegible] fashion [illegible] Tom Harding,' this [illegible]

PETTIT'S EYE-SALVE.

An Infallible Remedy for all Diseases of the Eye (acute or chronic), Granulation of the Lids, Ulceration of the Lachrymal Glands, Film, and Weakness of the Vision from any cause.

THE AMERICAN EYE-SALVE is presented the public with the assurance of its efficacy as a curative of the most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflamation weather induced by scrofulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diminished tone of the optic nerve, or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ. Also for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the Salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, where weakness, pain, and misery may have long threatened a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe, and effective remedy ever discovered. The materials of which it is made are pure, perfect, and costly, compounded with elaborate care and exactness such is its applicance, being used externally, and, of course, lessening the pain and danger, which necessarily attends the introduction of minerals and eye-washes. Rheumatic and Otic Chronic Sores of scrofulous origin, or resulting from whatever cause, yield to the Almighty Eye-Salve. It is used successfully for Piles. Its soothing effec is immediate, permanent cure requires but a few applications. The proprietors of "Dr. J. Perry's American Eye-Salve," while making new and improved machinery for making a more perfect box for the Eye-Salve, have changed the Trade Mark on the cover so as to correspond with the Cut on the Wrapper, Circulars, Advertisements, etc. We call attention to this, as it might otherwise be regarded as counterfeiting.

Mitchell's Hollandsea Improved India Rubber Porous Plaster.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been treated by outward application as the present It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

The principal ingredients used in making these Plasters are Gum Gilldenum—or better known as the Frankincense of the Bible—Rubber, and Burgundy Pitch which, when scientifically compounded, is full of electricity and when combined with the pure medicinal gums, is found to be one greatest healing mediums ever brought before the human race.

They are acknowledged by all who have used them to act quicker than any other Plasters they ever before tried, and that one of these Plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other Plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different; the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.

They possess all the soothing, warming, supporting and strengthening qualities of all other Plasters. Many who have been relieved of RHEUMATISM, TIC DOLOREUX, and various other pains in the KIDNEYS, BREAST or SIDE, and believe it is solely done by the electrical qualities which the Porous Plasters contain, and which is imparted to the system, thus restoring them to a healthy condition.

They are very soft and pliable, stiff very adhesive; and a sure cure for WEAK BACKS PAINS IN THE SIDE AND BREAST, and are invaluable to those who have a COLD of long standing, and often prevents CONSUMPTION. Some even tell us they believe they were entirely cured by the use of them of a long seated Consumption.

Joy Among the Children.

CUTLER'S SWEET CASTOR OIL, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 600 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administering nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having them pleasant to the taste, induced T. Cogland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and while equally safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is boozy; others call it wine—they all say they like it. One parent says—'My children drink it like water;' another—'We had to hide the bottle or they would have finished it right off;' another—'My little girl has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she hates the ordinary Castor Oil, and we never could get her to take it without a fight.' And another—'I wish you would try your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—sure to take the place of all the common oil.'

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a staple household medicine has brought fraudulent imitations into the market, that the public can protect themselves against, Cogland's (which unscrupulous parties are attempting to sell on the reputation of this article) by seeing that the name of 'Cogland's Sweet Castor Oil,' is on both wrapper and [illegible] label.

The [illegible] having purchased Messrs. [illegible] & Co.'s interest in the above preparation are now manufacturing it from the original recipe. Rosebrugh & Lyman, Toronto.

MANHOOD:

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once certain, effectual, and unfailing, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

CATARRH.

Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Cures Catarrh.

T. J. B. HARKINS, Esq., BROCKVILLE, ONT.

DEAR SIR,—It is now two years since I was "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me. I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as to test the happy effects caused to me to be "too good to be true."

I was afflicted in my head for years before I commenced to use Catarrh. In reading in your Canadian I saw my case described exactly. I purchased "Catarrh Remedy" from my druggist, and used it according to directions. In a few days I found relief. In one month I was entirely cured. My hearing, which was almost gone from long standing, was restored. I would feel thankful if you would publish this letter, that others afflicted as I was may be induced to call on their druggist and get a bottle of "Catarrh Remedy" and be cured. Yours truly, JOHN [illegible]

S. A. OLIVER,

WHOLESALE

Manufacturer of Boots & Shoes,

16 FRONT St. EAST, TORONTO.

PETERBOROUGH BRANCH, - DIXON'S BLOCK.

Goods Sold Direct to the People at Wholesale Price. The Only Business in Canada Conducted on the Same Principle. Over $80,000 worth of Boots & Shoes so Supplied Last Year.

The great loss annually sustained by selling to Dealers, first led to our establishing of Branch Stores, where we could supply direct to the people for Cash all the goods we could manufacture, thus giving to the people the goods less the dealer's profit, and saving to ourselves the annual loss. We were the more forcibly impressed into this step from the fact that cheap Eastern-made shoddy goods were being palmed off as our goods. We now sell our own goods, warrant what we sell, use no shoddy or inferior material of any kind, and can and do supply goods of the best quality 25 per cent. on than they can be bought elsewhere.

Everything Marked in Plain Figures. Only One Price.

CUSTOM DEPARTMENT.

Our arrangements are now complete in this department, and we can make to measure promptly either Ladies', Gentlemen's, or Children's Goods, in the Latest Styles, at little over half the price usually charged.

Sooner or Later.

Sooner or later the storm shall beat
Over my slumber from head to feet;
Sooner or later the wind shall rave
In the long grasses above my grave.

I shall not head them where they lie—
Nothing their sounds shall signify;
Nothing the heedlessly fret of rain;
Nothing to me the dark day's pain.

Sooner or later the sun shall shine
With tender warmth on that mound of mine;
Sooner or later in summer's air
Clover and violets blossom there.

I shall not feel in that deep-laid rest
The sheeted light fall over my breast.
Nor ever note in those hidden hours
The wind-blown breath of the tossing flowers.

Sooner or later the stubborn mould
Shall add their hush to my mute repose—
Sooner or later shall silent and shift
And heap my bed with their deadning drift.

Chill though that frozen pall shall seem,
Its touch no colder can make the dream—
That wrecks not the sacred dread
Shrouding the clay of the dead.

Sooner or later the bee shall come
And fill the noon with its golden hum;
Sooner or later on half-poised wing,
The blackbird above my grave shall sing—

Sing and chirp and whistle with glee,
Nothing his music can mean to me;
None of these beautiful things shall know
How soundly their lover sleeps below.

Sooner or later, far out in the night
The stars shall over me wing their flight;
Sooner or later the darkling dews
Catch the white spark in their silent ooze.

Never a ray shall part the gloom
That wraps me 'round in the silent tomb;
Peace shall be perfect to lip and brow
Sooner or later; oh, why not now?

—Florence McDonald, the Suicide.

DISTRICT NEWS.

Ottawa.

IN WINNIPEG.—Mr. W. H. English has been spending some three weeks in Winnipeg. His business impressions of the city and the surrounding country are most favorable.—Post.

Kinmount.

MR. MYLES'S MINE.—The news from the Snowden iron mine continues favorable. Mr. Myles is still blasting out ore and has four or five hundred tons on hand. He is still drilling with his steam drill and has found ore in several places.—Independent.

Hiawatha.

On the occasion of Mrs. and Miss Andrews leaving the mission, Hiawatha, for Canton, the Indian Band manifested their regret by presenting them with a bible and a purse of money. The address was presented by Chief Paudash. The bible bore the inscription—"Presented by the Indian Band, Hiawatha, in memory of the late Rev. Wm. Andrews to his bereaved wife and daughter. Hiawatha Nov. 4th, 1879." They had been living at Hiawatha for a number of years during the life time of the late Rev. Mr. Andrews, whose death occurred some months ago, creating a vacancy in Mission work in connection with the Methodist Church not easily filled.

Ottawa.

DETERMINED TO COLLECT TAXES.—Oshawa town council has passed a bylaw disfranchising all whose taxes are unpaid on the 14th of December next. The council has now put in operation capital machinery for the collection of the rates, and the Vindicator hopes that it will be well worked both by the present and succeeding councils. If so, arrearages of taxes will be little heard of in the town. It also instructed the collectors to at once collect arrearages of 1878. He has now no option, and must collect by distress if it cannot be done otherwise.

OUR INSTITUTES.—The annual meeting of the Norwood Mechanic's Institute was held on Tuesday evening. The new officers are, Dr. Ford, President; T. M. Grover, 1st Vice-President; Dr. Patterson, 2nd Vice-President; W. E. Roxburgh, Secretary; W. H. Stephenson, Treasurer; R. Stewart, Librarian; Jas. Calder, Auditor. Directors—J. Clark, J. B. Pearce, Thos. Burke, P. M. Grover, H. B. Houghton, S. H. Dewart, Colin Fraser, Alex. Mullen, John Finlay.

Mr. Thos. Fraser of Norwood, and Mr. D. Wigmore of Dummer, recently captured a couple of fine deer in Dummer Township.

Stratford.

A FINE HIGH SCHOOL.—Stratford has just built a new high school at a cost of $17,560. The furniture, building site and other expenses will swell the total to about $20,000. The number of pupils at present in attendance is 140, and it is proposed to promote the school to a 'collegiate institute.' It is four stories high, including basement and mansard, and is one of the finest educational edifices in Ontario. It was opened last week by Rev. Dr. Ryerson, with appropriate ceremonies. Stratford's central school and four ward schools providing for eighteen departments and about a thousand pupils, have been erected at a cost of $35,000. Stratford may well be proud of its fine educational equipment.

Belleville.

A LONG ABSENCE.—The Hastings fall assizes lasted seventeen days, the longest on record in the county.

IRON MINING.—A gentleman interested in the iron mines of North Hastings, says that the output at present of the two mines near Madoc is about one thousand tons of ore each working day. This would mean that the money left in Madoc for labor and raw material amounts to $400 a day.

TORONTO & OTTAWA RAILWAY.—The Belleville Intelligencer says the promoters of this enterprise are prosecuting their financial campaign with vigor. The Elzevir council will submit a by-law for $25,000 on the 28th inst.; the village of Madoc one for $5,000 on the same date; and the united townships of Marmora and Lake one for $10,000 also on the 28th.

Lindsay.

In the Post's report of the East Victoria Teacher's Convention held at Lindsay, we find the following:

"Mr. J. O. Brown, P. S. Inspector of Peterborough, then read an excellent and vigorous paper on "Physical Education," in which he recommended improvements in dealing with the youth of our schools. The interest of the meeting was well sustained for over two and a half hours. Mr. J. Braden of Peterborough took a class in fourth book literature, the selection being "The Prairies," by W. C. Bryant, p. 49. His plan of teaching is thorough and exhaustive, and at the same time highly attractive.

The Frenchmen reported in the Post last week as being lost in the woods north of Minden have not turned up and it is fully believed that they are dead. They were in the employ of Green & Kin, lumbering in Shelbourne township.

Mr. Hochfeld of Peterborough, who was the accompanist, in the second part of the Masonic concert, delighted the audience with instrumental selections, of which the "Last Rose of Summer" and the "Marseillaise" were exquisitely played. Miss Roach of Peterborough concributed a pretty song in response to an encore, which placed her in favor with the audience. The concert closed with the national anthem.—Post.

Bethesda.

OUR SCHOOLS.—Mr. Tatton has been appointed teacher of the Rokeby school at a salary of $300, and Miss McClelland a teacher in the village school at $200, both with power to terminate their engagement at five months notice.

The Bridge.—The "Bone" work of the bridge is nearing completion. The weather during the week has been unfavorable, but the contract will be completed by the specified time, the 15th.

REMOVAL.—Mr. McCaw, who for the last few years has so skillfully operated on the watches in this neighborhood, is about removing to Millbrook. The village will loose in Mr. McCaw a clever workman and a genial citizen. We wish him success.

NAVIGATION.—The Maple Leaf's usefulness is nearly gone. On Tuesday morning she was stopped in consequence of Gunnen's narrows being frozen over, in some parts nearly an inch thick. The ice came well out into the lake.

THE HORSE CASE.—The young fellow from Millbrook, who stole the horse from Mr. Beckett, of Galway, was brought before the Magistrate, G. Bick, Esq., and was committed for trial for the Assizes.

BURGLARY.—Sometime during Saturday night or Sunday morning, the boot and shoe store of Mr. S. Murray was burgled. The burglars obtained entrance by drilling with an auger around the lock on the back door. Eighteen holes were bored. A number of pair of boots and shoes, and a small sum of money, was carried away as plunder.

Port Hope.

Mrs. Grimmisce, of Welcome, was found dead in bed this morning, resulting from an attack of apoplexy. This old lady's kind face will be sadly missed in this section, as she had resided at the Guide-board for a great many years.

Mrs. Goodwaite was awarded the prize for being the most handsome lady at Boco's entertainment last evening.—News.

The Midland Land Company have been very successful lately in the disposal of town plots. This, no doubt, is solely through the extension of the railway to Midland. Mr. Stanley Peterson and Mr. George Ward are the Port Hope agents for the sale of land, with Mr. Henry A. Ward being the secretary.

As the G. T. R. express, due in Toronto at 11.17 Thursday night, was drawing out of Dufins' Creek station, it met with an accident which slightly damaged a couple of pullman cars, and delayed the train for half an hour. The worst damaged coach was one of the Midland R. R. through cars. The train was on the main line, the rear part covering a switch, on which was a freight train, going in an opposite direction. Before all the coaches could get clear of the switch, the engine of the freight train moved off in an easterly direction, the "cowcatcher", coming in contact with the sides of the passenger coaches tearing away a few boards and lifting the floor of the cars. The inmates of the coaches were considerably alarmed, but their fears were soon set at rest.

A very sad accident occurred in Port Hope last evening. Mr. Jesse Wilson is in the habit of splitting wood with the aid of his little daughter, aged 6 years, to place the sticks in position. She places them on the block and after her father splits them removes them again. As usual she was doing this last evening, but one time she was too quick and went to remove a stick she thought split when the axe came down upon the back of her head and cutting through the scalp fractured her skull. If she survives for three or four days there will be reason to hope that she will eventually get well.—Times.

The proprietor of the Times has placed in his office a new five horse-power steam engine, to supply the motive power of the establishment.

St. Andrew's Society.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Peterboro' St. Andrew's Society was held on Wednesday evening last. Mr. Chas. Cameron, First Vice-President occupied the chair, in the absence of the President. James Miller, Esq. The attendance was not large although considerable interest was taken in the meeting. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. An apology was read from the President, regretting his inability to be present owing to ill health.

TREASURER'S STATEMENT.

Mr. WM. CUMMING, Treasurer, submitted the annual Financial Statement of the Society, which showed the funds to be still in a prosperous condition. He announced that a balance of $163.40 remained to the credit of the Society in the Bank of Commerce to be carried forward to next year.

On motion the Treasurer's statement was received and accepted.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The following officers were then unanimously elected for the ensuing year:—

PRESIDENT.—James Miller, Esq., (re-elected).

FIRST VICE PRESIDENT.—Thomas Telford, Ennismore.

SECOND VICE-PRESIDENT.—Jas. Hope, (re-elected.)

THIRD VICE-PRESIDENT.—John Patterson.

TREASURER.—William Cumming, (re-elected).

SECRETARY.—W. Measies, (re-elected).

PHYSICIAN.—Dr. Fraser.

EXECUTIVE AND CHARITABLE COMMITTEE.—For the town of Peterborough—Messrs. Adam Turner, John Stewart, Andrew Hewie, John Armour, Charles Cameron and Wm. Fairweather. For Smith—George Harvey and Wm. Telford. For Dummer—David Rose. For Otonabee—Robert Hope and James Drummond.

ANNUAL CELEBRATION.

On motion it was decided to celebrate St. Andrew's day by a dinner.

A committee consisting of the President, and Mr. W. Cumming, and John Armour were appointed to make the necessary preparations for the annual celebration.

Mr. Chas. Cameron was appointed to wait upon the Rev. Alex. Bell, for the purpose of inviting him to preach the annual sermon.

A unanimous vote of thanks was then tendered to the President for his painstaking efforts on behalf of the Society during the past year.

The meeting then adjourned.

Agitation in Ireland.

THREATENED ATTACK OF ANTI-RENTERS ON THE BARRACKS OF THE 67TH REGIMENT.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—A Dublin despatch states that the Colonel commanding the sixty-seventh regiment, stationed at Birr, has been anonymously notified that the barracks were to be attacked by a large force of anti-renters, and that an attempt would be made to explode the magazine. Much excitement was produced among the garrison by this startling intelligence, and immediate precautions were taken to guard against surprise, and reinforcements were telegraphed for. The danger, if there really is any, is supposed to proceed from some organized bands of malcontents who have recently been engaged in burning the barns of such farmers as refused to co-operate in the Land Leaguers agitation against the law. The Government officers of the district, however, deny all knowledge of the matter, and affirm that they have no sympathy with violent measures. Birr, or Parsonstown, is a roadside town in the parish of the same name in the county of Leinster, and is about twenty-one miles west of Dublin. It is a well built town with a castle belonging to the Earl of Rosse, under whose proprietorship the workmen have been employed in the manufacture of fine woollen goods. Birr has a population of about six thousand.

Killed on the Road.

A Mysterious Affair.

THE SAD FATE OF FRANCIS TAGGART, A PATENT MEDICINE DEALER.

As Mr. George Howden, butcher, was driving into town on the Manvers road on Tuesday afternoon between three and four o'clock, after passing Shannon's Hill he saw a span of small dark bay mules attached to an old-fashioned buggy standing across the road and a man in the act of picking himself out of the mud and getting into the buggy. There was a man lying dead on the roadside with a cushion across him within three feet of the waggon tracks, and two men whose names are said to be Wm. Davies and one Sproule were standing over it. Davies and Sproule had arrived at the scene only a minute or two before Howden. The driver of the mules commenced to drive off in the opposite direction from Lindsay, when either Davies or Sproule called out to him "hold on and take your partner along," but the man made no answer, and drove on, passing Mr. Howden on the road. Before the mules had gone very far, Mr. Howden who had given his rig in charge of the other men, ran after them, and turned them around on the road. One of the spectators went to the man lying on the road to lift him up, and found that he was dead. Mr. Howden then informed the driver of the mules that his partner was dead, but the man, who was very much intoxicated, replied, "he is only asleep." This was the only answer that could be got from the driver. There was no appearance on the road of a buggy having capsized or any conflict having taken place. Mr. Howden drove to Lindsay, and at the request of the others brought the man with the mules with him as far as Mr. George McHughs, were some accident occurred to the whiffletrees of the mule waggon, and Mr. Howden, who was in a hurry, had to drive off and leave him there. On reaching Lindsay about dark, Mr. Howden informed chief constable Smart of what had occurred, but strange to relate, no action was taken that night. The body of the unfortunate man, who, it seems, was Francis Taggart, a vandor of a patent medicine made by himself, and who resided in Peterborough, was allowed to lie in the road within a couple of feet of the wheels of passing waggons, from about four o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, until nearly ten o'clock on Wednesday, when it was removed to the market building by order of Mr. Coroner Poole. The people in the vicinity gathered round the body Tuesday night in large numbers, but not one of them seems to have been humane enough to remove it to some place of shelter where it would not be exposed to the rough weather. Their excuse was that they did not wish to be mixed up in the affair.

A jury was empanelled and after hearing the evidence returned the following verdict that "deceased came to his death from suffocation, but in what particular manner they are unable to state. They also found that the excessive use of liquor was one of the immediate causes of Taggart's death."

The jury were guided by the medical testimony as the result of the post mortem examination, on finding suffocation among the causes of death.

The wife of the deceased and a son and daughter came to town yesterday and had the body removed to Peterboro for interment. They were respectable looking people and exhibited much sorrow.—Lindsay Post.

The body was interred in the Methodist Cemetery here on Friday last.

Grant at Chicago.

THE GENERAL ON HIS COUNTRY'S PLACE AMONG NATIONS.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—At the Grant banquet last night, 601 covers were laid. To the first toast, "First our country, her place among nations," the General responded. He said:

"We are beginning to be regarded a little by other Powers as we in our vanity have regarded ourselves. As to the place we have among nations, I think we have all the elements that go to make up a great nationality. We have strength, we have individual self-controlling independence, and we have to a greater degree than almost any other nation, the power to colonize and settle up new countries and develop them. We have also very great advantages in being without neighbours to molest or make us afraid. It is true, we have northern frontiers and southern frontiers, and we get along with a very small army, and what little we have is not a standing army, because it has no time to stand. I do not know anything that I can specially add to what I have said except in the way of advice, and that is, let us be true to ourselves, avoid all bitterness and ill-feeling, either on the part of section or parties toward each other, and we need have no fear in future of maintaining the standing we have taken among nations, so far as opposition, from foreign nations goes." (Applause.)

Other toasts were responded to by Gens. Logan, Hurlburt, Schofield, Woodford, Pope, "Mark Twain," and others. At 1.30 the toasts were proceeding slowly, speeches not on the programme being made, with prospects of the banquet lasting

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, NOV'R 20, 1879.

TORONTO & OTTAWA R. R.

This railway project seems to be a live concern. The parties who have it in hand have never let go any of the bonuses voted them, and we observe with pleasure that East of Peterborough the several municipalities are alive to its importance, and are now voting bonuses all along the line from Ottawa to Peterboro' County. This is as it should be, for we cannot over estimate the importance of the line to this back country. We think it was an unfortunate thing that in the Town and County By-laws there was a condition requiring bonuses to be voted to the amount of $1,000,000 before the Town and County debentures would be available for the construction of the road. From the moment that Toronto refused to vote her bonus our people almost without distinction declared that they would rather have Peterboro' the Western terminus with a connection with the Midland than to go to Toronto. Of late since the East has evinced such a desire to aid the road, we have again observed our most thoughtful citizens expressing a desire that the road should be constructed at once from Peterboro eastward to Ottawa. Now as it is impossible to get a million dollars of bonuses between Omemee and Ottawa, it is impossible to turn a single sod in the County of Peterborough with the By law in the present shape. Would it not be well on the part of the people to endeavor to get the Company to change their plans by commencing work in this County at once without waiting for the Toronto bonus. Let Toronto go—without doubt she will wake up to the necessity of getting the connection once she sees that the Company is constructing the Eastern part of the line. Then she will be but too glad to contribute her share. But meanwhile let Peterboro' take care of herself. We believe if the Company will consent to commence the construction, the present By-laws would be revoted in a shape to enable them to do so. At any rate let an effort be made to affect this much to be desired object. Would it not be well to have a meeting called to discuss the situation. We believe if this thing is properly gone about we may have the road under construction next summer. So mote it be.

HOW MUCH.

There is considerable discussion just now about some, as yet, undefined, and undetermined losses the town is said to have suffered through the neglect of some one, or through some clerical slip. These losses extend back about six years, and are exhumed or discovered just now in time for the approaching elections, or in time to recover from the guilty sinner or sinners who caused it. It is right, it is proper, that Councillors should be economic and careful of the people's taxes, and it is reasonable too that where wrong has been perpetrated or discovered, or presumed to exist, that that wrong should be investigated. But the extraordinary fuss on the streets for two or three days, as if the half of the people's hard earned taxes had been appropriated, and the whole fuss before thorough investigation, savors a little of approaching changes or wished for changes.

Now that it is said that errors have crept into the Collector's Roll in the copying of items or otherwise, the council has acted wisely in referring the whole matter in discussion to auditors. But it savors no little of mawkishness to pass by the regular auditors to appoint men who have had very little experience in the work. We would respectfully advise that no one be executed until the real culprit be discovered, lest in the haste to be zealous innocent blood be shed. Messrs. Mills and Hogan will be found willing to do their duty, but a question will arise as to what is their duty. The accounts have been audited yearly. After the regular audit it was the duty of the then existing council to finally audit them, and to publish for public information, the result of their audit. If those councils did so, and found no errors, then it is likely that men not cognisant of the whole accounts can, six years afterwards, unravel any apparent discrepancies, or even real ones if they do occur, and if any error or errors did creep into the fluff, if that error was not intentional, but a mere slip, why should any man be accused, tried and convicted of crime so hastily. Have there not been errors in copying into the assessment rolls in the past? And who accused the Assessors of anything but carelessness? These errors too, cost the town handsome sums, probably no large a sum as all the present disgoveries put together, and yet how little was said about these errors of the Assessors. We do not wish to defend wrong-doing, but we do think that every man should have a fair trial, according to English precedent face to face with his accusers and let the guilty suffer, but during the investigation let there be no suggestions or unproved accusation. Let the Councillors all assume their fair share of the responsibilities of their office, if they failed to audit the accounts and books as they ought to have done yearly.

For our own part we don't expect that anything of a criminal nature will be unearthed, during this audit. There are also rumours about missing debentures, this should be referred to the newly appointed Auditors, and let the town have all the irregularities set right up to date.

PROTECTION FROM FIRE.

Again is the necessity of a more thorough system of protection from fire forcing itself on the attention of the people of this town. The trouble that chiefly arises in the discussion of a question of this sort is this;—it soon becomes a sensation. Necessity proved without any trouble, and accepted without denial, soon becomes desire without deliberation, leading to a rush for the first proposition in the direction of providing the want, whether it be the best or more delusion. Such has formerly been the history of agitations for protection in this town, and elsewhere. Toronto has paid very dearly for a system of water works that have proved an utter failure, judging from reports in the press of that city within the past few weeks; and it is well known that only with difficulty was a like fraud forced on Peterborough. But from former experiences of themselves and others, the people of this town may now have learned such wisdom as will prevent such a mistake on their part. Now is not a bad time to discuss such a project. There have been no large fires of late to rouse popular excitement to an undue pitch as to force them beyond a reasonable feeling on the subject. The present is a good time wherein to get the views of next year's councillors on the question, as to secure the election of such as will carry out the views of the people intelligently, effectually and unflinchingly, uninfluenced either by pressure from without or appeals to selfish interest within. For above all, a matter of this kind must be intrusted only to such men as will willingly sacrifice any advantages to themselves by clever arrangement of details, and who cannot be influenced in behalf of others, either by friendship or the more solid considerations which are said to have their effect on the places of engineers and the work of commissioners.

There can be no doubt that a thoroughly efficient system of water works is the best means whereby this town may be protected from the ravages of fire. Engines, however good, are dependent for their usefulness on a plentiful and never-failing supply of water. The obtaining of such a supply over the whole town can only be through an expenditure as would secure the end aimed at without the expense of engines. "How!" is the question. We think that by a united effort on the part of the town and Ashburnham, a plan might be developed for a thorough system of water works, sufficient for the requirements of both municipalities for many years to come. Not only for use in extinguishing fires, but also for domestic purposes, street watering and lawn irrigation. If water works are to be had,—and they must be before many years—they should be such as would meet every requirement, and be thoroughly efficient always. The cost must be a consideration secondary to efficiency and reliability; for not only must there be a drawing from an ample and suitable source, a service of pipe throughout the town; there must also be a full and sufficient system of drainage carried out in connection with the laying of water mains. The whole question is no light one to be jumped at hastily. It needs cool and careful consideration; then thorough and honest work, both preliminary and final.

THE MANUFACTURERS' MENDICANT.

The Finance Minister is making a big party splurge by "doing" the manufactories in a systematic round. The Tory papers have taken up the cue, and are lauding the tariff doctor to the skies for what they call, his diligence in the discharge of his duty. That duty in this manner they admit to be looking after the interests of manufacturers, in return, we presume, for their attention to his interests, those of his colleagues, and of his party generally, prior to and at the last Dominion elections. The first duty of a Finance Minister, according to Sir Tilley's admirers, is to that small fraction of the population engaged in manufactures, instead, as might reasonably be thought, to the whole people of the Dominion, and to the securing, with the least possible pressure upon them, of money sufficient to carry on the country's affairs, and no more. One Tory grandiloquently declares that "personal acquaintanceship "with the details of industries to be "affected by legislation is indispensible "to an administrative officer entrusted "with the framing of a tariff." But all industries in a country are affected by that country's tariff: therefore the Protectionist Finance Minister must get into his capacious head all the details of all the various industries in all parts of the Dominion. He is to become a veritable "Jack-of-all-trades," with the inexparable adjunct of course. But why does this industrial phenomenon begin with manufacturing enterprises? He and his political friends admit that Canada is, above all, an agricultural country. Why does he not then first try to give himself a "personal acquaintanceship" with the details of farming? There are other industries too, which stand before manufacturing in Canada; such as lumbering, fishing and mining. Sir Aliquis should become thoroughly acquainted, in the personal sense, with the shanties, with boats and nets, and with pick, drill and blast. Before he stops he must shoulder his shovel and go forth to dig, carry coals, cut cord-wood, run a pea-nut stand, and become personally acquainted with the details of a thousand and one industries, before he will be equal to the "proper framing of a tariff," to use the words of one of his own party friends. It is admitted, even by the chief Tory organ, that the Tilley tariff needs improvement; but its framer will not be able to properly fix it up till he has mastered all the details of all the industries affected by it. When that time comes there will be no Tilley tariff, no Tilley, no Protectionist party in Canada.

Before the Tories had the chance to impose their Protection tariff people were led to believe they had everything cut and dried, whereby they could at once bring on the promised prosperity. When they came into office the excuse for delay was that they had to get the views of different industrial classes and learn particulars of their wants; and now things are to remain in acknowledged imperfection till the chief tariff-tinker gleams personal information of every particular of everybody's business, everywhere. This is Protection; ever was; and ever will be. The absurdity of the whole case is plain. Even if the Finance Minister were foolish enough to believe in his own mission amongst the manufacturers it could not possibly result in his gaining a personal acquaintance with the details of even one line of business. No lifetime has ever been long enough for that. But manufacturers, like other men, know how to make the most of the goose they find on such a chase. He is travelling in their interests, and they will see to it that their interests are served, by acquainting him with just such details as they see fit, and the poor man, knowing no better, (small blame to him) must take what is given to him. The 'little learning' that he will thus acquire is sure to be a dangerous thing in an 'administration officer.' But whatever may be his future flounderings, he can scarcely assume a less dignified rôle than that he now figures in—that of a Dominion Minister going round among a certain part of the population and in effect asking them if he has done what they wanted of him. Truly the Tories need to shout; if only to hide their shame.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

As an evidence of the confidence inspired by Mr. Geo. A. Cox's management of the Midland railway we may mention that the first mortgage bonds have advanced from 20 to 37½ in London, Eng. This is very satisfactory.

Only a few weeks ago the city of Ottawa voted a bonus of $300,000 to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway, and yesterday South Lanark endorsed the project by an additional bonus, which was carried by 200 majority.

An agitation is springing up amongst several of our contemporaries for abolition of Division Courts, the argument being advanced that the work could be done by the County Court. Some of our exchanges go the length of abolishing the right to sue for less than a hundred dollars.

The Midland Railway is applying for power to extend its railway from Brechin, in Ontario county, to Lake Nipissing, and a charter for a new railway company is to be applied for at the next session of the Ontario Legislature. The company is to be organised to extend the Nipissing Railway to the Sawdon mines.

Archbishop Lynch of Toronto, at present in Europe, has sent some very interesting letters to friends in Canada, portions of which have appeared in the press. Writing from Genoa he remarked that he had visited the college of foreign missions kept by his old confreres, and obtained the privilege of sending three students free, the college even providing their clothes and necessaries. The only expense will be the journey thither and return. Five years is the duration of the course in theology.

No doubt the trade with Australia is well worth cultivating, but the capacity of the country may easily be over estimated. A late issue of the Sydney Morning Herald thinks that "there is a wrong impression abroad as to the consuming power of Australasia, and this may have arisen from the lavish expenditure in gold-digging times. Things are changed now, and daily settling down to their normal condition. At best there are only the wants of three millions of people to supply at present, and to attempt to force trade must only result in a loss."

In connection with the recent changes in the office of superintendent of the Midland Railway, the Lindsay Post says.—

We regret to observe that there is a disposition in Port Hope to criticise harshly the action of Mr. Cox in making a change in the office of superintendent of the Midland railway. Local and personal feeling may be carried too far. The public generally have thorough confidence in Mr. Cox, and they know that he has at heart the best interests of the road. He has done a great deal to improve it in various ways; and it is highly necessary that he should have a competent staff of trained and courteous officials who would heartily cooperate in his work of improving the road. Without such prompt and thorough assistance Mr. Cox would find his plan not carried out and probably his desires thwarted. The public do not care much about the internal affairs of any corporation so long as business is satisfactorily carried on and official duties satisfactorily discharged, and the public feel confident that Mr. Cox will see that this is done; while they also know that he would on no account deal harshly or unjustly with any man, especially with any one who had been many years in the service of the company. If he were to err at all he would err on the side of leniency, for he is one of the most considerate of employers The change that has taken place was one that has been foreseen for some time; and it will result beneficially to the road. We do not know the new superintendent personally, but we have no doubt Mr. Cox has made a judicious selection.

—A new idea.—Says the Ottawa Free Press: "The proprietor of a country paper, not more than a thousand miles from Ottawa, whose subscribers are evidently backward in coming forward, hit upon the novel idea of offering a copy of his paper for one year to the farmer who left a peck of the largest potatoes. The result was that he secured about twenty bushels of potatoes at the rate of about five cents a bushel, as the price of the paper is only one dollar for the year, and he only furnishes a copy of it to one party out of the lot. The country editor in question is smart enough to keep a corner grocery.

From a Prominent Veterinary Surgeon.

Mr. Wm. M. Giles, Chemist, sir: I have practiced extensively in Europe and America, and your new discovery, Liniment Iodide of Ammonia, surpasses anything I ever used for splints, strains, lameness in the limbs or shoulders, weakness across the kidneys, wind galls, and hard, bony swellings on the joints. It is truly marvelous. Yours very truly.

WEST DURHAM.

HON. EDWARD BLAKE ELECTED BY ACCLAMATION.

His Speech to the Electors.

The nomination of candidates to represent the West Riding of Durham in the House of Commons, rendered vacant by the resignation of Mr. Harvey Bark, took place at Bowmanville on Monday last. The Returning Officer—Mr. Robert Armour—after waiting according to the statute, till two o'clock without receiving any other nomination than that of Mr. Blake, declared him elected by acclamation. In the meantime a meeting was held in the town hall, beginning at half-past one and notwithstanding the very muddy condition of the roads, many farmers from the surrounding country came in to hear the gentleman whom this riding had the honor of introducing into political life. A large number of gentlemen also from Cobourg, Port Hope, and other neighboring towns and villages made their way thither. Consequently the hall, which is capable of seating about 700 people, was more than full, and the audience was one representing the intelligence, influence, and respectability of the united counties of Northumberland and Durham, and was graced by the presence of a large number of ladies.

Mr. Harvey Bark occupied the chair, and surrounding him on the platform were a number of other leading gentlemen.

The Chairman took occasion, in opening the proceedings, to explain the causes which led to his resignation of the representation of West Durham, after which Mr. Blake made the following speech:

MR. BLAKE'S SPEECH.

Hon. Edward Blake on rising was received with thunders of applause. He spoke as follows:—

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen,—It is not without emotion that I once more address the electors of this Riding as member for West Durham. I never have forgotten, I never can forget, the kindness, the consideration, which has marked the bearing of all of you ever since we first became acquainted. It is now more than seventeen years since you first invited me, then personally a stranger to almost every man in the Riding, to become your Liberal candidate for the Commons. That invitation you made good, converting a trifling majority of about sixty into a majority of over four hundred in the election which succeeded. (Applause.) Four years after, in the year 1871, apprehending my defeat for the Local Legislature in the South Riding of Bruce, you elected me by acclamation, and without enquiry and without my putting my foot inside the riding. In the following year, 1872, you elected me by acclamation as your representative in the House of Commons, during my absence in England, though my name had been brought forward for the same riding as a candidate for the same House. Afterwards a sense of public duty called me to another constituency and it was necessary that we should part for a season. That parting was accomplished with feelings of mutual regret. Another noble act of yours evinced your kindness toward me. Last year, the period for which I had been elected having expired, I was once more nominated for a seat in the Commons, and that nomination I would have accepted had not the same sense of public duty indicated that I was required elsewhere.

WE ARE ONCE MORE UNITED,

Never I trust to be dissociated as long as I keep to the stormy sea of politics. (Thunders of applause.) I cannot but revert on this occasion to some of the events of the past. You will recollect that in the course of these contests, and in the course of this connection with the riding, it has not been alone to those who especially sympathise with me in my political views that I have cause to be grateful. After the first election many among you who opposed me on that occasion intimated that they would never renew that opposition on any future occasion when I should be in the field. And there has been during the period of my connection with you a degree of kindliness, of courtesy, of fair and candid dealing on the part of my political opponents in this riding, unhappily too rare throughout this country, where it very often happens that we are disposed to regard any one differing from us in opinion as something very much like a rogue. It has not been the case with those who did not sympathize with a majority of the electors of this riding so far as I am concerned. (Loud applause.) On this occasion this attitude has been maintained, though the chief organ of the Conservatives gave their friends down here the advice to fight it they could make a good fight, and, if not, not to waste their powder. (Laughter.) They met here in solemn convention, remembering the great failure they had made in 1878, although their minority was not large they embarked upon the difficult task of adding a "Cubitt" to the political stature of West Durham (loud laughter), but they afterwards determined to change their man and to "look to Washington." (Shrieks of laughter.) But our respectable citizen, Mr. Washington, declined the contest. Other nominees were consulted, but they also declined; you can't very well fight a battle in politics without a man to fight for, and so it happens that there is no fight to day. But I believe that is not the only reason: I believe there existed still amongst a very large number of those who were politically opposed to me a feeling to which I have adverted. I believe many of those in this riding who have been politically opposed to me were indisposed to the maintenance of opposition, and it was as much to that cause as to any other that we have the peaceful proceedings of this day, instead of the heated and exciting contest which would have taken place had any other candidate been put out. I congratulate my friends on the other side upon the wise and dignified, the prudent and discreet, course which, whether from choice or from necessity it is not necessary here to discuss, they have followed. (Applause.) I do not approve of needless contests. They involve a considerable amount of evil and much bitterness, which takes some time to disappear, and very little good. And we know, and if we did not know before the size and temper of this meeting tells us, what the issue of a contest would have been. (Applause.) I rejoice, therefore, that I once more come amongst you under circumstances which signalised my latest relations with you—a general concurrence on the part of the population that I am not wholly unsuited for the position of your representative. It was not, as you know, my desire to have returned to public life. Many serious considerations concurred to make it my personal feeling to prefer a season of retirement, and since my services have been dispensed with, to remain in private life for at least a season. But a vacancy having been created by your action, Mr. Chairman, in the way you have stated to this meeting, and with the consent of the electors, and this having been followed by a unanimous nomination by my friends and those with whom I have been so closely associated, I did not feel it my duty to decline so honorable a proposal as they made to me, and so it comes that I am once more member for the riding of West Durham. (Loud cheers)

PARTIES IN POLITICS.

I wish to remind you that when I first came amongst you I opposed the mode of political action which our political opponents at that time brought forward—a mode which they urged upon you on that occasion only to discard at the first moment when they could do so with safety. (Loud applause.) I advocated at that time the principles of party Government as the only safe, practicable mode upon which Parliamentary action could be carried out. Subsequent experience in a tolerably wide field has proved to me that the evils which I said were incident to party government were even greater than I supposed they were. The extreme of bitterness, the blind unreasoning adhesion to party propositions, the suggestion that it is the duty of an Opposition to oppose everything proposed by the Government, no matter what its advantages to the country may be; the zeal that leads to harsh recriminations of the political utterances and services of politicians of the opposite stripe—all these things are too plain to be ignored, and we must all acknowledge them. But they are evils incident to almost all human institutions, to which you cannot apply the attributes of perfection. You know that I never at any time invited you so to deal with the question of party; that I have always argued amongst you for a

REASONABLE FREEDOM OF ACTION

on the part of even a party politician; that I have told you that while in questions simply of party tactics or expediency a man may well and ought to subordinate his individual judgment to that of the majority of his party, that while on questions of principle he ought to pay very great attention and give very great consideration to the views of the majority if they vary from his own, where his own opinion may at the best be doubtful upon such questions, he may not unfairly, if he simply doubts, yield his own inclinations to the general judgment, still, in questions of principle, where his opinion is clear, it is a violation of principle for him to sacrifice that opinion to those of others, and therefore he ought never to be called upon to make such a sacrifice. (Hear, hear.) I have told you, and I repeat, that I conceive it to be no part of the duty of a political opponent of the party in power to oppose all their measures; that his duty is to oppose what he conceives to be injurious, to endeavor to amend what he conceives to be imperfect, and to promote whatever he conceives to be beneficial, no matter from which side of the House the measure under consideration may have come. (Cheers.) With this view of the duty of a party politician, I believe the evils of party may be minimised, while, on the other hand, it seems to me to be an essential institution for two reasons—first, because a Government always concentrates around itself, as a unit, an organised body of supporters, and unless there be organization on the part of the other side, a Government must always manage to carry on affairs as it pleases, and we know that that would not be for the good of the country. We know that all men and all Governments are the better for being watched, scrutinised, and critised. We know that it is the tendency of every one to aggrandize his office and his power, and that it becomes a sort of conviction amongst men who are in place that it is an extremely important thing in the party interests that they should remain in place—so important a thing that I think it has sometimes happened in former ages—although in an age like this no one would say it has happened—that principles are sacrificed in order that place may be retained. (Laughter.) I say therefore that the public interest demands that that natural tendency on the part of those in office to aggrandize their offices and executive power should be checked and controlled by those who are vigilant to see that the rights and liberties which it has cost so much blood and treasure to obtain are unimpared. (Cheers.) An organization of that kind I believe to be required to clear the ground, and to give the necessary controlling force for reforms and progress, however humble or however practicable they may be of being conducted to a successful issue. For these two reasons chiefly it is that, notwithstanding all the difficulties incident to it, I adhere to the view I expressed to you twelve years ago, and profess myself, as I then did,

A PARTY POLITICIAN.

But, Sir, I maintain, and I desire to take this opportunity to distinctly state my opinion on this point with still greater earnestness than I did then, the necessity of permitting a man to differ, when his conscience calls upon him to differ, from the course others may pursue. I say that otherwise you would make the party machine a machine to crush principles, to restrain conscience, and the fitness of those who are fit; and to us who profess to be the friends of such a course is most abhorrent. It is more congenial to our view of the world and the duty of politicians that we should sit rather looser to each other. It is very easy for a party who calls itself Conservative, which says its duty is to to resist change, to defend the fort, to maintain things as they are, which talks of the present system as the best of all systems, which cannot be altered except for the worse—I say it is apparently easy for gentlemen who have to preserve a passive attitude, to remain united in a sense. But we who take a different view of the situation, who believe in the development of political institutions, who believe in the development of man and the world at large, who believe that progress is infinite, or indefinite at any rate, believe that there is much to reform, much to be changed, and that institutions beneficial to-day grow out of date as society grows older, and must be changed to accomplish the very good which they are designed to accomplish, and which they did formerly accomplish. Because we may differ in several ways. In the first place we may differ as to the necessity for a certain reform, and at a certain time. Some of us may be more advanced in our views than others, some may be more tolerant of existing evils than others, and so there may be a difference of opinion on many points; and even when agreeing that a change may be necessary, we differ as to the mode of making that change. There are various ways in which a change may be effected, and even when we agree to make a step forward, we may disagree as to the road. We must recognize these things and agree upon some decisive plan, believing, however, that fair consideration and full discussion will produce a fair solution of any such difficulties as may exist. We can be firmly united upon the general question of progress; we can be quite sufficiently united for the purpose of party cohesion, recognising the possibility and the probability of differences upon the minor points, and attempting by unitedly, candidly, and fairly considering them, to arrive at such a solution as may be beneficial to the public at large. Although I have been condemned during the course of my public life for having on some points differed from the bulk of my party, I altogether decline to accept on my re-entrance into public life any more straitened conditions. You may be sure I will go upon what I consider to be to your interest. (Applause.) You will remember that upon this view of party action is based my regard for the Liberal party to-day.

LIBERALISM AND PROGRESS

THE GENERAL CURRENT OF HISTORY,

with reference to the Liberal party in the Old Country and here, and cannot be referred to without making the pulse quicken and the heart beat as one looks at the rich treasure of additions to the sum of human good it has accomplished. This history and these achievements, with the desire to follow in the same path, is the true bond of union between the members of the party. Actuated by that desire to advance they will overcome in future as in the past, all minor differences of opinions, and it is the duty of all of us to do what in us lies to advance the good cause and to hold up the hands of those who are its spokesmen and its advocates.

INCREASE OF IMPORTS AFTER CONFEDERATION.

Take the main subject which was under discussion when I first came amongst you. It became my duty to call your attention to the critical condition in which the first Government of Canada had placed the finances of the country. You recollect that for the first two or three years after Confederation little or no progress happened to be made in the amount of our revenue, but afterwards there came a period during which the importations ran up to an almost incredible amount, for which we paid more than we could afford, and as a consequence the amount which we paid into the Custom House was very much increased. Well, Mr. Chairman, he was one who surveyed the country, who looked at the increase of our population, looked at the amount of our harvests and of our exportations, who considered what our real taxable power was relatively to former years, it was obvious, it was as plain as day, that we were not increasing in population, in realised wealth, in power of paying taxes, and of making importation to the extent that we were actually importing and paying taxes for. What necessarily followed to the eye of the most limited observer? Why, that must come; that this prosperity was largely fictitious, and that it would be followed when that day arrived by a period of collapse, reaction, and difficulty.

A DAY OF RECKONING

THE DUTY OF STATESMEN IN PERIODS OF INFLATION.

What then was the plain, obvious duty of those who were the stewards of your Treasury under such circumstances? Not to swim on the surface; not to be solely guided by the circumstances that your revenue for two or three years was expanded; not to act as if it would continue so to expand, but to prudently expend what this feverish period of activity gave in excess of normal revenue, to be careful not to enter into permanent committals upon the strength, not merely of a fluctuating, but what was sure to be a declining revenue. Do you in your private business, because you may have had one or two very goods crops as a farmer, or one or two very good years as a merchant, during which you made $1,500 or $2,000 extra profit, if you are a prudent man, increase your permanent burdens for all time to come by the amount of your extra profit? Would you not say, "we'll make hay when the sun shines; we'll put by." But if, instead of saying this, you were more speculative, and say, "we have got a good year, and we'll spend and trust to the future," I say you would be rash. But wouldn't you be rasher if, besides spending the profits of a good year, you were to enter into permanent engagements which could only be met by a succession of good years? (Hear, hear.) And that is just what your rulers did. They not only spent the ordinary expenses of Government, but entered into large expenditures beyond what was necessary—for I admit that an increase was necessary and must be looked for—and they justified it how? Why, I remember in the very last Budget Speech which was delivered by the present Finance Minister when this inflation was at its height, he declared in my presence in the House of Commons that there was no ground to anticipate any reduction in the revenue. He anticipated a continuous increase in the revenue, and that was the only ground on which they could attempt to justify their action before the people of the country. I remember when Mr. Cartwright succeeded him, and when Dr. Tupper fulfilled the office of financial critic on the part of the Opposition, that he opposed the increase of taxes that was proposed by the Government on the ground that it was utterly unnecessary in the condition of this country to make any increase, that the revenue was going to continue to flourish at the old rate, and that a burden utterly uncalled for was being imposed on you. Now, I say the public men, who, if they honestly believed that the revenue of this country was going to increase in the way they stated, showed themselves so utterly incompetent to form a reasonable judgment on that subject, are not very safe guiders of your affairs to-day. (Cheers.) These mad proceedings culminated in the project to bind Canada to build the Pacific Railway within ten years, no matter what it might cost. We opposed it, and we opposed other similar, though much smaller, transactions, to the best of our ability. We insisted that we must look to and I recollect in this very place exhorting you to remember, when that day of reckoning should happen, when the period of depression and reaction should come, what those men had said about the perpetual character of good times, and what burdens they imposed upon you because they thought the good times would continue for ever. I say we endeavoured to intercept these transactions, and in 1872 we endeavoured to take the sense of the country upon them. But upon that occasion we were met, as you know, by various influences. We were met by the argument to which I have alluded, and to which people are, perhaps, too prone to listen. It is always pleasanter to fall in with those who indulge in visions of prosperity or comfort, than with those who tell you that you are in a critical position and have a period of hard times to meet. But we were met by the Administration with more material arguments in the shape of large sums of money which were obtained from Sir Hugh Allan by Sir Geo. Cartier, Sir John Macdonald, and another gentleman who, I hope, will soon be—for he has many titles to distinction—Sir Hector Langevin,' (laughter) —obtained upon understanding that certain advantages were to be given to Sir Hugh Allan and the Company of which he was the head. And by these means a majority was obtained in the election. Soon afterwards the truth leaked out, and again it became my duty to address you for the last time on Dominion politics, when I endeavoured to bring your mind to what I conceived to be the correct view of a disgraceful transaction which had been perpetrated, which was then agitating the country, and which ultimately resulted in the enforced resignation of the Administration. Now, Sir, I have never felt, nor have I ever announced, any feeling of congratulation at the political crime which was upon that occasion committed. My feelings were always the reverse. I always felt that the honour of Canada at large was tarnished (cheers) by conduct which I, at any rate, considered disgraceful on the part of leading public men of Canada, and felt that however necessary to the public was the exposure, the investigation of the matter and the punishment of those who were guilty, yet it formed but an inadequate remedy for the injury which had been inflicted upon us by those who had committed that public crime. (Loud cheers.) Nor was I anxious that the Liberal party at that time should accede to power, believing, as I said, that the reaction would very soon set in, and knowing enough of public affairs to be aware that to those who happen to be in office the public attributes evils which occur during their tenure of office, although the causes which produce them may have been produced before ever they obtained office, and I was anxious that the difficulty should occur while those who were responsible—not for the depression, I do not say that their conduct brought that about, though no doubt it aggravated its evils—should be in power when that depression arrived, that the public might plainly trace the connection between the prevailing distress and the conduct of which the Government had been guilty. But it turned out otherwise, and upon the Liberal party was imposed the ungrateful duty of

A DAY OF RECKONING,

INCREASING THE BURDENS OF THE COUNTRY

and thus endeavoring to restore the balance between receipts and expenditure which had been disturbed by their predecessors. Now, Sir, the Opposition, who had produced this state of affairs, sat on their benches in the House complaining They complained that the increase of taxation was highly unnecessary, and that the prosperity which the country was then enjoying would continue forever, and they insisted that the Liberal party was more extravagant than they in thus increasing the burdens of the people. As soon as the excessively serious character of the crisis was forced upon the knowledge of the people, the party of retrenchment and economy had set about in good earnest—and you are all acquainted with the general feeling of the returns, and how the last year of the Liberal Government showed during their term of office a very successful effort had been made to meet the increased liabilities which had been accumulating from the time of Confederation up to the year they obtained power. I do not think, notwithstanding their declarations of the extravagance of the Liberal Government, notwithstanding their insistance upon the necessity of retrenchment, that the Estimates and Supplementary Estimates for the financial year which is now passing give any marked proof that the Conservative Government is about to alter its old course. I do not think the symptoms are hopeful. On the other hand, I regret the serious apprehension that we will find the same course of increased expenditure which we found occurring in the first five or six years after Confederation.

[The remainder of the speech will appear in our next issue. In a speech of nearly three hours he discussed the necessity of economy in public expenditure, the operations and tendencies of the National Policy, and the desirability of reforms in the constitution of the Senate and the representation of the people in Parliament.—Ed. Ex.]

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, NOV'R 20, 1879.

If You Want a real good blanket, cheap either Grey or White, go to T. Robinson & Co.'s.

The Golden Boot.—The chess sale of boots and shoes is still going on at Samuel White's. Great bargains offering.

Recovering.—We are pleased to state that Mr. Thomas Braden, who for the past ten days has been very ill with bilious fever, is favorably recovering.

Complimentary Dinner.—Col. Van Straubenzie and Gen. Worsley were entertained at a dinner at the Club House on Thursday evening last.

Out of Danger.—The man Graves, so seriously injured by jumping or falling out of a buggy at Brighton a week ago last Sunday, is, we believe, out of danger and is now recovering as speedily as possible under the circumstances.

The Band.—The Band gave an open air rehearsal of several new pieces on Saturday night last, on the corner of Brock and George streets. Their playing was much admired and praised by the citizens.

Removal.—Mrs. MacKechnie has removed to the large double shop the door north of W. J. Lavender's boot and shoe store, where, with an extensive premises, she will be able to meet the requirements of her constantly increasing trade.

Ahead of Belleville.—The Belleville Ontario says:—The people of Peterborough are agitating for a public park, and the way they talk about the matter suggests the probability of their succeeding. Belleville does not need a park. We prefer to have a cow pasture handy.

Smith!—There is an old saying to the effect that it never rains but it pours, and we think the truth of the adage has been fully borne out during the past week. It is to be hoped that we will be favored with a few weeks of fine weather.

Auction Sales.—As will be seen from advertisement in another column, as well as by posters, Mr. C. J. Seymour has instructed Messrs. Gilbert & Moore to sell by public auction on his premises, East Half of the West Half of Lot 28, in the 11th Concession of Otonabee, his farm stock and implements, on Tuesday, 2nd of December. The farm will be offered for sale at the same time and place.

Military Examination.—On Thursday last Col. Von Straubenzie, Col. Worsley and Lieut.-Col. J. S. Rogers held an examination of those officers of the 57th Battalion who had applied for certificates. The examination was a written one and occupied eight hours. The following are the names of the applicants: For 1st Class, —Capts. G. C. Rogers, Langford and Grover. For 2nd Class.—Capt. Edwards, and Lieuts. Millar and Book.

Militia Gazette.—The Canada Gazette contains the following appointments:—

"57th "Peterborough" Battalion of Infantry.—No. 1 Company, Peterborough.—To be Sergeant, provisionally: Nicholas De Reis Beck, Gentleman, vice Dimas, promoted. No. 3 Company, Asburnham.—To be Corporal, provisionally: Sergeant Richard Bennett Rogers, vice Dadman, retired. To be 2nd Lieutenant, provisionally: Frederic William Gordon Hamilton, Gentleman, vice R. B. Rogers, promoted."

About Bank Defaulters.—The Toronto Telegram, discussing the Dempster defalcation, and the system of bank inspection by which stockholders can be swindled under their noses, concludes thus:—"The worst feature about the case is that efforts are now being made to smoothe the affair over and let the defaulting banker go. To let him go would be to set a vicious example to bank officials generally, and one of the results would be to keep bank inspectors even more busily engaged than they already are."

Opening Pieces for Sale.—A London photographer writes to the London Times:—"I think you must allow that ladies cannot much object to having their photos exposed for sale when they go again, and in some cases several times, to the same photographer to be taken in another position, well knowing that he will offer, as he did on a former occasion, the new photo for sale. I should say that most photographers would take this as a tacit consent on the part of their fair client to his offering the photo for sale in shop windows, and I think with justice."

Christmas Day.—This year Christmas Day falls on a Thursday. The old rhyme says:—

If Xmas day on Thursday be,
A windy winter ye shall see;
Windy weather in each week,
And hard tempests strong and thick:
The summer shall be good and dry,
Corn and beasts shall multiply;
That year is good for lands to till,
Kings and princes shall die of skill;
If a child born that day should be,
It shall happen right well for he;
Of deeds he shall be good and stable,
Wise of speech and reasonable,
Whoso that day goes thieving about,
He shall be punished without doubt;
And if sickness that day betide,
It shall quickly from thee glide.

Rymeniad.—We find the following in the Belleville Chronicle:—"With his many friends in Belleville, we extend our congratulations to our young and esteemed citizen W. T. McIntyre, on the happy event which took place in Lakefield on Wednesday evening last, the particulars of which will be found elsewhere in this issue. About 30 couple were present, and the bride was the recipient of a great many handsome and costly presents, among the best of which was a silver tea set, presented by Mac's friends in this city, two of whom were present. The happy couple went west on their wedding tour, attended by the well wishes of their host of friends. On their return they will take up their residence permanently in Belleville. In the language of Rip Van Winkle, our wish is "may they live long and prosper." We may add that the happy couple carry with them the best wishes of their numerous friends in this section for their future happiness and prosperity.

Gas.—Those here who think the town pays too much for gas may take an interest in the gas-coal controversy now going on in Brantford. The people of that city are clamoring for cheaper gas, the present price being $3 per thousand feet. The shareholders of the Gas Company appear to have a "soft thing," as the rent they now receive from the lessees of the works gives them the handsome dividend of 17 per cent upon their stock. The lessee, on the other hand, appear to have a "white elephant" on their hands. They pay a very high rent, and have given heavy security for the carrying out of their lease. The shareholders will not release them from their obligations, and they cannot accede to the public demand for cheaper gas without losing money. Opposition gas works are hinted at. The only persons in question who have reason to feel comfortable are the stockholders, who are not likely to throw up their big dividends for the benefit of either the lessee or the householders of the city.

Lacrosse.—A meeting of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club was held in the Choate House on Tuesday evening last to receive the resignation of the President, Mr. A. D. Braithwaite, who is about leaving town, and to appoint another member to the vacancy. After the meeting was called to order, the President spoke of the pleasure it had afforded him of being presiding officer of the Club, but now that he was about to be removed from Peterborough, it would be necessary for him to sever his connection with them, and he therefore handed in his resignation, which was accepted. Mr. Thos. Munro, Vice-President, was on motion unanimously elected as President for the remainder of the year, and Mr. J. R. Stratton as Vice-President. The following resolution was then moved by Mr. J. R. Stratton, seconded by Mr. S. H. Henderson, and carried unanimously:

"That the members of this club learn with regret that their late President, Mr. Braithwaite, is about to remove from amongst them. They are pleased that he is considered so favorably as to be promoted to a more important position in one of the first cities in the Dominion. They are not willing that he should leave them without an acknowledgment of his merit as a member of this club and especially as President, which place he filled with honor to himself and advantage to the club. Be it therefore resolved, that the thanks of this club be tendered to Mr. Braithwaite for his uniform courtesy, while President, and for his earnest endeavors to promote its interests, and that the best wishes of all its members accompany him to his new abode.

Mr. Braithwaite acknowledged in appropriate terms the sentiments conveyed in the resolution. Among other business transacted during the evening Mr. Braithwaite was elected an honorary member of the club.

Non-Resident Pupils.—As the question of resident and non-resident pupils is likely to come before our School Board at its next meeting, and as there will probably be a difference of opinion respecting it, it may be interesting to note the following view of the matter by the Hamilton Board of Education:—

Resolved:—1. Children whose parents live in the city, whether assessed or not. 2. Children mentally adopted, whether with or without guardianship papers being taken out. 3. Children whose tutors or legal guardians live outside the city, but are freeholders in the city. 4. Children whose parents or legal guardians live outside the city, but who rent offices (owned in their own names or not) within the city. 5. Children whose parents live outside the city, but rent property amounting to the city, and hence not having cows or carriage stalls, &c. 6. Children whose parents reside on wood on the reserve leased in the city. But do not pay taxes in the city. 7. Children who board with relations or others in the city, but whose parents do not pay taxes in the city. 8. Children living with friends or relatives and intending to remain an indefinite period—continuing during the first year.

All children living outside the city, attending the schools and claiming the right to attend as above mentioned, must present at the opening of each term a certificate from the city clerk, stating that their parents or legal guardians are taxpayers in the city.

Mrs. Scott-Siddons.—Mrs. Scott-Siddons is expected to visit Peterborough on Thursday, the 27th instant.

Fine Boots and Shoes.—Read W. J. Lavender's advertisement in another column. He is offering special attractions in boots and shoes for the fall and winter trade.

Gilbert & Moore's Auction Rooms.—Messrs. Gilbert & Moore, Auctioneers, have leased the shop north of the Arcade, in the Town Hall buildings, as an Auction Room and are now prepared to receive consignments for auction.

Flimflam.—Owing to the thoughtless Company failing to connect with the train yesterday they were unable to perform last night. They have, however, telegraphed that they will play "Flimflam" this evening. They are going to draw a good house.

Farms for Sale.—Messrs. Gilbert & Moore have announced for sale, at the Choate House, on the 25th inst., that valuable farm belonging to Mr. [illegible] of the 6th Concession of Smith, containing 144 acres. Sale to take place at 2 p. m.

Evening Rest.—The members of No. 1 Company, 57th Batt., have determined to act on the suggestion of the Deputy Adjutant General and drill one evening of each week during the winter. No. 3 Company is also to drill during the winter evenings and is about organizing a [illegible]

To Make Gilt-Edged Butter.—Every dairyman wishes to get the top price for his butter. This can be done only by having it perfect in quality and appearance. When the color becomes light it is necessary to add a little of Wells, Richardson, & Co's Perfected Butter Color to keep it up to the June standard. Many well known butter buyers recommend all their patrons to use only this preparation, as it gives the most perfect color. Sold by Druggists and Merchants. 47-4ins.

Roots and Shoes.—Now that the cloudy roads and muddy streets, harbingers of winter, are with us, one of the important questions on the minds of all heads of households is where is the best place to buy boots and shoes. These dealings in Peterborough need have little difficulty in solving the question. Stinson's is the place. They carry an enormous stock, buy to the best advantage, and give their customers the full benefit.

Auction Sales.—The following auction sales are announced to take place by Gilbert & Moore, Auctioneers:—

SATURDAY, 22nd instant.—A number of horses and a quantity of furniture. Sale to take place on the Market Square, at 11 a.m. The horses are in good condition. A pair of well matched (black) general purpose horses will be offered. Don't fail to attend.

TUESDAY, Dec. 2nd.—Mr. Charles Marrison will sell by public auction on his farm, near Hiawatha, Indian Reserve, a number of horses, cattle, sheep, etc. Sale at 12 o'clock noon. Lunch provided. 12 months credit.

Hamilton Corbett.—As an former occasions when he visited this town, Hamilton Corbett had not a large audience on Monday evening. As a humorist and singer Mr. Corbett has few superiors in America, and it is to be regretted that he has not better success. The couple of hours spent with him availed the most enjoyable nature, each of his songs being prefaced by some laughable story in connection with the piece. His voice is full and clear, and he should draw crowded houses wherever he goes.

Boating Club.—A meeting of the Boating Club was held on Monday evening last in the club rooms, to receive a report from the Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. Braithwaite, and to receive his resignation, as he is about leaving Peterborough. The report was adopted and his resignation accepted. Mr. R. E. Wood was appointed Secretary-Treasurer for the balance of the year. After Mr. Braithwaite had been elected an honory member of the Boating Club, it was moved by the Rev. Mr. Clement and seconded by Mr. E. B. Edwards.—That a vote of thanks be tendered Mr. Braithwaite for his services as Secretary-Treasurer. The motion was carried and the meeting adjourned.

Change of Bank Officials.—We believe Mr. A. D. Braithwaite, of the Bank of Montreal here is to be removed to the head office, Montreal, and that his place here will be filled by a Mr. Ruddon, of Quebec. Mr. Braithwaite's many friends here will regret that Peterborough is to lose such an excellent citizen, and the Bank a most courteous and obliging official. Taking a leading part in the affairs of the Boating, Lacrosse and Foot Ball Clubs, his removal will be much regretted by the members of them differently organized. Mr. R. E. Rogers and G. S. Cotter, of the Bank of Toronto, are called to Barrie, and Mr. A. W. Gamble, who, it was understood, was to have been transferred from Port Hope to the Bank of Toronto here, will be removed to Collingwood.

Harper's Monthly.—Harper's Magazine for December is a very beautiful and interesting number. It opens with an entertaining article entitled "The Fortunes of the Bonapartes"—illustrated with fine portraits of prominent members of the Bonaparte family. "Sea-Drift from a New England Port," contains some very novel and curious information respecting New London society a hundred years ago. Miss J. L. Cland continues her picturesque description of Irish scenery and character in the Connemara Hills, illustrated by some quaint pencil sketches. Ernest Ingersoll contributes a paper on Atlanta, Georgia, with some excellent pictures. Lossellehr contributes a poem of curious interest, the subject of which is an iron pen (presented to the poet by a lady in Maine) made from a fetter of Bonivard, the prisoner of Chillon—the handle, of wood from the frigate Constitution, and bound with a circlet of gold, inset with three precious stones from Siberia, Ceylon and Maine. In fiction, besides the three great serial novels by Black, Blackmore and Miss Mulock, there is a very strong short story by Rose Terry Cooke. With not reference to the comments of the Editor's Easy Chair, the criticisms of new books, or the humors of the Drawer, we may safely pronounce this December Number of Harper the most varied as well as the most beautiful number of the year.

District News Items.

—Here are the officers of the Port Hope Curling Club for 1880:—Patron, Col. A. T. H. Williams, M. P.; Patroness, Mrs. A. T. H. —The Times says:—The Government has allowed John Rosevear, Esq., M.P.P. $100 for his horse which was killed on the market square. It will be remembered the horse was borrowed by Lt. Hagerman, for cavalry at their annual drill, and before proceeding to Cobourg, while on the market square here, the horse became frightened at something, reared up, fell backward, and was killed.

—The little daughter of Mr. Jason Wilson, who received a cut on the head from an axe wielded by her father the other afternoon, is considered out of danger by her parents.—Times.

—The new building on the site of the "Windsor Hotel," Cobourg, is being rapidly erected.

—The Norwester has made her last trip for the season of 1879. She arrived from Charlotte about eight o'clock on Sunday morning. Her trade for the season has exceeded the most sanguine expectations of her owner, Mr. Gildersleeve of Kingston, who was in town one day last week. It will take about a week for the Norwester's hands—from the captain to the cabin boy—to put her in proper trim for laying up for the winter, and then we shall see no more the genial face of Captain Sherwood until next year.—Times.

—It is said that Dr. Herriman will be a candidate for the Mayoralty of Port Hope.

—The Times says:—It is rumored that Mr. Brennan, formerly Mr. Cox's private secretary, supersedes Mr. Whitehead as station agent at Orillia. The latter gentleman takes the G.T.R. Junction here, and Mr. Tate assumes the office lately vacated by Mr. Ferguson.

—The Guide says:—A distressing and painful accident occurred about noon yesterday to Miss Emily Grant, residing near Wesley Church, Hope. She was in the upper storey of an outbuilding, the door-facing of which was being raised, and happening to step on some loose planks fell through with them to the ground floor a distance of twelve feet. The injuries received are of a serious character, a displacement of the right hip, and laceration of the right side of the skull, causing acute suffering. Dr. Herriman was called and did all that medical skill could suggest to alleviate her sufferings, but she still lies in a critical state.

—The schooner Hattie Howard, from Port Hope, Ont., with 270,000 feet of lumber, went ashore at Cowage on Saturday, against the west pier. The vessel and cargo will probably be a total loss. The schooner is owned by J. H. Lawrence, of Cowage, and is valued at $8,000. Cargo worth $4,000.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Council met on Monday evening pursuant to adjournment. Present.—His Worship the Mayor and Councillors Cahill, Taylor, Smith, Butler, McBride, Yelland, Douglas, Rutherford, Robertson, Deane and Griffith.

Minutes of last two meetings read and confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Robert Hamilton (Amherst), asking to have a sidewalk placed on the street leading to his residence, or to be allowed to withdraw from the corporation, as he did not enjoy any of the benefits accruing to property in the town generally, although paying $97.12 taxes upon his residence.

From Jas. Sheridan, in reference to pounding charges on a cow.

From John McGhee, asking to be paid for horse hire incurred in work of surveying commenced.

From Mrs. Thos. Elliott, J. R. Cooper, Mrs. Rutherford, Jos. Donnelly, Sr., Margaret Cowley, Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Timothy Tracey, asking remission of their taxes.

From Wm. Roberts and others, asking for the curb work on Stewart street to be completed this fall.

From Mr. Crowley, asking to be relieved of payment of water tax, as the street opposite the premises for which he was assessed was not watered during the summer.

From Wm. Duncan, asking for transfer of butcher's license to shop on corner of Hunter and Aylmer streets.

From Mrs. Boyd, asking that the taxes against her house and lot be remitted as she was unable to pay them.

From W. H. Wrighton and fifteen others, asking for a gas lamp on the corner of McDonal and College streets.

From James Nevvan, asking to be allowed till next spring to remove the fence on Rubidge street.

From James Sheridan, complaining of over assessment.

ACCOUNTS.

Nelly Sadlier, attendance on Bridget Sullivan	$ 6 00
McKee & Davidson, hardware	12 26
Wm. Helm, for water	2 00
" " repairs to water cart	2 00

A communication from Councillor Patterson was read, stating that owing to illness he was unable to be present, and asking the Council to attend to some matters connected with the work of the Street and Bridge Committee.

A petition was received from Geo. Dunsford and others, in reference to a drain.

REPORT OF FINANCE COMMITTEE.

Councillor CAHILL, Chairman of the Finance Committee, read and submitted the following report:—

The Finance Committee beg leave to report:

1.—They recommend the payment of Toker & Co.'s account, $6.31.

2.—They recommend that the request of the Commissioners of the Town Trust to have debentures to the amount of $600 issued to meet a like amount which has fallen due be complied with, and the Mayor and Treasurer be authorized to sign the same.

3.—That the prayer of the petition of Mr. Wm. Davidson to have the money paid by him to the Corporation in purchase of property on McDonel street be refunded by the Treasurer as soon as he shall comply with the conditions set forth in the Town Solicitor's advice in the matter, and also in indemnifying the members of the Council against action in the case.

4.—In reference to the memorandum of Messrs. Wm. Montgomery and John McMahon about arrears of taxes of 1876, your Committee find upon examination that the Collector has made a return that there was not sufficient goods to distrain to make the taxes, and therefore they recommend the Council not to interfere in the matter.

5.—Your Committee have been investigating the Collector's Roll and the Assessment Roll for some years back, and have discovered what appears to be manifest errors to which they have called the Treasurer's attention, who reports to your Committee this evening, that three of the cases referred to him are correct and asks for further time to investigate the other cases, and inasmuch as some of our citizen's names have been mixed up with the matter, your Committee recommend that one week longer be allowed him to report.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

THOS. CAHILL, Chairman.

COLLECTOR'S AND ASSESSMENT ROLLS.

Councillor DENNE moved, seconded by Councillor ROBERTSON,—That the Clerk be and is hereby authorized to advertise in the Toronto Globe for a competent person to audit the Collector's and Assessment Rolls, and such other books and accounts connected with the town as may be necessary and report to this Council; the application for such services to be placed before this Council two weeks from to-night.

In moving this resolution Councillor DENNE said that during the past few days a number of errors had been discovered in the Collector's Rolls covering a number of years back, and that in the interests of all concerned an audit should be made.

Councillor SMITH said from the errors that had been found in the Collector's Roll he thought it high time that an audit of the Rolls should be held. He was willing to give Mr. Edwards every opportunity as it was a serious matter to have a charge of this kind against an old official of the town. He thought, however, a local auditor could do the work, and moved a resolution accordingly.

Councillor RUTHERFORD said he was astonished to find some men who were always preaching economy; to thus rush into expense. He did not see the sense of putting the town to this expense this audit would entail as Mr. Edwards had pledged himself to make good any errors that might be found.

Councillor BULLER moved in amendment, that Mr. Wm. Mills and Mr. James Hogan be appointed Auditors to examine the books and report; expenses not to exceed $200.

Councillor DENNE withdrew his resolution and seconded Councillor Buller's.

Councillor RUTHERFORD moved in amendment that the matter of the audit of the Treasurer's books be left over for a week.

Councillor CAHILL thought there was nothing to lose by letting the matter stand over. I might take years to make the audit, as there was no limit to the books. He counselled moderation.

Councillor DOUGLAS seconded the amendment. Mr. Edwards had already explained three out of the four charges, and if another week were given him he might satisfactorily explain the fourth.

Of the question being brought up Councillor RUTHERFORD raised a point of order, as Mr. Buller's motion involved an expenditure of money. Eight of the Councillors voting for the submission of the resolution, the Mayor overruled the objection, and the motion on being put was declared carried.

DISPOSING OF THE FINANCE REPORT.

Councillor CAHILL moved that the report of the Finance Committee be taken up and disposed of clause by clause.

The first clause was read and passed.

On the reading of the second clause, Councillor SMITH asked how it was that as a sinking fund was being collected every year to provide for payment of these debentures, the Council was asked to provide for retiring them in full.

Councillor CAHILL said that as the Town Trust was composed of gentlemen appointed by virtue of an Act of Parliament the Council had no right to question the demand.

The MAYOR said he had been asked to sign the debentures but had refused, awaiting the action of the Council to-night. He believed the Council could not withhold the issuing of the debentures.

The clause was finally passed.

The next clause on being taken up, after some discussion, was amended by allowing Mr. Davidson interest at six per cent. upon the amount he had paid the town.

Mr. T. G. HARLITT addressed the Council, explaining that the conveyance which gave Waterford street to the town gave that portion of McDonal street from College street to the water's edge as well as Dickson street from McDonal street to Murray to the Judge Hall Estate. Instead, however, of claiming that it was allowed to remain open for the benefit of the town, excepting that part upon which Mr. Davidson's house was erected.

Clause 6 was after some discussion left over till next meeting of the Council, till further particulars of the case could be ascertained.

Clause 5 was on motion struck out, Councillor Buller's resolution passed at an earlier stage of the meeting covering it.

The report as amended was then passed.

PAYING THE POUNDS.

On motion Mr. Searle was instructed to fix the pound in the Third Ward—the cost not to exceed $30.

RAILWAY ARREARS.

Councillor DOUGLAS moved, seconded by Councillor YELLAND.—That the Clerk be and is hereby instructed to place the amount due by the Midland Railway Company to the property owners on Bellevue street in the hands of the Town Solicitor for collection.—Carried.

MEETINGS OF COMMITTEES.

Moved by Councillor ROBERTSON, seconded by Councillor DENNE.—That members of the press be notified of all meetings of Committees of this Council.

Councillor ROBERTSON said he moved this resolution in consequence of a charge in the Review that he had usurped his position as Councillor to get a report of the committee room open to the public, still he thought nothing would be gained by it, and it was strange that Mr. Robertson, who had so strenuously opposed reporters being present before the Finance Committee, should now take such a turn.

Councillor CAHILL said while he had no objections to having the meetings of the committee open to the public, still he thought nothing would be gained by it, and it was strange that Councillor Robertson should now take such a turn.

Councillor ROBERTSON said it was because they were unknown and that all those tendencies were not present.

The matter was laid over as a notice of motion, it being necessary to amend the Rules of Order by By-law.

STREET REPAIRS.

The Street and Bridge Inspector reported that a portion of the main sewer had fallen in and it would be necessary to repair it.

A motion was passed granting $150 out of the general funds to be applied to the street and other funds to complete the necessary repairs to the streets of the town, and ordering some repairs and work to sidewalks.

THE POLICE COURT CASES.

In answer to a Councillor the MAYOR stated that the Police Court cases was not down for hearing in Toronto next week.

Councillor ROBERTSON moved that a tin box be obtained in which to place all tenders received for work ordered by this corporation.

A point of order being raised the matter was left over as a notice of motion.

Council adjourned for one week.

Personals.

—Rev. Mr. Maldhara, late of Alnwick, occupied the pulpit of the Baptist Church on Sunday last.

—Mr. E. H. Brennan has been appointed Station Master at Orillia for the Midland Railway.

—Bishop Sweatman is expected to return to Toronto from England early in December. During his Lordships stay in England, the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred on him by his Alma Mater.

MERE MENTIONS.

—Holiday goods are beginning to be displayed in elegant profusion by our merchants.

—A political speaker accused a rival of "unfathomable meanness," and then rising to the occasion, said: "I warn him not to persist in his disgraceful course, or he'll find that two of us can play at that game."

—"I don't see how you can have been working all day like a horse!" exclaimed the wife of a lawyer, her husband having declared that he was there working. "Well, my dear," he replied, "I've been drawing a conveyance all day, any how."

—This is about the time of the year that the free and independent elector may expect the chronic office-hunter to call around with his "How'dy, how'dy, how'dy do," &c.

He grasps your hand with a hearty shake,
His face grows meeker and meeker;
You know him well in the fall of the year,
He's the annual office-seeker.

Opening Water Street.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

SIR,—I desire through your columns to draw the attention of the Town authorities to an old vexed question, viz., that of the occupation of the public streets or parts thereof by private individuals. Your readers will remember how persistently citizens of the Third Ward agitated until they compelled the council to force the withdrawl of occupation of that part of Rubidge street between McDonelly and London streets. While that agitation was in progress that part of Water street between Sherbrooke and Dalhousie streets was taken possession of by Mr. Romaine, and for two or three years has been occupied by his brick works. This was always considered a struggling enterprise, and many of the citizens in that end of the town, were satisfied to let it have a start and await fuller development. It is now vacated by all but a few bricks, some clay and a little machinery, and may, I am free to say, never be revived. This is the time, therefore, for the council to have the street opened, graded and restored to its legitimate use, the Queen's highway, and I trust, sir, that you will lend your columns to urge on the Town council immediate action in the matter. Doing so now can interfere with no industry, nor prevent employment of labour as was claimed in the late agitation, for neither industry or employment now exist there. It will be unjust to no one, as the former owner scarcely indulges in even the faintest hope of ever resuscitating the brick-works, and any security is may afford can not include any portion of the street or streets, which are public, not private, property, and must be restored to the public whose it is, at present fenced in for private purposes. The portion of the street referred to if placed in the market as building lots would bring $2,000. I do not say that I recommend this course, but merely use the assumption to show that its alienation to private parties is equivalent to a yearly loss to the town of $160 at 8 per cent. per annum on market values, and, I respectfully ask, should the town be asked to hand this sum yearly, any longer, to enhance private securities? I solicit your aid to awake the council to see this thing at once, as I believe the town has long enough bestowed too lavishly to support private individuals at the expense of works, use of streets, quid rectabements, or extensions, that need to be explained. But with your leave I will refer to these things again, I am,

Yours, &c.,
SOUTH END.

Fire Protection.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER.

SIR,—The remarks made by your several correspondents on the subject of Fire Protection, are beginning to wake up the citizens at last to a sense of the danger they now incur by being almost unprotected from the rav

Home and Friends.

Come, sit a while with me, my boy I'll not detain you long—
To listen to an old man's words can surely do no wrong.
For I've tried the way that you now tread and see the many snares
That lie concealed along your path to stolen you unawares.

I once was young like you, my son—my shallow locks of brown
And bright blue eyes and fresh young face were talked of in the town.
And men and women flattered me and loaded
me with praise,
And not a cloud of sorrow crossed the sunshine of my days.

But there was one among them all, the kindest and the best,
Who walked me mornings with a kiss and sang
me nights to rest;
And often would I write to find her handwriting
by my bed,
Her counsel heeds printed with the locks that graced my youthful head.

When Death came in and we were left with no one to provide,
She daily toiled for both, and Oh, how lovingly she tried
To make our home so pleasant that the vices of the town
Would ne'er allure her darling son and drag his manhood down.

Alas! how could I disregard that mother's prayers and tears!
How could I spurn her gentle words so early in my years!
I broke her heart—but when I stood beside her dying bed
I, choked with grief, and kneeling felt her hand upon my head.

"Turn back, my son," she faintly said, "regain the narrow way—
You know we journeyed side by side to meet a happy day
And God you left me, darling—Oh, affliction's wings are spread
The better way"—she spoke no more—my best of friends was dead.

My boy, cling close to mother, as you value future peace!
The day is not far distant when her care for you will cease!
And when, if you have caused her grief, each rebe you retain
Of her who would have died for you, will only give you pain.

Yes, tread the path that mother trends, and when she drops to rest
Keep straight ahead, a pure, stout heart low beating in thy breast!
Though wealth should crown thee with her smile and even fame be thine,
Be ever strong enough to say, "My mother's is mine!"

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, NOV'R. 20, 1879.

DR. PHIL'S PATIENT.

Philip Bowers, M.D., with I don't know how many other cabalistic initial combinations attached to his name, felt himself qualified to enter the field as a physician and surgeon.

He fixed upon the flourishing town of Canneville as the place which should bless with the glare and the glitter of his new lamp.

There was one other physician in the place—an old, tell-worn, heroic practitioner, who had doctored a part of three generations, and he seemed good for doctoring another.

He was a firm believer in the free use of medicine, albeit he never took any of it himself.

Still Dr. Seth Bumpus was a stern, clear-headed man, not to be fooled with, and Dr. Phil read his character thoroughly, and resolved not to cross his path—at least, openly.

Had the town of Canneville given promise of no improvement in the way of business and material wealth and increase of population, Dr. Phil would not have settled in the place in opposition to a veteran of Bumpus's known skill and heroism.

But our adventurer knew that the town must grow.

One of his own college chums had been attached to a commission of survey by whom had been discovered a magnificent vein of coal, and if the mine thrived, Canneville must thrive with it.

And it did.

Dr. Phil put out his lamp and waited.

We will not tell how many poor creatures sought the benefit of his skill who had no money, but we can say that for months he did not collect fees enough to pay for the tobacco which he pipe consumed.

There was not a young unmarried woman anywhere who did not think Dr. Phil charming.

But that put nothing in his pocket.

One day Dr. Bumpus, with his linen at its whitest, his gold-bowed spectacles gleaming their brightest, his gold-headed cane held in to most imposing manner, and his whole make-up looking most stupendously wonderful in the way of stern and heroic dignity, in stepping from the post-office, chanced, by the merest accident, to look down and observe the young physician approaching.

Phil, as was his habit with everybody, raised his hat politely; but Bumpus for a wonder stopped and spoke.

'Ah, Dr. Bowers,—good morning, sir. Ah um! A fine morning sir.'

Phil said, 'certainly,' wondering what the old man meant.

'Ah, Bowers, I shouldn't wonder if you were called in to see old Lady Nodgers. Don't allow her to trifle with you. Be blunt and plain with her. Tell her to stop her gormandising, and give her feet a mustard bath, and put an old stocking round her neck."

'Did you tell her that doctor?' asked Phil, with a polite nod.

'Very nearly that—yes. I told her she only had a common sore throat and cold, and that it came as much from her over-eating as from any exposure. There is no use trifling with these gourmands. We lose our own self respect by allowing them to demand our sympathies while they suffer from their own ridiculous folly. Good morning sir.'

And the great man passed on.

Dr. Phil made his first move towards finding out who and what was lady Nodgers.

He had no difficulty.

Everybody—or almost everybody—knew the old Lady Nodgers.

She was a widow.

Mr. Nodgers had been a clear-headed, practical man.

When he died he left his widow worth more than half a million.

Mrs. Nodgers was a large-framed, coarse, middle-aged woman, very illiterate, very homely in person and in manners, and, as would be natural, very anxious to be thought a lady.

In fact, she had drilled her servants into calling her 'My Lady,' and 'Lady Nodgers.'

Dr. Phil had gained all the information he desired, and as he wended his way home, he reflected on the unusual familiarity of the old doctor.

He fancied he could see through it.

Bumpus realised that he had made Mrs. Nodgers angry by his bluntness, and he feared that if his young rival should step in and pander to her foolish whims, and appear to respect her nonsensical fears regarding her bodily health, he, Bumpus, might lose her patronage altogether; and grand and well supplied as he was, he could not afford to lose such a patient, especially when he considered that she was just entering upon the stage of life in which her demands upon her medical attendant would be well-nigh constant.

And, really, this last consolation was a weighty one.

Dr. Phil felt it to be so even to himself.

Mrs. Nodgers had just about reached that age at which the high, free liver, fond of the good things of life, is in constant need of the physician's assistance in bridging over the dreadful gulf between appetite and digestion.

He did not think he should allow himself to kick over the first full pail of milk which might be presented to him.

Dr. Phil had not been at home half-an-hour when a messenger arrived from Lady Nodgers.

Her Ladyship wished to see him as soon as he could possibly wait upon her.

She was in a very bad way—not down sick at present, but feeling such tendency as gave her much alarm.

The Dr. bade the messenger tell his lady that he would wait upon her forthwith.

He delayed long enough to give an air of pre-occupation, and then went.

He found the Nodgers' mansion, as he had often seen it from a distance, to be an imposing structure, and embellished by extensive grounds, very prettily arranged, and very well kept.

Inside it was still more magnificent, and whatever may have been the character of the owners, the articles of adornment had been selected with much artistic skill.

There were pictures and statues of real merit, and many minor items equally worthy of commendation.

And another thing struck the young doctor's eye.

There was an atmosphere of real comfort about the whole place, as though everything the eye rested upon had been brought in for enjoyment.

Thus for the adventurer was agreeably disappointed.

And by-and-by he was introduced into my lady's boudoir.

It was a little overdone, but not much.

The lady was herself a study.

She was very nearly what Dr. Phil had expected to find.

In only one thing was he disappointed.

He did not find her what he would really call a square woman.

A woman really coarse would not be true and kind-hearted, and such this lady certainly was.

Still it was plain to be seen that she was humbled, perhaps ignorant and anxious to be thought a lady.

Dr. Phil, with his keen interpenetration, could see at a glance that she was a woman who would confide implicitly in one who should once gain her confidence through respect.

Before allowing himself to speak he made a swift but critical mental diagnosis of her psychological structure.

He had no fear of following the course which Dr. Bumpus' hint had led him to lay out.

This woman's love of approbation, and other mental characteristics would not only lead her to swallow any amount of sympathetic flattery, but it might be so diverted as to do her good.

At all events, Dr. Phil felt that his present relations with Dr. Bumpus were those of warfare, and, as 'all is fair in war,' he resolved to go ahead.

Introductions and friendly salutations over, the doctor sat down by the woman's side and took her wrist.

No need of that, however, for he had looked at her, and heard her speak, and had heard her cough, and he knew that her system was in an uncomfortable state of repletion, or plethora, from want of exercise, with overeating, and that she also had a slight cold, with slightly inflamed tonsils, and a sore throat.

He had felt her pulse, with his watch in his left hand, carefully counting the heart-beats and he had looked at her tongue, and he had pressed his ear over her heart.

As he sat back he saw how anxious she was.

He saw, probably, what Dr. Bumpus had not seen, nor even thought of looking for.

He saw that her plethora was producing a sympathetic sense of tightness about the heart, very much like an incubus, and he knew that no person, more especially a fearful woman, can experience an obstruction of the heart's action, be it ever so slight, without an untold, unnameable dread.

In fact, when the heart sinks, just so far results a sense of death.

Dr. Phil saw all this in the woman's face as she looked at him, and he knew if he should, in the direction and simple language, tell to her the plain, unvarnished truth, she would not have a particle of confidence in his skill nor a bit of reliance upon his treatment.

She fancies herself sick—not sick like common people, not sick as her cook or chamber-maid would be sick, but sick like a lady. That was it.

She was yearning to have her ailment shown to her grandly.

She was able to pay for the services of a man who could see and understand her.

'Well, doctor?'

That was all, but there was a whole volume in it.

Doctor Phil spoke soberly, solemnly, but yet kindly—

'My dear madame, your complaint is not necessarily a dangerous one, though it might become so from inattention. I find a decided tonsilitis, though not of an aggravated type. There is also a determinedly phlegmatic condition of the laryngeal and tracheal substance and attachments, approaching a state of phlegmaticose. In this I find nearly the whole extent of the mucus membrane, the stomach, the heart and the brain, which is an organization like your own, peculiarly delicate and sensitive, may be of a most decided character.'

Phil paused, and after a while continued—

'Now, my dear madam, I beg that you will be under no alarm. You are blessed with a very finely organised physical structure, and by proper medicine, properly administered, and other things properly attended to, we will very soon—or, at least, in good time—bring all those parts into a dephlegisticated and healthful condition, and remove the attendant difficulties from the more important organs of which I have spoken.'

Then, fixing his eye upon her, he asked—

'Now, are you not sometimes troubled with shortness of breath, especially at night, or when lying down, and do you not feel a sense of oppression about the heart?'

Of course she did.

Oh, how many, many times! And that old, that wretched old doctor had never told her a thing!

And so Dr. Phil went on questioning her upon simple points within her comprehension, hitting every sensation of indigestion he could think of, and she, while she quivered, seemed to regard him as no less than a wizard.

Dr. Phil procured his medicine with his own hands, giving the very, very little that she required of an emphatic quality, while for other purposes, he gave her quite a lot of elaborately prepared drops and powders pronouncing no mere virtue in themselves than drops of pure water, and so many powders of salt and sugar.

But these latter had a virtue indirectly.

After he had left them all about, and told her just how they must be taken, he said to her lightly and pleasantly, as though it was something just at the moment thought of—

'And by the way, Mrs. [illegible], while you are taking these drops and [illegible] I think I had better prescribe a diet [illegible] I am very cautious they should [illegible] orly. You cannot conceive the [illegible] in them, and if they are to do [illegible] you must look to the diet.'

And then he went to work [illegible] the true medicine.

Then he laid down for her rules of diet and mental hygiene which he knew would very soon make her well.

And she obeyed him to the letter.

She had confidence in him.

She had perfect faith in that medicine, and not for the world would she do anything that would interfere with its proper operation.

Ere long Dr. Seth Bumpus felt a falling off in his practice.

Lady Nodgers never called him again, and other people of standing pale him good-bye.

They had found a physician who was kind, gentlemanly, and affable, who told them just what ailed them, and more than all else, who seemed, somehow, to cure them without making them say worse during the operation.

Lady Nodgers never had any children of her own, but she had a beautiful young niece, one Isabel Mowbray, her brother's child, whom she had selected for her heiress.

While in attendance on her aunt Dr. Phil became acquainted with Belle Mowbray, and curious results followed.

Not only did Dr. Phil fall dead in love with the beautiful, happy, laughter-loving, true-hearted girl, and not only did she, with her whole heart and soul, return his, but Lady Nodgers herself had, from the very moment she became acquainted with the splendid young doctor, selected him above all other men as a husband for her niece and heiress.

So Phil not only gained practice but a rich wife, for, in her gratitude to the young doctor, Lady Nodgers gave her niece a large marriage dowry.

A Rich Man on Riches.

The following story is told of Jacob Ridgeway, a wealthy citizen of Philadelphia, who died many years ago, leaving a fortune of five or six millions dollars:

'Mr. Ridgeway,' said a young man with whom the millionaire was conversing, 'you are more to be envied than any gentleman I know.'

'Why so?' responded Mr. Ridgeway. 'I am not aware of any cause for which I should be particularly envied.'

'What, sir?' ejaculated the young man in astonishment. 'Why, you are a millionaire! Think of the thousands your income brings you every month!'

'Well what of that?' replied Mr. Ridgeway. 'All I get out of it is my victuals and clothes, and I can't eat more than one man's allowance or wear more than one suit at a time. Pray, can't you do as much?'

'Ah, but,' said the youth, 'think of the hundreds of fine houses you own, and the wealth they bring you?'

'What better am I off for that?' replied the rich man. 'I can only live in one house at a time; as for the money I receive for rents, why I can't eat it or wear it; I can only use it to buy other houses for other people to live in; they are the beneficiaries, not I.'

'But you can buy splendid furniture, and costly pictures, and fine carriages and horses—in fact, anything you desire.'

'And after I have bought them,' responded Mr. Ridgeway, 'what then? I can only look at the furniture and pictures, and the poorest man who is not blind, can do the same. I can ride no easier in a fine carriage than you can in an omnibus for five cents, without the trouble of attending to drivers, footmen and hostlers: and as to anything I "desire," I can tell you, young man, that the less we desire in this world, the happier we shall be. All my wealth cannot buy me a single day more of life—cannot buy back my youth—cannot procure me power to keep afar off the hour of death, and then, what will all avail when, in a few short years at most, I lie down in the grave and leave it all forever. Young man, you have no cause to envy me.'

As Surely as Effect follows Cause.

As surely as effect follows cause, so surely will disease eventually fasten itself upon a system deficient in vital energy, if tonic medication is not resorted to in time. The necessary tendency of a weak discharge of the functions of the body is to disorder its organs. Invigoration, prompt and thorough, is the only safeguard. No renovant of depleted physical energy, no restorative of lost flesh, nerve power and cheerfulness, has more clearly demonstrated its efficacy than Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine. In this preparation, anodized with the salutary medicines which forms its basis, is pure sherry wine and certain remedial constituents, which impart an agreeable taste to the article, and give additional emphasis to its effects. In cases of general debility and dyspepsia it is invaluable and the desired effect is, in the vast majority of cases, remarkably prompt as decisive. That good natural appetite, which gives a relish for the coarsest fare is insured by the use of Quinine Wine, which also confers brain soothing and body refreshing sleep. Fever and ague and bilious remittent fever, and diseases to the eradication of which it is specially adapted; but it should be used only in the intervals between the seizures. The far-reaching effects of a good tonic, in all complaints involving loss of physical energy, are well understood by physicians, and the comprehensive influence for good of this preparation upon the system goes far to bear out the professional belief in the value of invigorants as opponents of disease. Be sure to ask for the "Quinine Wine" prepared by Northrop & Lyman, Toronto. Sold by all druggists.

Joy Among the Children.

COWLADY'S SYRUP CARTER OIL, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 600 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administering nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having them pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and while equally safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is heavy; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—'My children drink it like water;' another—'We had to hide the bottle or they would have finished it right off;' other—'My little girl has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she knows the ordinary Castor Oil and any other could get her to take it without a fuss;' yet another—'I wish you possess of your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—save to take the place of all the common oil.'

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a simple household medicine has brought fraudulent imitations into the market, but the public can guard themselves against substitutes (which unprincipled parties are attempting to sell on the reputation of this article) by seeing that the name of 'COWLADY'S Castor Carter Oil,' is on both wrapper and directions label.

MANHOOD: HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be positively cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

CATARRH.

Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Cures Catarrh.

T. J. B. HARDING, Esq., BROOKVILLE, ONT.

DEAR SIR.—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me, I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as at first the happy effect seemed to me to be "too good to be true."

I was afflicted in my head for years before I experimented it to be Catarrh. In reading to your Circular I saw my case described in many particulars. The terrible "sleep" from which I could not be aroused, and a thousand other symptoms. I procured a bottle of your Remedy, and before it was half gone I felt myself cured. I have used it since, and have not had a return of the disease. I have been entirely free from it for over two years, and have not had a cold in my head since I used your Remedy. I have recommended it to many friends, and they have used it with the same happy effect. I am, dear sir, yours truly, W. TIDSALL, Medical Student. Fort Hope, Ont., Aug. 14, 1876.

And the following from a Lady:

Dear Sir,—I have used your Catarrh Remedy and am happy to say it has entirely cured me of Catarrh. I was troubled with it for years, and had tried many remedies without effect. I can recommend it to all sufferers as a sure cure. Yours truly, MRS. E. A. HARDING, Hamilton Agent, Ontario.

For Sale by all Druggists at one dollar per bottle.

S. A. OLIVER,

WHOLESALE

Manufacturer of Boots & Shoes,

16 FRONT St. EAST, TORONTO.

PETERBOROUGH BRANCH, - DIXON'S BLOCK.

Goods Sold Direct to the People at Wholesale Price. The Only Business in Canada Conducted on the Same Principle. Over $20,000 worth of Boots & Shoes so Supplied Last Year.

The great loss annually sustained by selling to Dealers, first led to our establishing of Branch Stores, where we could supply direct to the people for Cash all the goods we could manufacture, thus giving to the people the goods less the dealer's profit, and saving to ourselves the annual loss. We were the more forcibly impressed into this step from the fact that cheap Eastern-made shoddy goods were being palmed off as our goods. We now sell our own goods, warrant what we sell, use no shoddy or inferior material of any kind, and can and do supply goods of the best quality 25 per cent. less than they can be bought elsewhere.

Everything Marked in Plain Figures. Only One Price.

CUSTOM DEPARTMENT.

Our arrangements are now complete in this department, and we can make to measure promptly either Ladies', Gentlemen's, or Children's Goods, in the Latest Styles, at little over half the price usually charged.

Factory & Office —16— Front St. East, TORONTO.

St. Andrew's Day.

This is the day of all days of the years,
When Scotchmen most each others' hearts to cheer,
The feast to weight and present scenes to view,
Kind hands to shake, or ask "ouner readin daw."

Heroic deeds are sung, of days of yore,
Of Bruce, and Wallace wight, with his clay-more;

Love's sam'rung ditties in the verse of Burns
Go round the festive board, each heard by turns.

To means of honor'd sires, enshrin'd in fame,
A meed of praise is due; they tribute claim
Of honor and respect; let us impart
A fond reply from ev'ry Scottish heart.

For country's rights, for country's laws, they sought;
For these, their blood they shed, to death they fought.
A noble heritage they've handed down,
Bequeath'd from bleeding sire to valiant son.

In distant lands old Scotia's sons
With gratitude recall her honored ones;
They point the finger to their noble acts
For God, and truth, and home, recorded facts.

St. Andrew's Day reminds of heath'ry hills,
With plaintive upstrain and clear running rills;
The dear old homestead, with the bat and ben,
Far, misty, mountains, and deep mossy glen.

Of hoary sire, and spouse, advanced in age;
With warning ready, and rare counsels sage;
The brother, sister, and the friend so dear,
Their mem'ry cherish'd, calling up the tear.

The kirk, the market, and the trysting stane,
The welcome gloamin', when the kye cam hame,
The lad, the lass, the plighted troth and kiss,
Make dear old Scotia, the land o' bliss.

Let Scotland's sons, of every land the pride,
In truth and grace and honesty abide;
Transfer to Canada's most favor'd clime
The patriotism and worth o' auld lang syne.

Let ev'ry member who observes the day
Of Scotland's saint, the marty'd St. Andrew,
Learn in his footsteps carefully to walk
With grace i' cotton himself, and eke his talk.

Let our poor countrymen for ever be
The objects of your care and charity.
Seek the distress'd, relieve the trying ills
Of Scotchmen, exiled from their native hills!

And, when a friend you need, as need you will,
May He who stickeith close, be with you still;
Lead you for ever onward in His strength,
To home, and happiness, and peace, at length

DISTRICT NEWS.

Campbellford.

A number of employees of the woollen factory entertained Mr. Thos. Lowe, a gentleman who has been some months in the employ of Mr. Senior, to an oyster supper in the St. Lawrence Hall, here, on Tuesday evening.

Demorest.

On Sunday while John Kennedy and his wife were driving to church, the horse was frightened by a dog, ran away, overturned the buggy and very seriously injured Mrs. Kennedy.

Cavan.

The Cavan Conservative Club have elected the following officers:—Robt. Vance, President; First Vice, Charles McNeil; Second Vice, George Thorne; Secretary, J. N. Kirchhoffer; Treasurer, Wm. Smith.

Manvers.

John Grandy, R. Touchburn, Capt. Preston, Dr. Brereton and E. Sing, are the officers of the Manvers Tory organization for the following year.

By the overturning of a lantern in his barn, lot 7, 6 con., Manvers, Andrew Holmes lost his barn and $300 in contents, the latter fully insured.

Omemee.

The Methodist congregation have given Nelly English of their choir a gold chain and locket.

Capt. Cottingham, and Messrs. Josiah Hays and Geo. Seney, of Cavan, returned last Saturday from a hunting trip in which they shot eleven large deer and a bear.

Bobcaygeon.

The gale of Wednesday blew the funnel off the canal tannery.

Mr. Wm. Kennedy has got all the timber in readiness for the rebuilding of the slide and the fish ladder.

C. Fairbairn, Reeve of Verulam, and Warden of the County of Victoria, is confined to his bed with a serious attack of illness. It partakes of the nature of typhoid fever.

The recent fall of snow has brought out the still hunters in full force. Mr. Needler, of Lindsay, passed through on his way home with two very fine deer, which he had killed in Harvey.

The stone work of the new bridge may be said to be finished. The contractors Ranney & Waddel deserve credit for the manner in which the contract has been performed.—Independent.

Port Hope.

Last Saturday tramps robbed the schooner Annie Craig in harbor here of $20 worth of clothing.

Mr. Montizambert, Pt. Hope teller of the Bank of Montreal has been sent to Quebec.

Rev. McDiarmid of Strathroy has accepted a call to the Pt. Hope Baptist Church.

Thursday morning Mrs. Whitehead, an elderly lady, while in a vehicle at the station with her husband and daughter had a narrow escape from terrible death. The wheels of the vehicle got caught by the rails, and it was run into by the train. Mrs. White was severally injured, but fortunately no bones broken.

Last Thursday evening as Mr. John Foots, first con. Hope, was binding a load of hay in the barn, preparatory to coming to Port Hope with it for sale, the binding pole, which was of dry cedar, broke, pitching Frank Bartlett, who was leaning on it, to the barn, on his face, cutting him terribly and knocking him insensible.

Navigation at this port is expected to close about the second week in December. Tolls to the 1st of this month, exceeded by $3,000 those of the entire season of last year, and there is a prospect that when the books are made up there will be about $5,000 in excess of 1878. The following is a comparative approximate estimate of the business of the harbor for this and last year. These are the figures of the shipments from the harbor for 1878 and 1879 up to date of the latter year:

	1878.	1879.
Lumber	18,000,000 feet.	16,000,000 feet
Shingles and lath	13,000,000 M.	12,000,000 M.
Wheat	100,000 bush.	200,000 b'sh
Barley	250,000 "	275,677 "
Peas	25,000 "	25,000 "
Rye	5,677 "	10,000 "

Colborne.

Mr. Almond Drinkwater, of Cramahe, was charged at a magistrates court here for bigamy on Tuesday 18th, and the evidence of the two wives being conclusive he was committed to Cobourg for trial.

A serious fire took place on the Crawford Farm, 2½ miles from town, on the Cobourg and Rice Lake gravel road, on Wednesday morning of this week. The fire started at four o'clock; and resulted in the total destruction of the extensive and valuable farm buildings, comprising three barns and four stables. The farm is now the property of Mr. Thos. Hawkins, but is the occupation of Mr. Thos. Chapman as tenant. Mr. Chapman lost about 75 tons of hay, a large quantity of straw, 800 bushels of peas, a small quantity of wheat and barley, and part of a threshing machine. He was insured for $950 in the "Middlesex Mutual," of which Mr. Eagleson, of Coldsprings, is agent. Mr. Hoskin's loss on the building is very heavy; and will not be nearly met by his insurance of $1500, in the Liverpool, London, and Globe; Mr. S. M. Howell, agent. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Gottenhabef is suffering from mental depression, and there is little hope of his recovery.

Norwood.

Mrs. Hill, widow of the late R. Hill, who left here three months ago to reside among friends in Nebraska, died there on the 10th inst.

There are 153 candidates for the vacancies in the Norwood schools.

Norwood Mechanic's Institute will hold semi-monthly reunions during the winter.

Newcastle

The foundry shut down totally last Wednesday, and moving away stuff is the only industry in that empty hive now. The woollen factory is also shut down for a week or two for repairs.

Mr. James Rowland's house was burglariously entered on Sabbath evening last while the family were at church. Among the articles stolen was the family bible.

Northport.

Mr. Samuel Solmes, one of the old landmarks in the Prince Edward District, died here on the 11th inst., in the 86th year of his age. He was one of the early pioneers of the Bay of Quinte District, having settled in Northport at a very early age. He occupied during his life time many honorable positions of trust, and was very highly respected wherever known. In 1837, he raised a company of volunteers in his section of the country, and served on the Niagara frontier.

Bowmanville.

The Statesman says that a young son of Mr. Stephen Cotton's while attending to the cow one day this week, was attacked by a bull, and but for the timely appearance of Mr. Cotton himself, would have been killed. As it was, he was severely injured. Mr. Cotton himself also received some slight injury before the enraged animal was brought to bay by the aid of pitch forks.

BOWMANVILLE, Nov 21.—It was currently rumoured this afternoon that Mr. Payne had shot A. Columbus Soper in an altercation at the Farmers' Hotel, kept by the former, late last night. It is not known what the injuries are sustained by the Soper. Many stories are afloat, but nothing certain can be ascertained about it.

Pension Falls.

On Monday evening last a Frenchman named Gagli, arrived here from a shanty near the village of Kinmount, where he had been employed by Mr. Peter Begin getting out logs. It appears that he was engaged chopping a log, and while in the act of letting the axe descend he slipped and the edge of the said instrument striking him on the back of the left hand, penetrated through the bone to the palm.

South Monaghan.

South Monaghan Council met on Nov. 10th. Present: the Reeve, Joseph Barnard; Councillors James Wood, John Lightfoot, John Ridell and Wm. Rutherford. A petition from Wm. Emerson respecting statute labor and a number of accounts were received and laid over. Robt. Goodfellow was heard asking a grant of money to assist in repairing the north boundary road between North and South Monaghan. A committee was appointed to examine the road and report at next meeting of the Council. The Council resolved to examine the 5th concession crossway on the 13th as a committe of the whole. The following accounts were ordered to be paid: James Ferris, gravel, $1 75; Reeve and Councillors salary, 1 day, $10, Fair & Tase, nails for Squirrel bridge, 40cts; Thomas Dodds, repairing bridges and culverts on con. 1 and 2, $35; R. Parker, for damages, half price, $1.00; James Fisher, for damages, half price, $2.50; Dr. King, medical services to Lancaster, $2 50; John Sookham, gravel, $4.95; J. C. Barnard, gravel, $1.55; D. Wood, gravel, $3.10.

North Monaghan.

COUNCIL MEETING.—The Council met at the call of the Reeve, on Monday, Nov 17th. Present—the Reeve and Messrs. Leary, Dunlop and Forster. The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. A report and certificate was received from Joseph Bennet, Joseph Green and William Eyres that they had performed the work on the roadway between concessions nine and ten from the quarter line east to the river according to agreement, and asking for payment for the performance of said work. Moved by Mr. Leary, seconded by Mr. Dunlop, —That the report of Joseph Bennet, J. Green and W. Eyres be received and adopted, and an order given them on the Treasurer for the sum $51, that being the amount of their claim against the Council.—Carried. A by-law to appoint places for holding the municipal elections for the ensuing year received its several readings and was passed. On motion of Mr. Leary, seconded by Mr. Dunlop, the sum of $7 was ordered to be paid to Messrs. Belcher & Clementi for taking levels on quarter line. Moved by Mr. Leary, seconded by Mr. Forster,—That $6 be given to Mrs. McIlmoil as charity. Carried. On motion of Mr. Dunlop the Council adjourned to Tuesday, the 23rd day of December, at one o'clock.

Harvey.

COUNCIL MEETING.—The Harvey Council met at the Town Hall, Nov. 17th 1879. Members all present except Chas. McIlmoyle. Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. Communications read: from Road Commissioner certifying the due performance of certain contracts on roads. From Trustees of School section No 2, Harvey, asking the Council for authority to borrow $350 for school purposes. Certificate from F. Crowe that B. Ventress had performed his three days statute labour since the same was returned and entered on the Collector's Roll for 1879. From J. G. Scott concerning the taxes of 1879 on that part of Harvey from lot 15 south to the boundary line inclusive, in the 19th concession. On motion the following orders were drawn on the Treasurer in favor of the parties named as follows:—George Brunsel, for crossway, $15 and repairs on barrel crossway, $6; John Tarlington, caretaker of Town Hall for year 1879 $6; Frank Crow, ditching on the 17th concession line, $57.93; James Goodenough, turnpiking on same line, $14; John Flanigan, grubbing out road and 1 day helping surveyor, $3.97; Ralph Murdoch, cutting down hill and crossway on 12th con, line, $5; James Oliver, work done on roads, and commission on grants expended, $19; John McKenty, expended on roads, $46.16, and commission on grants expended, $7.50; Allen Irwin, expended on Government road, $9; John Edmison, work on 17th con. line between lots 5 & 6, $5; James Cocus, grants expended on roads, $36.75 and commission, $7.50. The Clerk was instructed to notify Jas. Dickson, P. L. S., to survey and lay out road between lots 5 & 6 to lot 2 con. 14, also to notify County Treasurer to remove from his books of taxes charged against the N. W. 30 acres of lot 8 con. 15, Harvey. On motion a by-law to authorize the School Trustees in S. S. No. 2 to borrow the sum of $350 was read a first and second time, when the Council adjourned till tomorrow (18th of Nov.) at 10 o'clock. Nov. 18, 1879. Council met pursuant to adjournment. All present excepting Chas. McIlmoyle. Minutes of the 17th inst. read and confirmed. On motion the By-law to provide for a loan for S. S. No. 2, Harvey, was read the third time, passed, and numbered 126 and the Corporate seal affixed thereto. On motion the allowance for road between the east halves of lots 5 and 6, con. 14, Harvey, was granted to James Cocus in lieu of fenced road on the east half of the lot 6 con. 14. On motion the Reeve was authorized to attend the adjourned sale of Harvey lands for arrears of taxes, in the interests of the Township. Council adjourned to meet on call of the Reeve.

The Irish Agitation.

GROWING UNEASINESS AMONGST THE LAND LORDS—VIGOROUS MEASURES FOR THE PRESERVATION OF THE PEACE.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—The condition of Ireland to-day excites great and real uneasiness. Many Irish landlords are leaving the country under threats of assassination. Insurrectionary placards are posted in Mayo and other counties, calling upon the Irish people to rise in arms. The Government have determined to put strong measures in force at once to maintain public order.

The Irish arrests continue to be the leading topic. The Times thinks there is every reason to believe that a timely display of firmness will extinguish any really mischievous element in the anti-rent agitation.

DUBLIN, Nov. 21.—At a meeting to-night to denounce the arrests of Daly, Davitt, and Killen, 5,000 were present, Mr. Gray, M.P., presided, and the following members of Parliament were present: Parnell, Smyth, Kirk, O'Leary and Biggar. The chairman counselled moderate language. Parnell accused the Government of entrapping Irishmen by means of paid spies. He advised Irishmen to be calm, because if they attempted to emulate the Government in illegal action or violence or disorder, then they would be doing what the butcher and destroyer of Afghan and Zulu desires them to do.

He said no earthly power could ever succeed against the united and determined efforts of Irishmen in the struggle for the soil. Irishmen would show Beaconsfield they knew how to win the battle, and though they played against a man who had loaded dice, their cause was the strongest. He said the land system was already tottering to its fall. Biggar declared Parnell the leader of the Irish people.

The Afghan War.

THE EX-AMEER AND THE CABUL MASSACRE.

CABUL, Nov. 20.—The inquire into the conduct of the Ameer Yakoob Khan and his Ministers in connection with the massacre of the British Embassy has terminated, and the report of the inquiry has been forwarded to the Viceroy of India. Nothing has transpired to alter the unfavourable opinion hitherto current regarding the Ameer's course.

LONDON, November 22.—A Cabul despatch says three regiments of infantry, three squadrons of cavalry, and two guns have gone towards Ghilzmee to collect supplies and disperse the malcontents who have gathered in response to the inflammatory preaching of the Mollahs. It is reported the Afghan leader at the battle of Chara Said crossed the Bolkh frontier and took refuge with the Russians.

Musselman chiefs and tribes, number ing 30,000, have revolted against the King of Abyssinia. The rebels stopped Gordon's passage. Gordon asked for reinforcements and that a corvette be sent to Massowah. The Government has complied with these requests.

The World says there is reason to believe that the return of Prince Louise to England is not entirely a matter of pleasure, but is attributed in a large extent to the interest she takes in the launching of a company for the development of colonization lands in Manitoba and the territory abutting on Lake Winnipeg. An association has already been formed for this purpose under the title of the Lake Winnipeg Land and Colonization Association. Lord Walter Campbell is one of the directors of this Company. The prospectus gives a few details of the enterprise. The price at which Manitoba-grown wheat is to be landed at Liverpool is thirty-five shillings per quarter.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, NOV'R 27, 1879.

TWO SPEECHES AND TWO MEN

The EXAMINER of last week announced the return to Parliament by acclamation of Hon. Edward Blake, for the riding of West Durham, and gave a portion of the speech delivered by him on the occasion, to his constituents. This week, we give our readers the speech complete, in supplement form, and we commend it to their careful, earnest, and thoughtful perusal. It is one of the ablest efforts of Canada's most brilliant and gifted statesman, and it is pregnant with instructive suggestions to the intelligence, the patriotism and the material interests of all who have regard for or rightly comprehend the privileges and dignities and duties of citizenship, in this favored land of free institutions and popular government. With the speech itself fresh in the hands of our readers, extended reference to the various political topics with which it deals in so masterly a manner, would be a work of supererogation. They will come up again in detail, for discussion from time to time, and will receive the consideration they deserve. But we cannot refrain from drawing attention to the comparison which the occasion and the speech suggest, with another occasion and another speech, in which a statesman of a different type was the central figure. It is but a few weeks since the return to Canada of the leader of the Government, in the zenith of his power, flushed with what the public were given to understand had been brilliant diplomatic achievements in England, and elated by especial marks of royal favor, was conceived by his followers to be a fitting occasion for a grand display of party fealty, which would testify their pride in and devotion to their Chieftain, and afford the latter the opportunity addressing the people at large upon the position, progress and prospects of the great "National Policy," which he had been engaged in shaping and developing. Thoughtful people on both sides of politics looked forward with anxious interest to his utterances upon the experience of his experimental tariff, upon the great railway project whose ominous burden of taxation loomed up unpleasantly in the near future, upon the method to be adopted for colonizing the great North-west, upon the financial prospects of the country in view of enormous obligations which he had undertaken, and especially upon the practical results of his mission to England, which had had particular reference to all these subjects. The banquet to Sir John Macdonald at Quebec was one of the most brilliant and successful events of the kind that had ever taken place in Canada. It was well calculated to arouse the enthusiasm, inspire the patriotism and to give quickened impulse to the springs of energy and ambition and oratory, in the man who was the hero of the hour. All Canada knew the next day of the Dead Sea fruit which turned to ashes in the mouths of those expectant political revellers—knew that the most insignificant of all that assembly had to blush for very shame at the deplorable spectacle which their idol presented to them—saw him in the hour of what should have been his greatest triumph, the maudlin victim of the poorest human weakness—and read with pain and regret, the vapid and incoherent platitudes and fuddled self-glorification, which had to take the place of the statesmanlike exposition of great national affairs, to which they had looked forward. Let our readers compare the man, the opportunity and the speech of that occasion, with Edward Blake at Bowmanville, and contrast the insane stupidity, the flippant garrulity, and criminal weakness of the former, with the thoughtful earnestness, the broad statesmanlike ability, the logical power, and the devotion to patriotic duty, of the latter, and they will have little difficulty in choosing which of the two men is the honester politician, the safer guide, or the sincerer patriot,—the one, the symptom of expedient, guided by no principle, seeking at the idea of political resistance, whose sole object is "office" by whatever means it may be obtained and retained; the other a man of honest impulses, patriotic purpose, and indomitable integrity, regarding government not as a single object of party attainment, but as a sacred trust, to be obtained by pure means from the popular intelligence, and to be used as an end to the moral and material elevation and advancement of the state.

A PUBLIC PARK.

The condition of the cities and larger towns of Ontario is not having public parks to beautify them and add a sanitary feature to them, is one of the first things that strikes a stranger. This is the result of carelessness, or rather want of thought on the part of the people who have had in hand the laying out and subsequent building up of the towns. So far has this indifference been carried that now the necessity for parks is seen, there is also apparent a great difficulty in procuring grounds for the purpose. Peterborough is not singular in this respect, though it is in a better position in the way of procuring breathing places than most towns of its size. But present difficulties, however great, should not prevent efforts to remedy these defects in our towns and cities; for the longer action is put off the harder it will always become. Lots are continually being taken up and built upon, while others that remain vacant are constantly increasing in value, owing to the improvements made in their vicinity, and to the general rise in the price of land in any position in an improving and desirable town. Hence the necessity of action by the men of to-day toward remedying a defect left by those of the past years. It is not an impossible thing in this town to yet secure the laying out of a respectable sized park, and certainly the cost of so doing will be less in the years immediately to follow than it will be if the task be left for five, ten, fifteen or twenty years to come. We feel confident that the permanent ratepayers, by whom we mean property holders and long lease holders, will not object to a reasonable tax toward such an end; as the improvement would directly enhance the value of their property to a degree that would in the end return the money invested. Indeed we think that those whose properties lay close to the district selected for a park, might well be willing to add to their share of a general tax liberal subscriptions toward paying for its beautification. We cannot see how there can be any difference of opinion on the wisdom of prompt action in the direction of providing one place of beauty for pleasant recreation during the summer to our citizens, young and old, rich and poor. Where they may enjoy the luxury of grassy turf and leafy shade, away from narrow streets and lanes, and out of sight of imprisoned walls. The work can be well begun in the coming spring, the preliminaries being arranged during the winter, and we can see no reason why it should be longer delayed.

AN UPHEAVAL IN IRELAND.

While the government of Lord Beaconsfield has been bedizening the public with empty visions of Imperial greatness, laying up wrath for the future in international quarrels, in bloody and costly aggrandisement, and entangling alliances and responsibilities, all the while rolling up the enormous national deficit, they have been altogether neglectful of the domestic duties of a government, and have allowed burning questions of social policy to fester and canker, until they are suddenly confronted with a convulsion of popular feeling, which care and attention would have allayed and ameliorated, and which now forces itself upon public attention in a shape little short of a threatening revolution in Ireland. The mutterings and rumblings of popular discontent and difficulty have long been unheeded by a Premier engrossed in his dreams of Imperial power and splendor, till they have burst out in a voice, loud, threatening, determined, and unmistakeable. Had the wise paternal policy of Mr. Gladstone been adhered to, and the work of ameliorating the condition of the Irish people upon which he entered, been prosecuted, as he would have done it, with patriotism and earnestness, we should have heard nothing to-day of the loudly expressed resentment at the unjust relations of the Irish people with the soil in which they have an inalienable interest, and with the United Kingdom. Now that the question is forced upon public attention in a manner that would make it criminal to trifle with it or hesitate to deal with it, it remains to be seen how far the government will venture to go in concession to the cry that comes from Ireland for relief from an odious and unjust system. That the Irish people have grievances, is undeniable; though their demands at the same time are unreasonable, a fact due to the procrastinating and temporising policy of Beaconsfield, whose laissez faire method has irritated and provoked the public mind beyond the bounds of judgment and moderation. That he will be compelled to take some action to allay public feeling is inevitable; but it is not to him that they must look for a permanent solution of the existing difficulties. Before long the great humane popular heart of Britain will have the opportunity of again expressing its feeling, and of choosing new leaders for the people. When Mr. Gladstone comes back to the helm of state, as he surely will, then the Irish people will look with confidence, which will not be misplaced, to a mutual effort to bring about a fair, equitable and just balance between all the interests of Ireland, which are now so dangerously and so deplorably misplaced.

LOST OPPORTUNITIES.

The Tory press is never wearied with vaunting the Parliamentary support which Ontario gives to the taxation machine at Ottawa, and boasts loudly that that majority truly represents the will of the people of this Province, and one might almost imagine the Mail sincere in its expressions of Ontario's "loyalty" to Sir John and the N. P. But we need not doubt that the organs know well that the people have long ago found them out, and that the meretricious charms of the "National Policy" delusion have vanished from the popular gaze, in view of the unpleasant practical experiences with which that misnamed policy has made them acquainted. In fact, we have excellent reason to believe that the very last thing Sir John and his friends are anxious to do, is to fairly test the taxation tariff before any intelligent body of electors in this Province. Had he so desired, and had he not thought more of office than of honor, Sir John might have appealed to the people on this question when the Marquis of Lorne's refusal to accept his advice to dissolve Mr. Letellier, made it his duty to resign. And he missed another splendid opportunity recently in West Durham. That is a fairly representative agricultural constituency, having, too, large manufacturing interests (one of which, by the way, has vanished out of the county since the N. P. came in); and it is a constituency of more than ordinary intelligence, and one, too, where the majority against the N. P. in 1878 was only 45 votes. If the taxation tariff has been doing all for the people that Tory leaders claim, if it has grown in public favor as Tory organs assert, they should have been only too anxious to place a candidate in the field in West Durham, and to have counted at the polls the estimate of the N. P. which the electors had formed upon experience. But the Tory party were afraid to face the music, had not the courage to meet a verdict of the electors, and preferred seeing a Liberal elected, rather than make manifest the deplorable weakness of the "rickety infant" which Sir John and Sir Charles, and Sir Leonard the Hum Hunter, are endeavoring to invigorate at the public expense. So, too, in North Simcoe. It is well understood that Mr. Dalton McCarthy is to succeed Mr. Macdonald, the present Minister of Justice, whose incompetence was so painfully manifested last session, and that the delay is only due to the fact the Mr. McCarthy dare not go back to his constituents to-day, and demand from them for the Government and the N. P. the same support he succeeded in obtaining, in September of 1878. The fact is plainly evident, that the Government know the people only await the opportunity to give expression to their condemnation of the ruinous fiscal nostrums they have been compelled to swallow; and the Tory leaders are by no means anxious in the same direction. But "the whirligig of time brings in its revenges," and if the people were grossly deceived and misled in 1878, they will be able to set themselves right at least when the term of the present Parliament expires. And, in the meantime, they will have acquired a dearly-bought experience, which will make them exceedingly chary of political quacks and fiscal panaceas for a long time to come.

THE GRAND JUNCTION R. R.

This sleepy company has at last manifested some signs of returning vitality, and among their first movements is one of Mr. Hector Cameron, who obtained a rule nisi for a mandamus to compel the county of Peterborough to issue $75,000 of debentures as a bonus. Steps have been taken to defend on the part of the county. The By-law which the Grand Junction Company wishes now to enforce has been dead for years, and we cannot believe that the courts will ever order it to be carried into effect. The whole present action is believed induced to hinder immediate commencement of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway, as the promoters of the Grand Junction have no sympathy in this county.

THE PRINTING JOB AT OTTAWA.

Even the most orthodox Tory prints find it prudent to say as little as possible, and that little in as mildly deprecatory a way as possible of the infamous printing job at Ottawa. Even the Montreal Gazette has to admit that the matter amounted to authorised blackmailing of contractors; though it does not pursue the subject to its logical conclusion, viz., that the people who are actually swindled are the taxpayers of the country out of whose pockets the money comes, and that Government are not only guilty of complicity in, but are directly responsible for the disreputable job. The facts are simply, that the government allowed certain irresponsible parties to tender for the public printing, among them a well-known hanger on of the Ministry and politics adventurer, whose tender was reported lowest. Ultimately the present contractors, McLean, Rogers & Co., after buying out the intervening men of straw, were compelled to pay the bogus tenderer $2,000 a year for five years as a "royalty" on the contract, or ten thousand dollars of money in excess of the price which they could have done the work at a profit for. But it may be said, the government could not prevent these parties from tendering. True; but it must not be forgotten that when Mr. Mackenzie was in power, he adopted the wholesome rule of compelling tenderers to deposit ten per cent. of the amount of the contract tendered for, as a guarantee of good faith, the deposit becoming forfeitable in the event of the tenderer refusing to go on with the work if awarded to him, or in event of any attempt at "crookedness" being manifested. By this means only responsible men could tender, and as a consequence, the tenders were invariably of a practical kind, and at the lowest safe figure. Had this rule been maintained, the "contractor" who succeeded in sweating McLean, Roger, & Co., or the public, out of $10,000 would never have had the opportunity, as he could not have made the deposit, nor would he be likely able to secure people's money to risk on the speculation. But this is essentially a Government for the contractors, the monopolists, and the millionaires. Their business is to make rich men richer at the expense of the general public; to throw benefactions from the public chest to needy followers; and to make the way to get money easy to contractors and contractors' rings, in order that the latter may be able to be liberal when the "Club" calls upon them about election times, or whenever the party funds are low. And so the wise and prudent regulations which Mr. Mackenzie put in force for the protection of the public interests are set aside, and the road to riches opened for all that class of harpies who prey upon public plunder, and who, somehow or other, always attach themselves to the Tory party, and are always to be found gorged at Ottawa when the Tories are in power. This class had a pretty thin diet when the Reform party had the control of public affairs; but the present government is helping them to make hay while the sun shines.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A. P. O. Savings Bank statement shows the deposits during the month of October to have been $231,266.

The bank statements for October shows the total capital authorised to have been $97,366,666; capital paid up, $80,332,234; notes in circulation, $22,201,067; total liabilities, $103,326,962. The total assets were $176,756,627.

In the three elections which took place last week in the counties of Bonne, Sherbrooke, and Lovis, Missisquoi Lynch, Robertson and Paquet, were returned by large majorities. This gives Mr. Chapleau's Cabinet a fair working majority.

The official Gazette of Saturday contains the official proclamation of the return to the House of Commons of Hon. H. Blake for West Durham and F. J. Barnard for Yale. Mr. Barnard is a contractor, and of course will vote with the contractors' government.

The Supreme Court closed its labors last week and adjourned till December 15th, when judgment in reserved cases will be given.

It is understood that the protest entered against the return of J. Letellier, M. P. for St. Hyacinthe, Que., has been withdrawn.

Hon. Wm. McDougall, "Wandering Willie," is at last, it seems, to find a resting place for the soles of his feet, and a pleasant and lucrative end to the career of a "practical politician." It is understood that he is about to take up his residence at Ottawa, and to seek the seclusion that the Civil Service grants.

Mr. Bunster, the irrepressible anti-Chinese member for Vancouver, is after the B. C. Lieutenant-Governorship. He has some qualifications that ought to recommend him to the consideration of the Chieftain. He sold his seat to Hincks in 1872, and he is a jolly-good-fellow of the most ri-tooral-looral description.

The Port Hope "Daily News" came to a premature end on Monday, having succumbed to the inevitable on that day. It is to be hoped the experience which the backers of the venture have purchased may prove useful to them, they evince more wisdom in dropping a hopeless undertaking than they did wit in entering upon it. The News will continue weekly, and the daily will be remembered as a "struggling industry" crushed under the N. P.

Notice is given that application will be made next session for an act to incorporate a railway company with full powers to construct a line of railway from Sault St. Marie eastward to a point at or near Lake Nipissing, to connect with the line of the Canada Central Railway Company from the east, and the Ontario and Pacific Junction Railway Company from the south, with power to construct or assist in the construction of a railway bridge across the Ste. Marie River, to connect with the railway systems of the North Western States.

The decision of the Supreme Court having vacated the representation of North Ontario in the House of Commons, and Mr. Wheeler's disqualification following the refusal of the court to re-open the case, it will now become the duty of the Liberals of the riding to find another candidate upon whom the party can heartily unite in opposition to Mr. W. H. Gibbs. They have ample material at home to choose from, and need not go abroad for a standard-bearer. The election will give an opportunity for a fair expression of opinion by a representative agricultural constituency upon the merits or demerits of the new taxation tariff, and the result will, on that account, be looked to with special interest.

In the matter of the County of Russell election petition, the member elect, Mr. Morgan, has by his counsel notified Mr. Baker that he abandoned all claims to the seat and would disclaim it at the trial, and further, that if he (Mr. Baker) should claim the seat, that his right would be protested on the grounds that the election had not been conducted according to the principles of the ballot, that he (Mr. Baker), did not have a legal majority, and that bribery and corruption were practised at the said election. It is very doubtful, however, if Mr. Morgan possess the power to divest himself of the seat in which he was placed by the decision of the county judge, at least before the meeting of the Legislature and the election of the Speaker, when he may resign.

Mr. John Lowe, Secretary of the Department of Agriculture, left for England on Saturday, it is said on the obsequious Civil Service worshippers at Ottawa, on "business connected with the encouragement of tenant farmers' immigration." It would seem that the salaried officers of Canada in the United Kingdom are not competent to do the business for which they are paid, and so Mr. Lowe's duties in the Department are to be neglected, or another man paid to perform them, while he goes a-junketing to England at the public expense. It is known, too, that Mr. Lowe's family have acquired large tracts of land in certain districts in the North-West, and it may be found that the absent Secretary will not only derive pleasure, but profit not altogether departmental, from his excursion.

Tragedy on Georgian Bay.

WRECK OF THE STEAMER WAUBUNO —PASSENGERS AND CREW LOST.

Great excitement was caused on Monday morning, by a report from Waubaushene, that the wreck and cargo of a steamer supposed to be the Magnetawan had been seen by fishermen on the Georgian Bay. The Magnetawan, however, arrived all safe and reported that she left Collingwood on Saturday, at 2 p.m., the Waubuno having left at 4 a.m. the same day, with passengers and freight, among the former being Mr. W. B. Fisher, publisher of the Parry Sound North Star. The Magnetawan encountered heavy weather and lay at anchor at Christian Island till Monday morning, when she went on to Parry Sound. It is supposed the Waubuno was lost in the severe heavy weather.

Mr. Miller M. P. P. at once started the tug Mittie Grew to Moose Point in the hope of rescuing some of the crew or passengers who might possibly have got on some of the islands, but she returned on Tuesday morning reporting having found a portion of the wreck on the Haystacks, 5 miles north-west of Moose Point. The life-boat was found bottom up. The shores of the sands are strewn with the cargo and wreck of the steamer. No trace of the passengers or crew has been discovered.

The Waubuno plied between Collingwood and Parry Sound, in connection with the Northern Railway. She was built by Messrs. J. & W. Beatty, of St. Catharines, in 1865, and was by many considered quite unfit for the route, especially at this season of the year.

The following are the names of the crew and passengers as far as can be learned:—Crew—Captain, G. P. Burkitt, Collingwood; mate, Alex. Forbes, Collingwood; engineer, James McQuade, Nottawa; purser, John Rowland, jr.; wheelsmen, T. McMurchy and J.B. W. Harris; firemen, Robert Cook and Patrick O'Grady, all of Collingwood. Deck hands, J. Hyott and Wingrove, Porter and B. Wylie; waiter, George Bass; ladies' maid, Mary Hyott; cook, J. Hall (coloured). Passengers—B. Noel Fisher, of the Parry Sound Star; Dr. Donke and wife, of Mitchell, going to Parry Sound to settle; they were only married three weeks; Mr. Sylvester and wife, Parry Sound; three men, supposed father and two sons, farmers from the country; Gellin, of Gananoque. These are all the passengers known.

Remarkable cure of an inflamed tear-duct or passage to the eye without an operation.—Mrs. Gibson, who has a large and extensive confectionery and candy store at No. 25 Bast 42d Street, near the Grand Central Depot, was about to have a silver tube inserted in the tear passage of her left eye. The enlargement and inflammation were very great. Before submitting to the operation, friend Dr. Giles' Liniment, rubbed in carefully over the inflamed duct. The inflammation disappeared, the passage became clear and wet, through the tube, able to do without a regular operation. Also took Dr. Giles' Liniment internally, a dessertful three times a day, in a wineglass of water.

1879, at half past two o'clock in the afternoon, at the Chambers of the said Master, (over the Toronto bank,) in Peterborough, the following lands in one parcel, viz:—

The North-East Quarter of Lot Number 18, in the 9th Concession of the Township of Smith, in the County of Peterborough.

The property is situated about two miles from Selwyn, six from Lakefield and ten from Peterborough, with good travelled roads to each place. There is a school house within half a mile of the lot.

About thirty acres are under good cultivation about ten in grass and the remainder in wood. There is a small log barn on the premises.

TERMS:—Ten per cent of the purchase money to be paid at the time of sale, and the remainder within thirty days thereafter, with-out interest.

There will be a reserved bid. In other respects the conditions of sale are the standing conditions of the Court of Chancery. Further information can be had on application at the law offices of Messrs. Dennistoun Bros. & Hall, and Messrs. Poussette & Roger, and at the Master's office, Peterborough.

Dated 26th November, 1879.

PETERBOROUGH, NOV'R. 27, 1879.

If You Want a real good blanket, cheap (either Grey or White), go to I. Robinson & Co.'s.

St. Andrew's Society.—The annual sermon to the above Society will be preached in St. Andrew's Church by the Rev. Alex. Bell, on Sunday evening.—St. Andrew's day—at the close of which a collection will be taken up in aid of the charitable funds of the society.

Lakefield Items.—We understand Mr. George Gerrow has started running a passenger stage from Lakefield to Peterborough; leaving the former place at 10 a.m. each day, returning will leave Peterborough at 3 p.m. Fare each way, 50c.

Methodist Church Anniversary.—We have been desired to announce that the ladies of the congregation of the Gerrow Street Methodist Church are requested to meet the Trustees in the Bible class room this afternoon at 3 o'clock, to make arrangements for the approaching anniversary.

Madame Pentafilie's Burlesque Troupe.—A burlesque variety troupe under the above name, gave entertainments in Brodburn's Hall, on Friday and Saturday evenings last, if such disgusting and obscene exhibitions may be termed such. The troupe is the same one that received a fitting appaz some weeks ago in the Mail, on account of the class of entertainments given in the Lyceum theatre in Toronto.

"The Grocery Store."—Mr. Maxwell Hall has this week been re-sign-ing his shop. We don't wish our readers to infer then he has given up business, but on the contrary has been placing new signs on his shop, so that the public in passing may the more easily distinguish "The Grocery Store," where great bargains are being offered the year round, and especially now approaching the holiday season.

New Barber Shop.—Mr. W. B. Nicholson, formerly with Messrs. Mitchell & Robinson, has commenced business for himself, and has opened out this week on Hunter St., opposite the Huffman House. He is having his shop fitted up with new chairs and furniture, and is bound to have it first-class in every respect. Being so favorably known there is little doubt but that he will receive a share of public support.

"Sheering with their Customers."—Our weekly contemporary endeavors to give one of our conscripting bonfaces men a flattering local in its issue, under the above heading. If the firm understands what the item is intended to convey, it is more than the general public do. The inference is that the the firm have advanced their prices which is not the case. They are offering great inducements to cash customers. When the advance in wool took place we would like to know!

Teachers' Association.—The annual meeting of the Teachers' Association for the Town and County of Peterborough, will be held in the Collegiate Institute buildings on Friday and Saturday of next week, 5th and 6th of December. A very interesting programme has been arranged for both days. Mr. Jas. Hughes, Public School Inspector for the City of Toronto, and Mr. J. H. Knight, Inspector for East Victoria, are announced to take part in the proceedings.

Farewell Banquet.—Mr. A. D. Braithwaite was entertained to a farewell dinner at Mr. Turver's Club house, on Saturday evening. Mr. Postmaster Rogers, President of the Club presided, the Vice-chair being occupied by Mr. C. A. Weller. Considerable regret was expressed at his departure. Mr. Braithwaite is a gentleman of whom his many friends may well feel proud, he having by his ability, courtesy, and attention to business, earned his promotion in a much shorter time than is usual.

Make a Note of It.—Good towns are the result of well supported industries, and among other things a newspaper is not the least of these. A well-supported newspaper exerts an influence over business and trade above any other medium. The local paper does more for a town and its business interests than any thing its citizens can patronize. And if business men fail to become educated to this fact, they lose sight of the medium between them and the customers who go where men do not keep their light hid under a bushel.

To Make Gilt-Edged Butter.—Every dairyman wishes to get the top price for his butter. It can be done only by having it perfect in quality and appearance. When the color becomes light it is necessary to add a little of Wells, Richardson, & Co's Perfected Butter Color to keep it up to the June standard. Many well known butter buyers recommend all their patrons to use only this preparation, as it gives the most perfect color. Sold by Druggists and Merchants. 47-4ins.

Grand Bon-Spell.—The Peterborough Carl ingClub are now busily engaged arrangi y for a grand bon-spell during the month of January, to far, the Port Hope, Cobourg, Bowmanville, Newcastle, Orillia, Lindsay and Keene clubs have promised to take part in it. The competition will be for a silver cup, valued at fifty dollars, offered by the Peterborough club. Silver cups at present held by Messrs. Deanistoun and Adam Hall, will be competed for by members of the club, as well as four champion belts given by the managing committee.

Pinafore.—On Thursday evening last, Mc Dowell's Shaughraun Company presented the comic opera of 'H. M.S. Pinafore,' in Bradburn's Hall. The audience was one of the largest and most select that has ever yet been seen in the hall, every seat both in the body of the hall and the gallery being occupied. The audience generally were a little disappointed at the manner in which the opera was rendered—the singing being much inferior to what was expected. It is evident the drama, and not the opera, is the entertainment in which the Shaughrauns excell.

The Remember Almanac.—As has been customary in former years, we have again arranged, this season, for supplying each of the subscribers of the EXAMINER with a copy of the "EXAMINER Farmer's Almanac" for 1880. It will contain, besides the usual weather predictions, and monthly memoranda, a large quantity of valuable statistics, relating to Dominion and Provincial affairs, postal and bank ing laws, as well as a large number of valuable family recipes. A limited number of advertisements will be inserted, and as it cannot but be acknowledged a valuable medium of advertising, all those wishing to secure a space would do well to send in their orders at an early date.

How to Build up a Town.—An exchange gives the following rules for the improvement of a town, which we think the people of Peterborough might do well to study:—1. Sell your building lots at reasonable prices. 2. If you can afford to do so, donate a building lot to some large business enterprise, and thereby enhance the value of town property. 3. Induce business men to locate in your town. 4. Patronize the business of your own town. 5. Speak well of worthy public enterprises. 6. If anything should be undertaken that may be of benefit to the town, do not speak ill of it to others, because you happen to be prejudiced against it. 7. Speak well to strangers of your own town and its people.

Oriental Pottery Ware.—As will be seen by an advertisement in another column, Messrs. Brownscombe & Goodfellow are now making a specialty of the manufacture of Oriental Pottery Ware, specimens of which were exhibited at the Central Fair, and were so much admired by all who saw them. Since the Centennial Exposition in 1876 the manufacture of oriental ware has become a leading line in the largest potteries of the United States, and vases in Egyptian, Japanese and Grecian decalcomanie finish, are now much in vogue as mantle and drawing room ornaments. We believe Messrs. Brownscombe & Goodfellow are the only potters in this part of Ontario, if not in the Province, who have attempted its manufacture and from the elegant specimens they have turned out, we have little doubt but they will find their enterprise handsomely rewarded, through large and increased sales. In the manufacture of other lines this firm are equally progressive and enterprising, and have secured the very best workmen to be obtained. They invite inspection of their goods at their warerooms, Murray St., opposite the drill shed.

Tragedy at Millbrook.—On Saturday last a lamentable tragedy occurred near Millbrook. Samuel and Mary Hunter reside with their parents, well-to-do people. Being a few miles from the village, and had been engaged on fair-ing in killing pigs. The business of the day concluded, the brother and sister were as it happened left alone on the spot, when without a word of warning, or any previous indication of anything being wrong, Mary seized a large butcher's knife, and plunged it into her brother's abdomen, inflicting a terrible wound, which must necessarily be fatal. Samuel sank to the ground with a loud cry, while the unhappy young woman sat down beside him, evidently not realizing the dreadful deed which she had perpetrated. There had been no quarrel or cause of quarrel between the two; in fact the most affectionate relations existed between them up to the time of the murder, which can only be accounted for on the ground of temporary mental aberration on the part of the sister. It seems she had been subject to epileptic fits and when so afflicted was subject to violent outbreaks of temper. It is supposed that one of these spells came upon her at the time, and when the sight of blood during the killing of the pigs had wrought upon her disordered intellect and led her in a moment of mad frenzy to commit the frightful deed.

Proposed.—Mr. Ruddick is daily expected to take the place of Mr. Bunkworthy.

Keep Your Feet Dry.—If you want to keep your feet dry, warm and comfortable, get a pair of fish boots, rubbers or overshoes at Lemoure's, where a large stock is now being offered.

New Curtain.—Messrs. J. D. Tully & Co. have this week placed a handsome new curtain in their shop window. Mr. Tully is constantly adding new attractions to his handsome and well arranged shop.

Accident.—We regret to learn that Mr. Absalom Ingram, Ashburnham, received a severe fall on Monday afternoon last, on the farm of Mr. Zacchaeus Burnham, fracturing his leg below the knee. Under medical treatment he is progressing as favorably as possible.

Lakefield Matters Dull.—W. Harper is now prepared to sell harness, horse clothing, trunks and valises at exceedingly low prices. If you want a sewing machine of the best manufacture—Wanzer D., Wilson A., Raymond or Louise—try him and see what money will do. 46-13 ins.

Weights and Measures.—On Saturday last the Inspector of Weights and Measures at Bellevville made several seizures of illegal measures used on the Market. As our local Inspector, Mr. Cahill, is determined to enforce the law in his division, parties who use illegal weights and measures may expect similar treatment.

Absent but not Forgotten.—It is understood that Ben Irvin, well known in these parts has gone to see his Uncle Samuel, on a visit of indefinite length. Sundry of Ben's creditors, are disconsolate over the fact that circumstances did not permit him to pay his respects to them before lighting out.

Sizing Up.—Another new stock of boots and shoes has just been received by S. White to suit up the lines upon which there has been such a rush during his cheap sale. Believing there is more money in the "nine bits sixpence" than the slow dollar, Mr. White has determined to continue his great clearing sale for some time longer, during which time genuine bargains may be expected.

Burglary.—On Sunday morning last it was discovered that during the previous night some person or persons had effected an entrance into Rogers' flour mill, Ashburnham. The entrance was made through the door on the west side, where two panes of glass had been broken and the bar inside, fastening the door, removed. A black soft felt hat was found on the floor, which is supposed to have been left by the burglar in a hurried departure. As nothing so far has been missed it is difficult to conjecture what object the visitor had in view.

Brieflets.—Constable McGhee sports a new uniform. It was made by Mr. Robert Weir and is acknowledged a good fit.....Lots of beef now doing in town last Saturday. The market was brisk, and commodities brought good prices.....What? Never! Well, hardly ever have you smoked nicer tobacco than the Gold Flake. Buy it at Rahlige & Shaws.....School Board meeting next Tuesday evening.....Handsome X mas cards at Wilmo & Davis'.....The town and Ashburnham volunteer companies are drilling one night each week.

Auction Sales.—The following auction sales are announced to take place as below:—

TUESDAY, Dec. 9th.—Mr. Charles Merriam will sell by public auction on his farm, near Hiawatha, Indian Reserve, a number of horses, cattle, sheep, etc. Sale at 12 o'clock, noon. Lunch provided. 12 months credit. Gilbert & Moore, Auctioneers.

On TUESDAY, Dec. 2nd.—Farm Stock and Implements belonging to Mr. C. J. Seymour, on his premises, east half of the west half of lot 29 in the 11th concession of Otonabee. At the close of the stock sale the farm will be offered for sale. Gilbert & Moore, Auctioneers.

On TUESDAY, December 2nd.—Farm stock, implements, etc., the property of John Telford, at the residence of James Freeborn, near Monaghan's School House. George Mc Dmoyle, Auctioneer.

Counterfeit Bills.—A Montreal despatch warns the public against counterfeit bills of the Dominion Bank, said to have been sent in from the United States, and our readers will do well to be on the look out for "the crooked." The paper of the bogus bills is rough and clumsy, the signature of Mr. Taylor is quite at variance with the genuine, and unwarrantable liberties have been taken by the counterfeiters with the beard of Jacques Cartier.

Larceny at Otonabee.—While Mr. Moore and family, of Otonabee, were at church on Sunday 16th a thief entered their residence, and as was ascertained the next day, when the robbery was discovered, purloined a revolver and other articles and $19 in money. A woman of shady reputation, named McCutcheon, and her son Albert, having been seen around the neighborhood, a warrant was issued for their arrest, which was effected by constables Cook and Striker, and $11 of the stolen money recovered. Mr. Breackenridge, J.P., sent the woman, with a young lad found with her when arrested, to Peterborough for trial at the General Sessions. The lad was sentenced to three years in the Provincial Reformatory, and the woman to one month in the common jail, by the judge on Tuesday.

A Terrible Affliction.—About a year ago Mr. Jos. Morgan, a well-to-do farmer of the township of Galway, developed symptoms of insanity, and for a time became the subject of much distress to his family. These symptoms, however, passed away, and to the affliction it was thought, was averted. About a month ago, however, the evidences of the mind diseased re-appeared more unmistakably than ever, and were accompanied by a disposition to violence. About two weeks ago he wandered into the woods, and remained all night, but a search being instituted he was found and brought home. A few days later he made a violent attack on a neighbor named White, armed with a pair of scissors, and succeeded in inflicting two or three stabs, though not of a serious nature. It was then thought advisable by his friends that he should be placed under restraint, and accordingly he arrived at the Cork House, here, on Friday evening last, in charge of Mr. J. Dettin, and his son, Wm. Morgan. He was brought before the Magistrate on Saturday morning, and remanded for a few days for medical examination. The mania of the unfortunate man is of the emotional religious order.

St. Andrew and Scotsmen.—The celebration of the festival of the Scottish Saint will be held on Monday evening at the Choate House, and the sons of Scotia desire to make this celebration one of their best. There are several reasons why this should be: Scotchmen are admittedly fond of everything originating in their Fatherland, and are slow to allow any old Caledonian custom to fall into disuse or be neglected. All, therefore who are true to home memories and hallowed associations should be in the van in promoting this peculiarly Scottish festival. The season of the year approaches too, when those on whom Providence has not bestowed lavishly, may require to be assisted by "brither Scots" who have been more fortunate in securing abundance of this world's good things. This alone is incentive enough to the charitably disposed to induce them to add to the common store a few dollars to aid in warding off the "cold wintry blast," or to meet demands which the hard times have not been conducive to making provision for. St. Andrew's day returns only once a year, and only once a year affords the opportunity to exhibit Scottish liberality. Let not, therefore, one of Scotia's sons be absent on their Saint's festival day, but especially let not one of the accustomed dollars be missing, for no year in the history of the past of the Society has progressionated greater necessity for liberality, from the fact that many are likely to require a little assistance owing to scarcity of employment. It is true that Scottish thrift and Scottish knack of "handing on to siller," leaves very few who require aid, but even this is a strong reason why all should merge a portion of their funds in a common stock, so that not one of their brethren may suffer.

Skating and Curling Rink.—A meeting of the Directors of the Peterborough Skating and Curling Rink Company was held on the previous afternoon last, when among other business transacted was the fixing of the scale of prices for skaters tickets for this year which was as follows:

Gentlemen's Season Tickets	$5 00
Ladies Season Tickets	2 00
Juveniles, under 15 years	1 00
Holders of Curlers Tickets	3 00
Tickets good for six days for strangers visiting the town	0 75
Single Admission	0 25

In the case of tickets for juveniles if procured through misrepresentation as to age they will be cancelled. The arrangement for family tickets will be the same as last year, viz:—Full rates to two persons and half rates to the remaining members of the family. Arrangements are to be made with the Band for playing on Friday evening of each week from 7 o'clock till 9.45. Wilson & Davis and J. I. Davidson have been appointed agents for the sale of tickets, which will be issued in a few days. Since last season a number of improvements have been made in the Rink and we think it can now be safely said that Peterborough possesses the best Rink of any town in the province, and it is to be hoped the public will strengthen the hands of the Company in making further conveniences. It cannot be admitted by the Directors have placed the tickets at very moderate rates—in fact much below the prices paid in other towns, where not near the accommodation is offered, and in this we think they have acted wisely. In no better way, perhaps, could they secure that benevolent tendency to make the Rink a centre of attraction during the winter evenings. The establishment of the arrangements and appointment of last season will also do much to secure liberal patronage this year.

Shelling.—This frosty weather causes our shellists to look anxiously for the freezing of the rink.

Sale.—Gilbert & Moore offer for sale on Saturday the farm of Mr. Eugene Sullivan, of Smithman, on the Chemong Road at 2 p.m.

The Pulpit.—The Rev. Mr. Withers, late of Ashburnham, occupies the pulpit of the Baptist church on Sunday morning and that of St. Paul's church in the evening.

Mrs. Scott-Siddons.—The citizens who appreciate a high class entertainment should not fail to attend Mrs. Scott-Siddons entertainment in Bradburn's Hall this evening. An excellent programme is announced.

Nearly an Item.—Some person, probably to quite the reporter, on Monday afternoon stopped a horse attached to a cutter coming down Water street, that was doing its best to smoke on time. Such actions tend to destroy the reporter's confidence in mankind.

New Paper.—We have received the first number of a new paper, issued at Trenton, called the Trent Valley Advocate. It is independent in politics, and is a very neatly printed and newsy sheet. We wish the publisher every success in his new venture.

An Ecumenical Prayer.—One of the petitions presented to the Town Council at its last meeting concluded with "and your petitioners will ecumenically pray." The petitioner evidently believes the City Fathers not so bad after all, if an ecumenical prayer will suffice for them.

The Toronto and Ottawa Railroad.—The following by-laws granting bonuses to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway are to be voted on: United townships of Marmora and Lake, $50,000; Madoc and village, $6,000; united townships of Elzivir and Grimsthorpe, $23,000; united townships of Kalador and Anglesea, $10,000.

Fenn.—By reference to Mr. P. D. Doran's advertisement in another part of the EXAMINER, it will be seen that he is offering special inducements in the above line. As he has a large stock of Teas and sugars purchased before the last rise in prices, he will be able to give bargains, his customers deriving the benefit therefrom.

Reading off Objectionable Exhibitions.—Port Hope Town Council has under consideration a By-law to make more stringent regulations to prevent immoral or objectionable exhibitions in that town. In view of the recent visitation of this town by a somewhat question able organization, steps to the same end might not be out of place in Peterborough.

Sabbath School Periodicals.—We have before us copies of the Sabbath School Presbyterian, Golden Hours and Early Days, bright, beautifully illustrated papers, published by Mr. C. Blackett Robinson, 5 Jordan St., Toronto. Any of our readers desiring to secure suitable Sunday School periodicals for the coming year should send for specimen copies before ordering elsewhere. Prices greatly reduced.

Sudden Death.—A very sad death occurred in Cobourg on Monday afternoon. As Arthur Dumble, a boy of 14 years of age, and only son of Mrs. Thomas Dumble, was returning home from school, he fell dead, momentarily, of heart disease. Mr. Thos. Dumble, father of the boy, died suddenly a few years ago of the same disease. Mr. D. W. Dumble left on the evening train to attend the funeral, after hearing the sad intelligence.

Look out for Them.—We would advise our readers to look out for $1 counterfeit bills of the Dominion of Canada, as a large number are in circulation. The counterfeits are splendid imitations of the originals, and are not very easy detected. The only flaw to be noticed is that the dot over the "i" in the name "Dickinson" is very plain in the good ones, while in the counterfeit it is hardly discernible. There is also a dissimilarity in the figures in the date, which will easily be noticed by taking a good bill and comparing them.

Change in the Law for the Election of School Trustees.—We understand that the School Inspectors have been served with copies of the Amended Act of Parliament respecting Elections for School Trustees, from which it appears that instead of being held on the same day as the voting, as has heretofore been the case, the nominations will take place one week previous, on the last Wednesday in December. The election, if there should be more than one candidate, will come off on the Wednesday following.

Poultry Association.—At a meeting of the Midland Poultry Association held on Tuesday evening last, it was decided to hold their annual exhibition in Peterborough on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, the 16th, 11th and 18th of February, 1880. There was a good meeting and the coming exhibition is expected to be a greater success than any previous one given by this Society. A change was made in the entry fees. The amount being fixed at 25 cents to members, and fifty cents to non-members. The prize lists will be distributed during the months of December and January.

Worth Knowing.—Mr. Parker, of the Commercial House, has this fall been making quite a lot of improvements for the convenience and comfort of his guests, and has now increased accommodation for both "man and beast." The table is always furnished with the best viands and the bar with the choicest brands of wines, liquors and cigars. Farmers and others interested will do well to note that he offers free stable room to all who wish to put up at the Commercial. The stable will accommodate fifty horses, and contains a number of box stalls. The sheds are large, warm and very convenient. A new well has been sunk in the yard this fall. Remember the stand, corner of George and Hunter streets, opposite the new Post Office.

The Canada Presbyterian for 1880 is to be greatly improved. It has always been an excellent paper; but under the editorship of Rev. Wm. Inglis, for twelve years a leading writer on the Globe, we expect to see it make many improvements on its hitherto creditable record. Liberal inducements are offered to Club Agents in each locality; and the premium offer to every subscriber is, we believe, quite unprecedented in the history of Canadian journalism. The publisher announces that he will send to every subscriber remitting $2.00 before 1st January next, or joining a club at reduced rates, a pair of companion engravings, by Maclise, the great English historical painter, entitled "The Death of Nelson," and "The Meeting of Wellington and Blucher after the Battle of Waterloo." These are no cheap chromos; but beautiful engravings fitted to adorn the best homes in the land. These pictures can not be had elsewhere, except through the Art Union of England, and then only on payment of a GUINEA EACH. All good Presbyterian readers should subscribe for this family paper, and secure the handsome premium offered with it for the coming year.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The Council met on Monday evening last pursuant to adjournment. Present,—His Worship the Mayor and Councillors Cahill Taylor, Smith, McBain, Robertson, Deane, Griffith and Retherford.

Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Wm. Mills and James Hogan, special auditors, asking for the use of the town books and records after office hours.

From W. H. Moore, in reference to the fence on Rubidge street.

From John McMahon, in reference to back taxes on lot south of Rink street.

From Thos. Pratt, in reference to error of assessment.

From Michael Hedhran, asking for remission of taxes.

From John Morrisey, asking for remuneration for keeping a destitute Frenchman.

From the Chairman and Secretary of the Trent Valley Canal Committee, asking the Council to grant the sum of $1.00 to assist in the expenses of bringing the matter properly before the Government.

From Ellen Johnston, asking remission of her taxes.

From John S. Bird, asking that a dog tax of $1.00 be returned to P. Holland and returned against his property be remitted.

THE AUDITORS'.

In disposing of Messrs. Hogan & Mills' communication

Councillor RUTHERFORD asked if the auditors were legally appointed. He thought they should be appointed by By-law.

The MAYOR said he believed it was illegal for an ex-Councillor to act as an auditor.

Councillors DENNIS and ROBERTSON objected to such technicalities being raised and considered Mr. Mills in every way competent.

Councillor SMITH said as this was a special audit he thought it competent for the Council to appoint any person they saw fit.—the statute providing against the appointment of an ex-Councillor as an auditor was for those appointed regularly. He also took occasion to contradict a statement made by a member of the Council and others on the street to the effect that the reason he favored the audit being made was because Mr. Edwards was opposed to him in politics and he hoped by this means to have him removed. He renounced any such intention, and claimed to have always voted in support of Mr. Edwards.

THE TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

Councillor SMITH, in moving the following resolution, pointed what work had been done so far by the Committee. The most favorable view of the scheme was taken by the members of the Dominion Government, he understood, and from letters he had received he believed it the subject was brought before the Government at the work would be taken up by the Dominion.

Moved by Councillor SMITH, seconded by Councillor ROBERTSON,—That the Treasurer be and is hereby instructed to place to the credit of the Committee appointed to promote the construction of the Trent Valley Canal the sum of $100, as requested in the communication from the Chairman and Secretary of said Committee.—Carried.

AUDITORS' REPORT BEHIND.

The CLERK in the absence of the Chairman of the Street and Bridge Committee, read a report recommending payment of the balance due on contract for Hunter-street bridge—$261; the amount for extras not being allowed.—The report was adopted.

THE COLLECTOR'S ROLL.

Councillor CAHILL, Chairman of the Finance Committee, read the following report from the Town Treasurer:—

Peterborough, 22nd Nov., 1879.

To the Finance Committee of the Town of Peterborough:—

GENTLEMEN,—In respect of the list of appeals and disappointed and errors of assessment given me by the Committee to investigate and report upon, I beg leave to do so as follows, namely:—

The case of George Turner in 1871 is correct.

1875—That of James Alexander is also correct, and is the proper amount for which he was assessed.

1874—Stenson, Robert & Son, is paid and entered on.

1875—Burnham, Rev. Mark, paid his taxes, and although so marked and entered, it is not debited on the Collector's Roll for that year.

1874—Stenson, Jas. T., gave a cheque to the Collector for 1874 for the full amount of his taxes.

1876—John Elder also gave a cheque to the Collector for his taxes for 1876.

1873—Dumble, D. W., appearing on $1,600 assessment, $21.60.

1874—Sawyer, Augustus, appearing on $2,000, amount $64.00.

1874—McBain, William, appearing on $1,800, amount $62.50.

1875—Hall, James A., appearing on $1,800, amount $66.25.

1876—Harty & Co., appearing on $1,800, amount $16.97.

1873—Jackson, Andrew, appears to owe on $6,000, amount $80.00.

1874—Stewart, John, appears to owe on $1,150, amount $37.25.

The two last parties appear to have paid no taxes in the years named. The five parties above them paid a part only. The two above them seems to have paid in full but are credited only in part. The others are referred to above.

Respectfully submitted,
J. EDWARDS, Treasurer.

On motion the report was received.

TIN BOX FOR COMMITTEE PAPERS.

The Clerk was instructed to procure a tin box for keeping the papers of the committees in.

MEMORIALS.

Memorials to the Dominion Government and the Hon. Minister of Public Works in reference to the construction of the Trent Valley Canal were read and ordered to be signed by the Mayor and Clerk.

ASSESSORS' ERRORS.

Moved by Councillor DENNIS, seconded by Councillor ROBERTSON,—That the Clerk be instructed to present the Assessors with an account of the omission of taxes, in account of the Dickson Estate for the assessment of 1875, and report to this Council at next meeting.—Carried.

PAYMENT OF ACCOUNTS.

Councillor CAHILL moved, seconded by Councillor TAYLOR,—That the following accounts be paid:—

Wm. Hain	$ 2 00
McKee & Davidson	12 25
Toker & Co., Printing	1 50
Toker & Co., Stationery	2 75

The report was carried.

REMITTING TAXES.

On motion of Councillor CAHILL, seconded by Councillor TAYLOR,—That the taxes of 1876 returned against the property of J. McMahon and W. Montgomery be remitted.

Moved in amendment by Councillor ROBERTSON, seconded by Councillor DENNIS,—That the Collector be instructed not to press Messrs. McMahon and Montgomery for their arrears of taxes until after the present audit is made.

The motion was withdrawn and the amendment declared carried.

CHARITY.

Councillor YELLAND reported that in the case of Mrs. Williams and Mrs. McGrath, each occupied separate houses, and the town had to give a partial support to each by paying a portion of their rent, as well as providing them with wood. He thought there was nothing to hinder one house accommodating them both, and saving so much of an outlay. The matter was left in his hands to do with it as he saw best.

COMMITTEE MEETINGS.

Councillor ROBERTSON moved for the first reading of a By-law to amend a By-law relating to meetings of Committees.

The motion was, on being submitted, declared lost.

Councillor CAHILL moved, seconded by Councillor DENNIS,—That in future all matters of business coming before this Council be disposed of in open Council and that referring matters to committees be abandoned.

After a somewhat warm discussion the motion was ruled out of order by the Mayor.

Council adjourned for two weeks.

Police Court.

The principal cases which came before the Police Magistrate during the last week were as follows:—

NON-PAYMENT OF WAGES.

Jessie Mack charged Emma Turver with the above offence. Judgment, wages $5.50 and costs $2.50, to be paid on or before the 8th Dec., 1879.

SUPPOSED TO BE INSANE.

Thomas R. White laid an information against Thomas Morgan, charging that he was dangerous to be at large. The parties both live in the township of Galway. The Magistrate remanded the prisoner for a week, so that the good surgeon might examine him.

EXPOSING INDECENT PICTURES.

David W. Dumble charged Geo. W. Collins, Business Manager of Mme. Franklin's Burlesque Troupe, with exposing indecent photographs in the archway of the Town Hall. A number of witnesses were examined who gave very conflicting evidence. The case was dismissed without costs. The Magistrate declining to say whether the pictures were indecent or not on the evidence.

SELLING LIQUOR WITHOUT A LICENSE.

Aaron Cox, License Inspector, had Francis Quinn up on two charges, (1) exposing liquor for sale, (2) selling liquor without a license. Several witnesses were examined, and the cases adjourned until Dec. 2nd, at 10 a.m.

DRUNK AND DISORDERLY.

Corne"ius Daly was charged by P. C. McGhee with being drunk and disorderly on the street. He pleaded guilty—fine $1.00 and costs $4.50, or in default 21 days in jail. He went up.

AN IDYL.

He sat on the shore as the sun went down,
Went down in the depths of the wide, wide sea;
To a chance observer it might have seemed
That he didn't go home as the night drew on;
But he didn't, and therefore it might appear
That the sister element knew best.

He sat on the shore as the morning sun
Shone out from the east over sea and land;
He sat, I remark, as the sun arose,
On the very same spot where he sat at the close
Of the previous day, and the Lord only knows
Why he did it—I don't understand.

Perhaps he was searching for coral reefs;
Perhaps he was trying to keep him cool;
Perhaps the breezes from over the sea,
As they toyed with his tresses said, "Come to me;"
The field of conjecture is wide you see.
Perhaps he was only a fool.

A LEGEND OF ALL-HALLOW EVE.

Marjorie Cameron's Experience at Glen Ronald.

CHAPTER I.

Over the distant Surrey hills lingered the opal tints of sunset fading in the purpling haze of twilight. There seemed to be a listening silence. Save the passionless monotone of the river, the far-off beat of an oar, the murmurous sough of a tall brotherhood of pines, the sleepy twitter of an uneasy bird, all things else were asleep. The western horizon still glowed from a 'radiance like golden aisles penetrating through angelic chapels to the shekinah of the west,' and the gray shadows deepened as the stars kept silent watch. Then the fragrant air vibrated with the song of a love-lorn nightingale.

A cool, damp mist swept up from the river; but still I lingered at the garden wall, waiting, expecting.

At nineteen I was simply Marjorie Cameron, an orphan, an heiress, and, they said, a beauty, but an untamed Highland lassie. My mind wandered purposeless, adrift, filled with quaint conceits, sown first by my old nurse, who hushed me to sleep with all manner of grim tales of the Borders—banshees and second-sight, and ballads of Douies of Arkinlow, and the Wild Huntsman, in whose existence I held firm faith. But the little neglected lassie was at last remembered by some aristocratic relations, and I was transplanted from the remote glen and its beloved gorse and heather to the exotic atmosphere of Lindesmere, the residence of my aunt, Lady Seton, and her daughters Edith and Louise, within a drive of London. Three or four years of boarding-school training failed to make me a proper society puppet, so I was gradually left to myself. I devoured indiscriminately all legends and traditions treating of the supernatural, peopling the pages of poetry and romance. I dabbled weakly in psychology, animal magnetism, and the hazy witcheries of superstition; nothing enchanted me more than a tale of wraith, or bogie, or warlock, and my dreams were all of something I had yet to discover. Nothing could disturb my faith in Oriental fatalism. I fully comprehended the longing to look into the future which had charmed with its weird fascination the philosophers and astrologers on the moonad plains of Chaldea and by the dark waters of Egypt.

My book-shelves were filled with works upon spiritualism, manuals on magnetism, and novels, when they were weird and mystic, and as I despised artificial life and its restraints, and was, in fact, a most useless and uneasy young lady—so said my aunt's maid to her mistress. One of my few pleasures consisted in rambling about the beautiful garden of Lindesmere until awed by the darksome shadows of the linden grove, and, cold with dew, I would avoid the drawing-room, and steal away to my own rooms and their spiritual problems. In this purposeless manner the long sweet summer days would drift away, and still I waited for the inevitable something. My wild, passionate heart fretted at the coming winter, when there would be for me no more dreamy hours by the river, or wanderings over the breezy downs, peering into solemn woods for haunting Hamadryads and Oreads. An ardent lover of nature like the Greeks, I believed that nature was instinct with the life of man. Flowers were but the palingenesis of some life cut short by grief or violence, and gods with human passions lurked in dense thickets and by the river's tide.

As the days drifted into early autumn, fogs and rain, there was a great deal of gayety at Lindesmere. My eldest cousin, Edith, made a great coup, and after Easter would be mistress of a chateau in the south of France, the young Baronne de Neville. I listened vaguely and impatiently to talk of being presented next season with my cousin Maud, but I chafed and fretted all the same at the conventionalities hemming me in; and then an event occurred which colored my future existence.

CHAPTER II.

This event was a letter from Scotland. I had no correspondents, and but one friend, whom I had loved ardently during the years of intimate companionship at school. After her sudden recall to her home, and the interchange of several letters, she ceased to write, and thereupon I moralized sagely upon woman's caprice and the fallacy of human hopes and affection.

I fell into an ecstasy of delight as I opened the letter from Elsie Roland, and read not only her assurances of tenderest love for me, but an invitation to visit her directly, and remain until after Christmas. As Glen Ronald was a wild country place in the Highlands, Elsie suggested my joining her housekeeper, Tibbie Macrae, who was then stopping in London, and who would escort me safely. My aunt Mary graciously consented; in fact, her time and thoughts were so engrossed with the future baroness and the trousseau, and and tripe to town, I don't think she was really responsible for any other acts.

'I shall firmly believe you have a double,' said Louise, as she lazily watched the little bustle in my room attendant upon packing my trunk, 'and while you are here in the flesh, your familiar or your soul is among the witches over there in that dreadful Scotland. Nothing else can convince me that you could exist being buried in the Highlands in winter. The Macrae is a witch.'

'It is not for me to make restrictions, m'm,' said Sims, my maid, severely, 'but how ever Miss Cameron is to do her hair, lay out her dresses, and see to her laces, and be woke up, m'm, to her hot water, in that savage country, without me, m'm.

'Without you, Sims?' cried Louise, amazed. 'Surely, Marjorie, you take Sims with you?'

'Only as far as the amiable Macrae,' I laughed, merrily. 'I confess the waking up and laying out the dresses rather puzzle me; but my hair—why, Sims, I shall wear a snood, and buy a blue ribbon to do up my bonny brown hair.'

'Mamma, come to the rescue,' cried my cousin, as Lady Seton looked in the door. 'Marjorie absolutely refuses to take her maid, and insists upon leaving all her prettiest toilets behind.'

My aunt looked aghast at this piece of news as she advanced in the room with: 'Marjorie, I am not quite certain about the Rolands, excepting as regards their genealogy; but the grandmother, whose death you read of in the Times a few years ago, was one of the famous Macpherson clan, and possessed of great wealth. Glen Ronald must be a castle, or tower, or something, and there may be a great deal of company. I look to your future always, my love. When I had made my debut, my first visit was paid to Lady Matcham, where I met many very distinguished persons. My affections then were fixed upon white muslins and flowers; mamma's rea into another channel, as she fully comprehended the duty she owed me as to my future. I yielded to her better judgment—silk, velvet, and dignity. In white muslin I would have been spelled by young men of limited incomes, younger sons, and unpleasant persons of that sort; but in my dark blue velvet and pearls, my family flunkie, the poor rates, Parliamentary duties, church and state, and everything for your, made me Lady Seton and a very happy wife during the ten years of my marriage, even if Lord Seton was forty years my senior.'

'Dear Aunt Mary,' I said, cunningly, 'I want to be a Highland lassie, and wear a gay plaiddie, with no'er a boddie, in that moodity, homeyt old glen. I daresay there's a family ghost, and I shall spear at it and intrest it.'

'And if there's a young Ronald, Marjie,' said Louise, merrily, 'make it tell you if there is insanity in the race, or whether there are mortgages on the estates, for mamma's dear sake. Only don't fall in love until after you have been presented.'

'And be careful of your complexion, my dear,' added Lady Seton, impressively, at the door. 'By all means take Louise's advice about the young Ronald. Nothing is more conducive to sentiment and that sort of thing than being in a country house where there are so many long corridors, fancy little rooms, and great halls.'

'Oh, Aunt Mary, spare me!' I exclaimed, impatiently. 'I detest being in love and getting married. By-and-by, when Louise is wedded to a knight of high degree, I shall build a tower at the end of your garden, my lady, and study the stars, and sometimes o' nights I'll appear to you, and tell your fortune. Meantime I shall enjoy my trip to the Highlands, and dance a strathspey at Edith's wedding. Sims, don't forget to pack my set of silver and amethyst thistles, and all of my wool dresses—'

'When I lived with my last,' interposed Sims plaintively, 'we went to a hejus great castle in Scotland, where there was a grand juke stopping, and my lady had six dresses, and jewels to match, for every day, m'm.'

'Poor martyr! But you were happy, Sims?'

'Yes, m'm; for there was sherry to the servants' dinner, and patty four grass to the ladies' maids, with port. But the big wide halls and the damps and mould gave my lady a chill, and killed her, m'm;' and Sims squeezed out a tear.

'Never mind, Sims; I make you over to Lady Seton, to help Rose about Miss Seton's laces. I don't think Glen Ronald is a great moodsy castle; and if there's a ghost, it will be a nice, comfortable body that will rise up on my hearth o' nights and lay out my morning dresses,' and I danced down the long hall to join my aunt and cousins in the drawing-room, singing, cheerily:

"'But in his halls on festal days,
How blazed Lord Ronald's baltrane tree!
While youths and maids the light strathspey
So nimbly danced with Highland glee.
Ohone a rie! ohone a rie!'"

CHAPTER III.

The station at Loch Arse was a mile from Glen Ronald, and the road was 'awfu' bad,' said Mistress Tibbie Macrae, 'for the beasties; but if the letter callant gauged owre in time, though he's half gyte whiles, Elsie or auld Sandy will come with the chaise. My certie, a brave bit lassie you wadna mind it owre the brase; but ye may be a wee bit fasht—'

I cried! I laughed gleefully at the fancy. Every fibre in me thrilled with excitement. Even the old woman's broad Scotch had a charm, and the sweet shadow of a childish remembrance of the old nurse dead and gone. I recked about me and taking off my hat, let the soft air, in which there was a subtle scent of the sea, blow through my hair. The amber light of the dying autumn day spread a radiance over the distant tiers of mountains, where a loch gleamed like a thread of silver; a corn-crake gave a drowsy call; the throstles sang in a grove of birches bordering the stretch of heather, where a boy was waiting till the 'kye come hame;' a stray sunbeam touched leaf and yellow blow of a straggling vine; an old wagon in the distance stirred the golden dust in the road; and the sky, at that tragic hour 'twixt the gloaming and the mirk, was lovely as a poet's dream. Ah, how inexpressibly sweet were the influences of the land of my birth! How I pitied those who were condemned to the din and dankness of a great city on such an evening! And so we wandered on over the braes and bracken at the side of the road, until we turned into a lovely lane, lines with hedges of briar and woodbine, shaded by clumps of stately beeches—and Glen Ronald stood before me in gray square grimness, made still more grim by its long narrow windows. Near by, over a ledge of rocks, fell the loch, like the shattered mirror, with a deep and sullen roar, into ragged depths below. The great iron gates leading to the lawn and drive up to the house lay back useless against the stone wall green with moss and lichen. Huge oak-trees and spectral pines cast a weird solemnity to the old-fashioned grounds stretching right and left, where in grass-grown pathways lad off in fantastic fashion to bosky dells in the distance. The soft breeze blew spicy odors from the pines, and wherea few late roses bloomed.

As we neared the wide porch the great doors opened, and Elsie, my golden-haired, pretty Elsie, had me in her arms, and in her little coaxing way begged forgiveness for the boy who had just brought the letter, which had lain two days in his pocket, and we ran laughing up the steps, while Tibbie, with righteous rage, vanished round the side path to vent her wrath upon the unlucky messenger. A shiver ran through me as we entered the vast gloomy hall. The branching stag antlers in the shadowy light seemed to me like beckoning spectral arms.

CHAPTER IV.

A little hot supper tete-a-tete at one end of an enormous dining-room, an hour's gossip by a blazing fire over past and present days, and then Elsie escorted me to my room: ascending a wide flight of stairs, crossing a large square hall dimly lighted by a back window of stained glass, and then turning into a narrower passage, we entered a large low-ceiled room, where a fire in the huge chimney-place and lights somewhat reduced the eerie sensation I was conscious of.

'I am sure you will be comfortable here, Marjorie darling,' said Elsie, kissing me. 'This room is sheltered alike from heat and cold by a wall which you will see to-morrow. You are sure you will not feel nervous,' she added, anxiously, as I started at a low tap at the door. 'This is only Jeanie with your hot water, and she will always assist you, dear.'

'Oh, no,' I answered, bravely, 'I shall not be at all lonely. I am used to sleeping alone,' and my suite of bright little rooms flashed across my mind. 'But where are your rooms?'

'Quite at the other end of the house.—Jeanie, put some large logs on the fire.—Papa's health is so delicate that Malcolm and I are always very near him at night. The other rooms are empty, and mostly have a northern outlook—in fact, are not nearly so comfortable as this. Don't be afraid, my lambie; Glen Ronald is as secure as the Tower of London;' and then kissing me again good-night, I was left alone with Jeanie—a big red-armed lassie, who stared open-mouthed at my bravery of dress and ornaments, which I laughed to see Sims had smuggled into my boxes, after all. As the last sounds of Jeanie's shuffling tread died away I locked the door and looked about me.

Three windows faced the fire-place, there was a fourth at the end of the room, and all were draped with dark green stuff; a huge bedstead with high posts hung with similar curtains looked like a dismal bier. I examined the room closely, with the lamp in my hand. Some hideous portraits, black with age, of fierce Highland cateatans, scowled at me from the dark stained walls. A desk with glass doors and a deep drawer stood between two of the windows, surmounted by a huge stuffed owl. Some fussy-looking spider-legged tables occupied the corners. A large bean-mounted chest of drawers and queer oval mirror, a modern stuffed arm-chair near the fire, some thick sheep-skin rugs on the faded carpet—nothing else was to be seen excepting portions of my own wardrobe thrown over the heavy carved chairs.

The Peterboro' Real Estate Investment Co. (LIMITED.)

CAPITAL - $2,000,000.

This Company is now prepared to Make Loans upon Security of Improved Farm Property on the following Terms:

Interest at 8 per cent. half-yearly, or 8½ per cent. yearly; when principal is repayable at expiration of term, or by fixed instalments.

Interest at 8½ per cent. half-yearly; or 9 per cent. yearly; when the whole or any part of the principal is payable at any time without notice.

Both principal and Interest are payable by instalments of the same amount every year, according to the following table:—

Each $100 will be Repaid by	5	Equal Annual Instalments of	$25	40	Each.
"	6	"	22	00	"
"	8	"	17	75	"
"	10	"	15	25	"
"	12	"	13	65	"
"	15	"	12	05	"
"	20	"	10	05	"

In every case the borrower has the choice of day on which to pay both Principal and Interest, and even when he agrees to pay the Principal by instalments, may allow the instalments to remain unpaid to the end of the term, without extra charge.

As this is the only company having its Management in Peterborough, loans can be procured from it more expeditiously than with any other Company.

MANHOOD: HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

☞Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Constitutional Catarrh Remedy, Cures Catarrh.

T. J. B. HARDING, Esq., BROCKVILLE, ONT.

DEAR SIR.—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me. I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as at first the happy effects caused to me to be "too good to be true."

I was afflicted in my head for years before I commenced it to be Catarrh. In reading in your Circular I saw my case described in many particulars. The inward "drop" from the head had become very offensive, and a constant sensation either from me from lying long, I would feel

The Same Old Story.

The year went the world not well,
Some men complained of ill-success;
Trade dragged long the weary years,
And half the workmen were unemployed.
Year after year the weary round
Of farming cares went on and on,
Without a change to mark the flight
From week to week, or month to month.
A farmer died on January 1st,
On Friday night the 31st of December;
The weekly work on earth was done,
And, oh! there's never a long day's grave.
And never a line of [illegible]
Who sighed and longed for the happy [illegible]—
"It's always the same old story!"

She dried her eyes and curled her hair,
And went to the candlemas assembly.
From the garden gate to the vestry door
The self-same events were repeated.
At last the final hymn was sung,
And all the prayers were ended,
When one from the departing crowd among
Her homeward steps ascended.
They left at length the village street,
And sprang the low wall over,
To crash through Captain Peacock's wheat
And Deacon Brown's clover;
The same pressed visitor snatched
To feed their souls with story;
They whispered low, but what they said
Was only the same old story!

SCHOLASTIC.—The School Board have engaged Mr. McKay, of Wolfe Island, near Kingston, as High School Principal, at a salary of $650. Mr. C. Fraser, Mr. Dewart and Miss Sargent, have been reappointed, and the Primary Department has been offered to Miss Laidlaw, of Toronto, at $300.

Whitby.

NEW POST OFFICE.—Mr. Spry was in town Wednesday last, looking at the site offered by the town for the Post Office.

ROBBERY.—On Tuesday night, Wilson, a surveyor, fell in with a young man named Trail who had been drinking freely. Trail had a considerable sum of money on him when they went to bed in a room together; in the morning Trail was short—as he says—of $30 or $40, and laid information before the Mayor and had Wilson arrested, who after being examined was committed for trial.

Cavan.

A PRESENTATION WITH VARIATIONS.—The Township Council had a stormy sitting at its last meeting over a presentation. It seems that it was agreed to present Mr. Campbell, the Collector, with a horse, and to this end a committee consisting of Geo. Campbell, John Boyd and Geo. Forster, bought a horse for $130. Some of the Councillors contended that $65 was the maximum agreed upon for the purchase, and now it appears that the horse is to be the question on which the electors of the municipality will divide next January.

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.—The Messenger says Geo. Southerns is a candidate for the office of Township Clerk. It also says: "John Hunter, Esq., Clerk of the Division Court, has been appointed returning officer, to hold the first election, and, will issue his proclamation in a short time."

Alnwick.

A CURIOUS CASE.—The Cobourg Star relates the following adventures of an Alnwick man:—"On Tuesday a man named Orser, was brought before the Police Magistrate in this town. The prisoner has been to the Western States, and was returning on his home journey, and had got as far as Stratford, where he got his trunk checked at the G. T. R. Station for Cobourg; afterwards the trunk was stolen from the Station in that place, whereupon Orser sued the Railway Company for the loss of the trunk, which he says contained four or five suits of clothes besides other valuables, worth several hundred dollars. Grand Trunk Detective Flynn, was employed to clear up the mystery of where the trunk went, and on going to the home of Orser, in Alnwick found the lost trunk and Orser, whom he arrested and brought to town for a summary examination. The case was laid over until next Friday, to await the arrival of witnesses.

Port Hope.

OLERICAL.—Rev. John Dempsey, formerly pastor of the Baptist church here, assumes charge of a similar place of worship in Kingston on Sunday.

SHEEP KILLED BY DOGS.—Mr. Asa Choate had 37 sheep killed by dogs a few days ago—one of them a valuable ewe that he had paid twenty-five dollars for last year. He presented his claim to the township council, and received a cheque for $100, as part compensation for the loss he had sustained.

THE INFANTICIDE CASE.—A move has at last been made in the Hope township infanticide matter, and the Government ordered the case to Detective Murray, of Toronto, who after making the necessary enquiries, had a warrant issued for the arrest of Mary Ann Westbrup as being a party to the crime. She has been committed to the County gaol, Constable Ellis conveying her there. A preliminary examination took place yesterday before the Police Magistrate at Cobourg and the prisoner was remanded till next Thursday.

Cobourg.

MARINE DISASTER.—The old schooner Northumberland, formerly owned in this town, and commanded for a number of years by Capt. Mutton of this town, foundered, loaded with coal, off Long Point Lighthouse, Lake Erie, on Thursday afternoon last. The Captain and crew were all saved.

SALE OF RESIDENCE.—Between Saturday night and Monday of last week, the store of Messrs. P. McCallum & Sons, was entered by experienced cracksmen and a large amount of silk taken. It appears they filed away a couple of bars from the cellar window, entering which they found themselves in the work-room down stairs. They then made their way through a register; in order to get through which the men or men must have been of pretty slim dimensions, for it is only about ten inches square. They appear to have been frightened off, but got away with silks to the value of $1,100.

ARREST OF A PRISONER.—A man named A. E. Lyons, alias Johnson, alias Albert Marshall, alias Taylor, was arrested at the G. T. R. Station here by Chief Constable Marshall, and lodged in gaol here until Monday, when Detective Flynn, who arrived and took him to Toronto. The prisoner, it appears, is wanted in Montreal for [illegible]; J. Hughes, telegraphic [illegible]; J. Franklin, Queen Street west, and others, notes ranging in value from $5 to $20. He then left his departure for the States. He was arrested on information from Toronto, at Belleville, was not extradited, but was taken back to Montreal that he had given up a G. T. cheque. A telegram was sent after him, and he was arrested on arrival in Montreal.

ACCIDENT.—Last Tuesday, Mr. Wm. Hutchinson, of Brooklin, while working on a scaffold at a house which he was building, fell off and sustained very serious injuries.

Port Perry.

FIRE IN REACH.—The premises of Mr. George Ford, lot 16, in the 7th con. of Reach, were totally destroyed by fire on the morning of the 20th ult. The loss will be heavy and the insurance is only $200.

Orillia.

PLANING MILL BURNED.—About 7.30 o'clock on Sunday evening Maddon's planing mill was destroyed by fire. Besides the machinery, there was a large quantity of choice lumber. Nothing was saved. Little or no insurance. Cause of fire unknown.

Stirling.

AWFULLY SUDDEN DEATH.—Ebenezer Green, a wealthy farmer living near Stirling, visited [illegible]ge, on Thursday, and when entering George Falkiner's store he was seized with an apoplectic fit and fell down powerless. He was carried to a sofa, and within a half hour he breathed his last.

Galway.

LUMBERING.—Gilmour's shanty will be in full operation this winter, and has bought the farm produce of all the settlers round. Good prices have been obtained.

POTATOES EXTRAORDINARY.—Mr. J.W. Burt planted four bushels of potatoes, and harvested 80 bushels of the finest potatoes you ever saw. The back country produces the best potatoes in the world.

Tyrone.

AN EGGNAPPERATING OUTRAGE.—Last week one of our hotel keepers, Mr. Vance, gave an oyster supper to the Orange brethren of this vicinity, and during the progress of the feast some malicious disposed person or persons interrupted the performance by throwing some ancient eggs at the house, one of which passed through a window, scattering its contents over one or two in the inside.

COUNTY COUNCIL.—The warden has decided to call a December session of the county council on the 16th in order to transact some necessary public business. The council it will be remembered decided in June to do away with December sessions, but as this was the first year it was thought advisable to have another meeting.

GOOSE LAKE DRAIN ARBITRATION.—Dickson, Fenelon Falls, M. H. Berkley, Cambray, and John S. [illegible] were a board of arbitrators sitting at the Queen House Monday on the claim of Mr. Edward Clendennan of Fenelon against the township of Mariposa for compensation for damage sustained to his property by Goose lake drain passing through it. After hearing a number of Mr. Clendennan's witnesses an adjournment was made for a couple of weeks.

MAYOR DEACON'S RESIDENCE BURNED.—The Residence of Col. Deacon, Mayor of Lindsay, situated at the corner of George and Wolfe streets, Irishtown, was destroyed by fire early [illegible]ng. Except the piano very little [illegible] was saved. The fire is supposed to have been caused by hot ashes. The loss is estimated at $5,000. Insured in the Western for $3,000; actual loss to Insurance Company is about $3,400. A case belonging to the Colonel, containing jewels valued at $2,[illegible] was fortunately saved, but a box con[illegible] relics, regalias, &c., perished.

The attendance was large and the programme embraced every thing from "The Old Man's Drunk Again," down to "My Grandfather's Clock."

Cobourg.

SUSPECTED INCENDIARISM.—By a fire occurring at the Forest House a bed was destroyed, and the carpet was considerably damaged by water. It was no doubt the work of an incendiary. A reward of $20 has been offered for his conviction.

CLOSE OF NAVIGATION.—The steamer "Cobourg" has quit making its trip from Fenelon Falls.

LUMBER SHIPMENT.—Quite a quantity of lumber is being shipped over the T. and N. R. to Toronto.

Barrie.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—An inquest was held at Barrie on Friday evening, 28th ult., to ascertain the cause of the death of Dr. A. Moberly, of Collingwood, whose body was found at seven o'clock Friday morning by the side of the Northern Railway track, two and a half miles from Allendale station. The inquiry was adjourned until December 4th for the purpose of gathering further information. It is supposed that while walking on the track on Tuesday night deceased was struck by a passing train. On examination it was found that both legs were broken, the head fractured and the body much bruised. Death must have been instantaneous.

BOUNDARY LINE SENSATION.—Mr. Dickson, the Surveyor, has been running lines, and he has fixed the boundaries of farms in localities quite new and unexpected. The central difficulty is about one particular post. Two parties prove that the post stood in two entirely different places. As a consequence one man has had his farm moved out of a tamarack swamp, and put on the top of another man's farm. So another Surveyor has been sent for, and if he makes the post to stand in another place, nobody knows what will have to be done.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

SHIPMENT OF SHEEP.—Messrs. Morgan and MacDonald shipped two hundred sheep from here on Monday.

ANOTHER VESSEL LOST.—The Messrs. O'Hagan of this town, who lost the E. Hall last spring, have been so unfortunate as to lose another vessel, the schooner Dominion, in the storm of last Friday. She parted her anchor chains in South Bay and was driven across the lake, we are informed, under bare poles. She attempted to make Oswego, but failed to do so in the blinding snow storm, and was driven ashore at Ford's shoal about three miles west of that city. She is a total wreck. The crew were all saved.

Cold Springs.

A HEARTLESS ROBBERY.—On the night of Monday, Nov. 24th, one of the most heartless robberies that has ever taken place in this neighborhood was perpetrated. Mr. Alex. Hoskins, who had by hard labor saved up a little money, invested it in a general stock suitable for a country business, opened out at Cold Springs a short time ago, and was beginning to work up quite a business; but on Tuesday morning his hopes were shattered, when, on opening the store, he found that during the night his shelves and counters had been entirely cleaned out, with the exception of a little glassware, &c. The stock taken away amounted to over $1,000, and was Mr. Hoskin's "little all." Up to the time of writing no clue has been found which would lead to the arrest of the perpetrators.

Bowmanville.

ACCIDENT.—As Mrs. John Burk was passing through the house on Monday evening, she walked into the cellar way, and falling through sustained serious bodily injury.

BRUTAL ASSAULT.—On Saturday last Mr. Thomas Barrett received a most severe beating from a young man in town, whose name the News very wrongfully withholds. The two had a few angry words together when the young man kicked Barrett in a very tender spot which doubled him up. The kick was followed by blows from the fist which knocked Barrett senseless. Charles Barrett on behalf of his father, lodged information against the young man, and on Wednesday he appeared before the P. M., pleaded guilty, and was fined $15 and costs, amounting in all to $19.60.

Oshawa.

HORSES SHIPPED.—A car load of heavy horses were shipped from here on Tuesday last.

FIRE.—Shortly before one o'clock Thursday morning, the house of Mr. William Trewin, John Street, was discovered to be on fire. The family had retired at about the usual hour, and were awakened by the smoke and flames from burning wood. They found the house on fire in the kitchen and pantry, and had barely time to rescue the children. The building, which was nearly new, and most of the contents were destroyed. The building was valued at $1,000, insured for $900. In overhauling the debris, the [illegible] among the bricks of the [illegible] a diamond ring valued at $60, a gold watch worth $60, and a silver watch, which it is thought are not injured beyond repair.—Reformer.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, DEC'R 4, 1879.

THE TORONTO AND OTTAWA RAILWAY.

The advice of the EXAMINER, that some portion of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway should be built at the earliest possible date, and its proposition that some of the bonuses voted should be devoted to this very desirable end, has been misunderstood, or understood too extensively. The reasons for entering upon construction as promptly as may be, are so evident that there is no use repeating them, save to say that every mile of track actually laid would be a visible guarantee of the bona fides of the promoters of the project, and must of necessity strengthen the hands of the Company with al the municipalities along the line, with the governments of whom aid is to be asked, and with capitalists who will be invited to buy the bonds of the Company. Our proposition was, and is, that the Peterborough bonuses, county, town and township, shall be re-voted in such shape as to allow of their being put into the building of the few miles of road from this town to the eastern boundary of the county. Some have jumped to the conclusion that we suggested the using of all bonuses voted east of this to the building of the line from Peterborough to Ottawa, whether the municipalities that have voted such bonuses be willing or not. This is simply absurd; for the very good reason that it would be utterly impossible. But if all such municipalities were willing we see no reason why the money should not be so used; and we are fully persuaded that if our very plain proposition, for devoting Peterborough bonuses to building the portion of the line within Peterborough county, were carried out, it would lead to similar action on the part of municipalities further east. Seeing this, the Belleville Intelligencer has got terribly excited over what it assumes to be a proposed violation of the terms on which the bonuses were first granted. The Intelligencer would have displayed greater intelligence had it waited till it saw signs of a violation of terms before becoming frantic. It rants like a confused comedian, in an assumed defence of the interests of those municipalities which have voted aid to a line from Toronto to Ottawa: interests, by the way, that are not in the slightest danger. Why this concern of Belleville in the givers of bonuses to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway? Read between the lines, it is easy to see that the Intelligencer's outburst is caused by the utter failure of the Grand Junction Railway Company to command respect, even from the city of Belleville itself. That Company has so far failed to keep up to its conditions on which bonuses were voted to it, that such bonuses are not now available. Yet the Intelligencer pleads for it, and raves about an imaginary imposition of new conditions by the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company. Our Belleville contemporary must be mad, indeed, when it appeals to Peterborough and Ontonabee to renew their votes to a concern to which a committee of its own city council refused to grant an extension of time. The Ontario is more candid; for it acknowledges that the Grand Junction Company depends upon aid from Peterborough, Smith and Emily for the fulfilment of the condition on which the Belleville bonus is to be paid—a dependence, it is hardly necessary to say, that is extremely ethereal. The Ontario lets out the whole secret when it concludes an article with these significant words in reference to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway:—

"It is of the utmost importance to the citizens of Belleville that such a rival scheme should not succeed, as its success seriously interferes with our interests."

Opposition to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway, pure and simple, is at present a guiding principle of the Belleville press. This we might expect. But we expect a manly and straightforward opposition, such as becomes journals of a city, and not the thin hypocrisy indulged in by the Intelligencer when it pretends to be careful for the interests of certain municipalities, as cause of which it at the same time recommends an exploded railway project, of which a consumption of its own city council expresses disapprobation, coupled with disgust.

PITCHED THIS PREMIER.

It was strongly felt by the Conservative vice-pollies after the deplorable exhibition which Sir John made of himself at the grand banquet at Quebec, on the occasion of his return from England, that some opportunity must be afforded the Premier of in some measure redeeming himself from the shame and disgrace which he had incurred by his conduct and his shortcomings on that occasion, and steps were accordingly taken at the capital for another political oration to; the Premier and his Ministers, which would enable the Chieftain to give to an admiring people that grand exposition of the political and financial affairs of the country, which, for substantial restraining reasons, he neglected to do at Quebec. Thursday last witnessed the "overtaxation," as the Yankee showmen would say, of the arrangements which had been made to this end, and it has been, to say the least of it, not less humiliating and disappointing to those interested than was the affair at Quebec. Sir John has been dined, and wined; and though he had this time the watchful care of several of his colleagues to prevent the excess in one feature of the entertainment which resulted so disastrously at Quebec, his speech was even more disappointing than on the former occasion. It was a simple repetition of the platitudes and self-worship, which, comprised his Quebec effort, in perhaps a more coherent and substantial form. He did not touch upon a single one of the great questions which to-day occupy public attention. He gave no inkling of what might be the course which the Government intend to pursue in the future, in regard to the construction of the Pacific Railway and the financial; difficulties which that undertaking involves, or in regard to the work of colonization of the great North-west; nor did he take the public into his confidence, as to what substantial results, if any, had been accomplished by himself and his colleagues during their visit to England. We can secure no better estimate of the value of the speech as a political record, than that placed upon it by the Mail, which after two days applaction of the most industrious examination of the deliverance, with, we may be sure, the most ardent desire to find some decent pretext for applauding, is only able to say that, in a general way, it "bristled with good points," and that it contained "two important statements." And what does the reader imagine these two grains of wheat which the ingenious research of the Mail has sifted from the sorry chaff of windy declamation, consist in? We let the Premier's organ answer for itself: "One was that accounts were most cheering from Spain and France in regard to our trade relations with them." The other was that "our hopes of improved relations with the Brazils and West Indies were almost accomplished!" The note of exclamation we take the liberty of interpolating in the extract from the Mail, to express the surprise which the reader will naturally experience at such summing up, by the most favorable authority, of the great effort of the Premier. It but adds another proof to the evidence which the public have of the decaying intellect and weakening capacity of a man whose abilities have been exhausted and whose race has been run. Of the present and the future of the country, and of the present and future policy of the Government, he had nothing to say, beyond the "two important statements," which we excerpt from the Mail; but he was fertile in retrospect, and excelled himself in the masterly manner in which he took credit for all the constitutional reforms which have been accomplished in this country, in spite of his utmost opposition, from the times of Robert Baldwin to those of Edward Blake. There was not a reform that he had ever opposed for which he did not take credit—not a measure which good and patriotic men, aided by the popular will, have succeeded in carrying in spite of him and the various governments with which he has been connected, which he did not coolly appropriate and call his own. He had been, if we may credit his own statement, in all these triumphs of constitutional reform and progress, the lever, the fulcrum, and the object to be moved, and with the spirit of Caius Marius, he declaims to the country upon which he has never conferred a benefit in legislation, except upon the compulsion of honester and more sincere men, "Alone I did it!" He, the opponent of responsible Government itself, and the opposer of every effort at liberal and progressive Legislation, and at the enlargement of the power of the sovereign people, during the past quarter of a century, now coolly declares to an intelligent people who are not ignorant of their country's history, that it is to him that they owe every good and beneficent reform which has been accomplished in spite of his own persistent opposition and obstruction; and that he is the patriotic artisan who alone has built up to its present state of progression, the fabric of the state. Nor was it less edifying to hear his colleague Mr. Langevin, replying with a wonderful irony of accident, to the toast of "responsible government," boasting himself and his colleagues as the followers and disciples of that Robert Baldwin, whom in his lifetime they reviled and persecuted; but whose good name and patriotism, now that he lives only in the grateful respect of his country, they seek to filch from him as a cloak to cover up actions which he abhorred, professions which he detested, and political practices which in his lifetime he indignantly denounced. Even the laurels which hang upon the tomb of the late Sandfield Macdonald had to be decorated to procure material for the garland which the Premier sought to entwine about his own brow, and the privilege of separate education in Ontario for those of the Catholic faith, which Sandfield Macdonald and R. W. Scott obtained in spite of him, is set up by this peculiar politician, as a monument of the justice and generosity of himself and his party. In short this great effort of the "Canadian Bonaparte," as his friends delight to call him, analyzed by his most favorable critic, the Mail, produces nothing more than the "two important statements," which we have quoted from that paper, in reference to prospective trade with France, Spain and Brazil; and these academic and impudent claims upon the acknowledgments of honester and better men. The speech was in every respect a failure and a disappointment, alike to his friends and his opponents. It betrayed unmistakable failing faculties and waning intellectual energy. It rendered all the expectations and arrogance and "self-assurance" of his old-time self-confidence, without any of their force or vitality; and leaves those who supported him in power but unprincipled politicians, only the certainty that he has lost his cleverness, and without his want of principle. Nothing could more effectually dethrone Sir John and his colleagues from the position they have assumed as the exponents of a progressive policy, than the speech delivered by the Premier at the banquet given in his honor on Thursday evening last. It was a failure, and was generally pronounced to be such.

MUNICIPAL NOTES.

A RAILWAY is to be built between Ottawa and Peterborough, Toronto will be forced to seek connection with it, and that too, at once. A movement is now on foot, among a number of energetic men to secure a charter for a railway from Goderich to Ottawa. This project is begun at Beeton, in the County of Simcoe; and already steps have been taken toward the necessary parliamentary applications. The whole western part of the Province seeks connection with Peterborough, and it is not likely that Toronto will stop quietly out of the race.

IN HIS Ottawa speech, Sir John Macdonald admitted that the patent tariff which the country is now oppressed with, is to be further tinkered next session; but it is only to satisfy some few monopolists who have been clamoring for still higher duties, as he was careful to assure them. Said he: "But we will some "gentlemen and ask Parliament next "session for some amendments, and "these amendments will not be in the way "of diminishing the protection." No wonder the sober second thought of the country which was deluded into entrusting its affairs to these mis-guided and reckless men, already begins to ask: "Where is all this to end?"

THERE were a happily met lot of convivial spirits who surrounded Sir John Macdonald at Ottawa, and burst into song under his right-honorable nose. First there was the Chairman, Mr. Skead, a bankrupt lumberman, who holds his seat in the Senate in direct defiance of the Confederation Act. Then there was Vice-Chairman Currier, who sat in the House under Sir John, while drawing some $30,000 as a Government contractor, and who had to vacate his seat for violation of the Independence of Parliament Act. Then there was Vice-Chairman Tasse, who took his salary from Mr. Mackenzie's Government almost up to the day of his nomination for Parliament, pretending that he did not intend to enter politics, and who is eking a living out of Government patronage supplied to the "Canada," a newspaper which is published only when the Tories are in power and the public crib is available. Then there was Contractor Agent Mackintosh in snug possession of $2,000 a year, which he enjoys at the expense of the public, through the connivance of the Government. Nor must we forget Mr. Langevin, l'homme de $32,000, who has thirty-two thousand substantial reasons for admiring responsible Government as practised by Sir John. These, with a liberal filling in of such expectant, practical politicians as William McDougall, Tom White, Peter Mitchell, &c., with some Civil Servants looking for a rise in salary, and a moderate admission of the Conservative oi polloi washed and kempt for the occasion, formed a fitting setting for the political jewel they had in keeping. Truly Sir John was in the midst of his familiars.

OUR TORONTO LETTER.

The Grand Opera House Disaster—Reelection in the Centre Room, Etc.

(From our own Correspondent.)

THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE IN RUINS.

TORONTO, Dec. 2, 1879.—On Saturday morning last, one of the most serious conflagrations that have occurred in this city for years past took place,—involving the partial destruction of the Grand Opera House, and incurring the death of Robert Wright, the stage carpenter, his wife and child, who were unable to make their escape from the building. The Opera House was familiarly known in past times as Mrs. Morrison's. A Company of English actors (of whose Mr. W. E. Bandmann was the principal) had been playing a week's engagement there, and on the evening (Friday) previous to the fire, had appeared in "Macbeth." The building is situated on Adelaide St., just west of Yonge St., facing northward, the rear end of the structure (where the stage is situated) abutting well on to King St. About 3.30 o'clock on the morning mentioned a policeman on Adelaide St. discovered smoke issuing from the rear portion of the building and at once gave the alarm. The firemen were promptly on hand, but before they had time to get their hose into position, to offer any resistance, the

FLAMES HAD MADE SUCH HEADWAY

among the very inflammable materials of which the stage and its effects are constructed, as to bid defiance to their best efforts, and the difficulty of gaining a vantage ground on which they could effectually work, rendered them greatly in their operations. The theatre-portion proper of the building (that in which the fire originated) is separated from the front (which is taken up with stores, offices, etc.) by a thick brick wall, and this offered a resistance to the flames which, in its absence, must inevitably have consumed the entire building. The firemen worked like Trojans and succeeded in confining the fire to the theatre, thus saving a very valuable portion of the edifice. The most distressing incident of the calamity is

THE DEATH OF WRIGHT,

the stage carpenter, and his wife and child, all three of whom perished in the flames. Shortly after the firemen arrived a man was noticed at a window in the side of the building, from which great volumes of dense black smoke were issuing. Although this window was some fifty feet from the ground, the only avenue of escape from certain death was by jumping from it, and this the man did by dropping himself from the sill. Although his fall was somewhat broken by the outstretched arms of several firemen who placed themselves directly beneath the window with that object in view, still he was severely injured and it was some time before he regained consciousness sufficiently to tell those about him that Wright and his wife and child were in the burning building. Immediately that it was known that the Chief of the Fire Brigade ordered his men to burst open a door leading to a side staircase and pressed to the rescue. It was the work of a moment to wrench the door from its hinges, and half a dozen brave men leaped to the front and clambered up the stairway, heedless of the personal danger they incurred. But it was too late; the fire had already licked away the props, and the men had barely time to regain the exit again before the roof, galleries and floor of that magnificent auditorium fell with a crash that could be heard for miles away, and that flung the flames and cinders roaring into the heavens. Further search in hope of saving the unfortunate inmates of the house was useless, and the firemen turned their attention to the saving of the front portion of the building. The bodies of

LIFE WERE IN DANGER,

THOSE WHO PERISHED

were found about 6 o'clock when the fire had been completely subdued. They were lying at the top of the staircase which the firemen had attempted to ascend, close together, with a mass of burned debris partially covering them, and charred beyond all possibility of recognition. The remains, which were at once placed in a box and taken to the morgue, presented a revolting spectacle, from which strong men turned away with an indescribable shudder of horror.

The unfortunate Scotch boy, who escaped as above, by jumping from the window, gives the following recital of his experiences:

"He was in the habit of nightly inspecting the Opera House. At the close of the play on Friday night he turned off the gas, after making its usual round. Before starting to come, about one o'clock, he noticed a light in the scenery, and, thinking it was left burning by some carelessness, he went to put it out. He was accompanied by the unfortunate Wright, and both, after satisfying themselves that nothing was amiss, retired to rest. The rooms occupied by Scott and Wright and family were on the third flight, access to which was gained by the front stairway. Scott said he could not have been very long in bed, when he was awakened by a roaring noise resembling rolling thunder. On sitting up in bed, he saw heavy clouds of smoke rushing past his doorway, and springing to the floor he entered Wright's room, adjoining and awakened him. At first they tried to descend the stairway, but were prevented from doing so by the ascending. Scott urged the Wrights to take the only chance left them, by jumping from one of the west windows to the roof of a part of the main building. Mrs. Wright, however, at this point became frantic, and was with difficulty moved to the place from which the descent was to be made. Scott was about to take the little girl in his arms, when the mother threw herself upon him, and he was compelled to relinquish his burden. He became unconscious, and on recovering found himself on the roof of the building mentioned, from which place he was removed by the firemen. He states that the last he remembered was urging Wright and his wife to spring to the roof. The husband appeared anxious to do his bidding, but must have been prevented by his wife, who was almost wild with excitement.

DENSE CLOUDS OF SMOKE

The Grand Opera House was built in 1874, and cost $75,000. It appears, however, that the theatre since the first year of its operations has not been paying very well, so that in 1877 it was put upon auction and purchased by Mr. Alex Manning of this city for $45,000, subject to a mortgage of $7,000. There was an insurance of $27,000 on the theatre, so that it will not be an entire loss to the owner. Mr. Bandmann, who was playing an engagement during the past week at this house, is a loser to the extent of about $26,000, principally in stage dresses, effects, &c., which leaves the unfortunate actor almost penniless. The Grand Opera House has held the reputation of being one of the finest theatres on the continent, and a genuine feeling of sadness is felt by all at its distruction.

Heavy Defalcation at the Custom House.

Considerable excitement has prevailed in commercial and other circles here during the past week by the discovery of startling "irregularities" in the management of affairs at the Customs House. The officials at head quarters, it would seem, had been anonymously informed that the Customs funds were being worked in a crooked fashion, and Inspector Johnston was despatched from Ottawa to inquire into the matter. It did not take him long to discover that sums amounting in the aggregate to some $20,000 had been from time to time abstracted from the coffers of the Department in Toronto, and in consequence of this discovery, Mr. Smith the Collector, and his Chief Clerk, Mr. McKay, have been suspended, awaiting developements.

LATEST FROM CAPE TOWN AND AFGHANISTAN—NEW WAR THREATENED IN AFRICA—THE TREACHEROUS AFGHAN AMEER.

(Cable Despatches.)

The policy pursued in India will be to annex Herat, and not to retreat from Cabul. Lord Beaconsfield is determined to checkmate Russia before he dissolves Parliament.

The news from Cabul states that General Roberts, acting under instruction from the Viceroy, has sent the Ameer to Peshawur, under the safe conduct of a strong despatchment of English troops, and he will reach his destination in eight marches. All disguise as to the purport of the Government concerning his relation to it are now thrown off, and he will be held as a prisoner until final action can be taken upon his case.

Intelligence from Cape Town received through German sources, under date Nov. 12th, is to the effect that the troubles between the representatives of the English Government and the Boers, Oaffres, and other native tribes, so far from being in the way of peaceable settlement, are liable to develope into an open war at any moment. The Boers are taking a warlike attitude, and evince a growing distaste to the existence of English authority among them. At Koonati, they are reported to be in pronounced rebellion, and have formed a military compact to take Chrissie, having in possession about 8,000 pounds of powder besides the military stores of which they robbed the storehouses at Middlebury some weeks ago. A force of 600 Boers are assembled at a point near Olyphant's river, awaiting the arrival of Paul Kruger, one of the men against whom a warrant was issued for the storehouse robbery, to lead them in the contemplated attack upon Middlebury. The Government hesitates attempting the forcible arrest of the leaders of these insurrectionary parties through fear of an immediate and extensive revolt. The general opinion at Cape Town is that another war like the late struggle in Zululand is likely to ensue. An alliance between the Boers and Caffres is believed to have been effected.

A despatch from Simla says it is believed that the Afghans at Herat will force Ayub to march on Candahar. General Roberts will despatch an envoy to Turkestan to represent British authority.

Canadian News of the Week.

The rails on the Credit Valley Railway have been laid as far as Orangeville.

The Welland Canal will close for the season to-morrow—nine days earlier than last year.

Major DeWinton, Military Secretary to the Governor-General, has returned from Winnipeg.

The Governor-General gave a dinner at Government House in honor of St. Andrew's day on Monday evening.

Under instructions from the Princess Louise, a clearing has been made in the Rideau Hall woods, and an orthodox bark-wooden shanty is being constructed.

On Friday a young woman named Matilda Dubaville was struck on the head by the machinery in the New Edinburgh woollen mill, and lies in a precarious condition.

The Baptist Church at Hamilton, in course of erection, has fallen to the ground. Loss, $20,000.

On Sunday night, burglars robbed the house of O. E. Bashford, Toronto, of a gold watch and a quantity of plate. On the same night Moses' cigar factory was robbed of a large quantity of stock.

Last Saturday, Toronto policemen raided a gambling den on King street, capturing eleven men.

Messrs. Sullivan and Gilbert, of Pinafore fame, are to be the Governor-General's guests during Christmas week.

Mrs. David Sullivan, of Colchester, took two ounces of laudanum on Sunday, because her husband had sold his farm against her will.

It is reported that Mr. Goldring, of Montreal, has sold a one-fourth interest in his gold mines in Bessen, to Judge Distenoffer and others of New York, $360,000.

OTTAWA, Nov. 30.—Mr. Robertson, from Kittleton, Scotland, is in the city, and on Saturday proceeded to the Minister of Agriculture, a view to the settlement of a number of Highland small farms in Manitoba. He asks that the Government set apart a tract of land to be called New Scotland, or the Land of Lorne.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—The Scotch agricultural deputies passed through here yesterday en route from Woodstock to Port Burwell. They will visit Ridgetown, Chatham, at Forks, and afterwards go to Point Edward, returning in time to sail from Halifax on the 20th. They expect to be back to Scotland on the 20th December, when a report of their observations will be published. They estimate that 1,500 acres in that district.

It is reported that the Standard Bank expects one or two millions of deposits from Montreal, and the report is generally believed.

LONDON.—The business and success of the company being now beyond doubt, the directors have declared a dividend of 10 per cent. for the year, and have also resolved to increase the capital of the company by £100,000 sterling, making the total capital £200,000 sterling. The new shares will be issued at a premium of 100 per cent., thus realizing £100,000 sterling for the company. The directors have also resolved to issue debentures to the amount of £100,000 sterling, bearing interest at 6 per cent. per annum. The debentures will be issued at par, and will be redeemable at the end of ten years. The directors have also resolved to issue 10,000 shares of the new capital to the shareholders of the Bank of Montreal, at the price of £10 per share, in the proportion of one share for every two shares held by them. The remaining 10,000 shares will be issued to the public at £10 per share. The directors have also resolved to issue 10,000 shares of the new capital to the shareholders of the Bank of Montreal, at the price of £10 per share, in the proportion of one share for every two shares held by them. The remaining 10,000 shares will be issued to the public at £10 per share.

It is officially announced that the report of the assassination of Ahmed Mukhtar Pasha by the Arnauts is without foundation.

Gladstone made a speech at Edinburgh on Saturday. He denounced Conservative finance management as extravagant and dishonest. The Afghan war expenses, he said, like those of the Abyssinian war, were understated and kept secret pending the elections.

A St. Petersburg despatch says Mirsky, charged with attempting to assassinate Gen. Drenteln, has been sentenced to be hanged. Turkheff was sentenced to the Siberian mines for thirteen years for assisting to conceal Mirsky. Six others were acquitted.

Harriet Saville, daughter of wealthy French Canadian parents, led astray, and living with George Harris a negro, was shot in the heart by her paramour on the 5th inst., and she has since died in the hospital.

Michel Chevalier, the political economist, is dead, aged 73 years.

John Arthur Roebuck, Liberal member of Parliament and a prominent political writer is dead.

Mr. Labouchere's war with the Beefsteak Club, seems likely to be added to the list of English causes celebres. His appeal to the Master of the Rolls has been successful. The Master of the Rolls has made a final order entitling Mr. Labouchere to the judgment of the Court, to be restored to all rights and privileges of the Club and the costs of the proceedings.

The nuptials of Alphonso XII., King of Spain, and the Archduchess Marie Christine, of Austria, were celebrated on Sunday morning at the Spanish capital.

A Sofia telegram says that owing to Parliamentary disagreements Prince Alexander has informed the Czar that he desires to abdicate.

A Vienna correspondent learns that before Prince Lobanoff left Constantinople, he concluded an understanding between Russia and the Porte, which will have the force of an alliance in certain eventualities.

From Sofia, it is stated that affairs in Bulgaria are in a very dangerous state. The Turkish inhabitants are leaving the country in large numbers, partly from fear of being enrolled in the Bulgarian militia, and partly in consequence of the hostility with which they are treated by the Bulgarians. The Turkish peasants are only waiting for the close of harvest sales to emigrate to Constantinople and Anatolia, and it is probable that in a very short time the Turkish element will have disappeared from Bulgaria altogether.

Count Zichy's resignation is the first sign of Baron Haymerle having decided upon great changes in Austrian diplomacy. The conviction prevails that Austria will support all English efforts at Constantinople as far as possible.

Disquieting rumors from Paris are in circulation here of an anticipated early dissolution of the French Cabinet. Despatches from Berlin report that the German army is being largely increased.

The British digests of the reports of the fishery trouble at Fortune Bay will be sent to Washington during the present session of Congress.

The weather in Scotland is intensely cold. Heavy storms prevail, and the Clyde is frozen over for the first time in several years. Much distress is felt among the poorer classes throughout the country.

The Queen is reported as suffering from severe bilious attack, and, although the Court physicians profess to attach but little importance to this illness, many persons are inclined to look upon her Majesty's illness, in a much more serious light.

Late advice from several important points in Ireland indicate a better feeling prevailing, and there is reason to believe the culminating point of the agitation has been passed. There is a marked increase in the disposition on the part of the tenants to pay rents, and it is believed but for the terrorism of lawless anti-rent leaders, the tenantry would very generally respond to the extent of their ability. Reports of agragian outrages have been vastly exaggerated, and there is no exaggerated, demand for relief at the various poor houses.

BEARS ABROAD—THE REEVESHIP—THE LOCAL GRAIN TRADE—ORANGE SOCIETY ELECTION.

(From our own Correspondent.)

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 3rd, 1879.—The bears seem to have taken advantage of the mild weather last week to leave their winter quarters, and take observations as to the state of affairs in their neighborhood, as several have been seen on the Burleigh road and in Harvey, but none have been killed so far as we can learn.

The contest for the Reeveship of the Village will, in all probability, be between John Hall and R. C. Strickland. Several other names are mentioned in connection with the office, but it is not likely they will consent to stand. Mr. Hall is a thorough business man, and having sat in the Council in former years has gained such experience as will render him competent to fulfil the duties of the office for the best interests of the municipality.

Mr. S. Nelson has rented the building formerly used as a stable and granary, near the water mill, and will have it moved back to the track and fitted up as a storehouse, as he intends to go largely into the purchase of grain, and no doubt will be the means of bringing many farmers into the village who otherwise would have sought other markets, and spent their money there.

At the regular meeting of Beresford L. O. L., No. 122, held in the Orange Hall on Monday the 1st inst., the following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year, and were installed with the usual ceremony on such occasions:—Bro. Richard Waram, Sr., W. M.; Bro. W. C. Sanders, D. M.; Bro. William O'Neil, Secretary; James Horner, Treasurer; S. A. McKee, Chaplain; Samuel Nelson, D. of C. Committee:—Solomon Northey, Alex. Fitzgerald, R. Chapin, Dr. Moll, C. Quinn.

A meeting of the ratepayers of the Village was called for by the Reeve to meet in the Council chamber on Tuesday evening, to discuss what action is to be taken by the Village to farther the Trent Valley Canal scheme, but owing the large number attending the Masonic and Young Canadians meetings it was proposed until Wednesday evening, when no doubt from the interest taken in that undertaking there will be a large and influential gathering, not only from the Village, but also from the adjoining townships of Smith and Douro.

At the regular communication of Clements Lodge, A. F. & A. M., No. 232, G. R. C., held in the Masonic Hall, Lake field, on Tuesday the 2nd inst., the following officers were elected to rule in the Lodge for the ensuing year, the officers nominated by the W. M. will be announced on St. John's Day, the 27th, when all will be installed:—Bro. W. Caldwell, M. D., W. M.; Bro. John Hall, P. M.; Bro. George Cochrane, S. W.; Bro. T. Sweet, J. W.; Fred. Lillycrop, Sec.; Bro. Robert Graham, Treas.

At the regular meeting of the Young Canadian's, L. O. L., No. 15, held in the Orange Hall on Tuesday the 2nd inst., the following officers were elected:—Bro. James Moore, W. M.; Bro. Wm. Preston, D. M.; Bro. Wm. Thornton, Chaplain; W. McDonald, Sec.; Thos. Mercer, Treas.; Committee,—John Preston, Richard Warren, jr., Robert Gordon, Hugh Fitzgerald.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, DEC'R. 4, 1879.

We Shudder.—W. J. Lougheed exhibits all those requiring shaving boots to give him a call.

Town Council.—The next regular meeting of the Town Council will be held on Monday evening.

Fire Brigade Changes.—At the regular monthly meeting of the Fire Brigade, on Tuesday evening, Mr. Fred Hall was elected Treasurer, and Wm. Cooke, Lieutenant of the Hook and Ladder Company.

The Boy and the Stuffer.—An unnatural small boy at Port Hope, last Sunday undertook a couple two fist cure pushed together by other boys. He underwent the operation of the cure upon with creditable firmness.

Municipal Struggle.—The village of Millbrook is hereafter to be a separate municipality from the township, and a committee is threatening respecting the ownership of the town hall erected by the township in the village.

Tax Payments.—The visitors to the Collector's office on Friday and Saturday were numerous, as by Monday all those who had not paid their taxes will be required to pay 5 per cent. increase. At least so the Town By-law says.

The Registering Mind.—"Mamma," enquired a little four year old, in the Ottawa House hall, on Monday evening, "is that an actor?" "No my dear," replied the fond mother, dilating her pupil on the subject of infantile curiosity; "that is only the Review reporter with his ears opened, waiting for the laggin."

The Port Hope Industrials Cases.—A despatch from Ft. Elgin states that at Burgwyne, yesterday, Jas. Weatherup and his wife were arrested by Government Detective Murray, of Toronto, and taken to Pt. Hope. They are the parents of the girl, Mary Ann Weatherup in court for indecently, and have been arrested for complicity.

Letterhead Showcase Paper.—W. Harper is now prepared to sell harness, horse clothing, trunks and valises at exceedingly low prices. If you want a sewing machine of the best manufacture—Wanzer F., Wilson A., Raymond or London—try him and see what money will do. 46-13 ins.

Mission Appointment and Removal.—The following appears in the Canada Gazette of Saturday:—

St. Peterborough battalion of Infantry.—No. 3 Company, Hastings.—To be Lieutenant, provisionally: Thomas R. Learmonth, gentleman, vice John Mason, left limits. Second Lieutenant Henry Blake Morton being promoted to not having done duty with the company for the past year, vice his name having removed from the list by reason of the retire ment.

Teachers Engagements.—After all their wounds, anxiety and expense, the Board of Education of Norwood have re-engaged the old staff of teachers with a trifling exception. They probably discharged them for the pleasure of keeping them in a stew, and thereby Miserably them. In answer to the advertisements a flock of over one hundred and fifty applicants almost darkened the sky, so eager was the rush for the possible feeding ground of a year's duration.

Skating.—The young fellas are quite interested in skating, although the weather has hardly been cold enough continuously to form good ice. Skating is a pleasurable and healthy exercise, and the young folks should be encouraged to skate as much as possible. Folks are not as young as they might wish to be encouraged to skate too, for in this work-a-day world of ours there is too much time given business and too little to the pursuit of health. There are few things that will bring the flower of health to the cheeks of youth so quickly as a good turn on skates.

To Make Gilt-Edged Butter.—Every dairyman wishes to get the top price for his butter. It can be done only by having it perfect in quality and appearance. When the color becomes light it is necessary to add a little of Wells, Richardson, & Co's Perfected Butter Color to keep it up to the June standard. Many well known butter buyers recommend all their patrons to use only this preparation, as it gives the most perfect color. Sold by Druggists and Merchants. 47-4ins.

Mechanics' Institute.—At a meeting of the Directors of the Mechanics' Institute held on Friday evening last, a report was received from the Property Committee stating that the new rooms over Messrs. Peacocke & Rowe's law office would be ready for occupation in the course of a couple of weeks. There were nine applications for the position of caretaker and librarian received, and that of Mr. Jas. Boyce accepted. Another grant of $200 was made for the purchase of books, and a quarter's salary voted the late caretaker.

Railway Inspection.—We learn that Mr. Walter Shanly, the eminent engineer, has made a careful inspection of the Midland railway, with a view of reporting to the directors the cost of placing the line in a condition equal to that of the Grand Trunk. The improvement in the condition of and facilities offered by the Midland has been marked and steady under the management of Mr. Cox, and we have no doubt, that when his plans have been fully carried into effect, the road will be second to none on the continent.

Auction Sales.—The following auction sales are announced to take place as below:—

SATURDAY, 6th December.—Sale at Gilbert & Moore's Auction rooms, at 10.30, of a quantity of furniture, sewing machines, and other articles. Gilbert & Moore, Auctioneers.

SATURDAY, 6th December.—At the Choate House, at 2 p.m., sale of Mr. C. J. Seymour's farm, composed of the West Half of East Half of Lot 29 in the 11th Concession of Otonabee. Gilbert & Moore, Auctioneers.

ADJOURNED SALE.—The sale of Mr. Charles Merriam's farm stock is adjourned till further notice.

SATURDAY, 6th Dec.—Mr. Eugene Sullivan's farm, withdrawn last Saturday, will be again offered for sale at the Choate House, at 2 o'clock p.m.

Worth Knowing.—Mr. Purser, of the Commercial House, has this fall been making quite a lot of improvements for the convenience and comfort of his guests, and has now increased accommodation for both "man and beast." The table is always furnished with the best viands and the bar with the choicest brands of wines, liquors and cigars. Farmers and others interested will do well to note that he offers free stable room to all who wish to put up at the Commercial. The stable will accommodate fifty horses, and contains a number of box stalls. The sheds are large, warm and very convenient. A new well has been sunk in the yard this fall. Remember the stand, corner of George and Hunter streets, opposite the new Post Office. 46-13 ins.

Volunteers and Public Property.—Recently a couple of young men left Collingwood for Manitoba, having in their possession pants belonging to the Rifle Company to which they belonged. At Toronto they were arrested and severely punished. For the benefit of any interested who may not clearly understand the regulations regarding clothing issued by the Militia Department we give the following extract from sec. 81, of the Militia Act:—

"Any person, who unlawfully disposes of or removes any arms, accoutrements or other articles belonging to the Crown, or who refuses to deliver up the same when lawfully required, or has the same in his possession, except for lawful cause, (the proof of which shall lie upon him) shall incur a penalty of twenty dollars for each offence.

Entrance Examination.—We learn, several teachers neglected to forward names of candidates intending to be present at the examinations on the 16th and 17th instant, at the time stated in the advertisements in the EXAMINER and Review. On the 25th of November, the number of papers corresponding to the number of candidates then reported was applied for and has been received. It is now too late to obtain more papers, and hence candidates delaying to send in their names may be disappointed on the morning of the examination, through a short supply of papers. If this should be the case, those candidates delaying until too late to send in their names, are not interested, can not be examined until the candidates first reported are supplied, and if there should be additional papers, then they will be admitted in the order of application.

Xmas Advertising.—As the holiday season approaches, every wheap amongst our merchants and shopkeepers are signs of busy preparations. New goods are being received; shelves show neat and whatever remained and put in "apple-pie" order; fresh accumulations looming up and in fact every effort being made to induce fetish sales during the festive season. In the midst of all this bustle and preparation we may be pardoned if we unceremoniously suggest that due attention be given to the value of "printers ink" in diminishing the heavy ledge of where all these attractions may be found. The newspaper is the true and proper medium for the distribution of such knowledge between the dealer and buyer, and without it all the merchant cannot expect to realize or reap that measure of success which his outlay and energy entitle him to. Many of our merchants well know the benefits of advertising and the valuable aid it has been to them in establishing and building up a successful business. There are others, however, who are only beginning to wake up to its usefulness. To the latter class we would especially devote our remarks and call their attention to the benefits which the EXAMINER possesses as an advertising medium, as from the many following evidences reported to us from time to time by those of the former class it is here safe to say that the latter class will be amply repaid for their outlay.

If You Want a real good blanket, shawl (either Grey or White), go to I. Robinson & Co.'s.

Postal Extension.—Gobert is the name of a new post office which has been opened out in the township of Smith.

Gone.—Donald McIntyre, son of Mr. Duncan McIntyre, of Keene, and Lecturer of the County L.O.L. of East Peterborough, was buried with Orange honors on Thursday last in Keene cemetery.

Married, Married and Disgusted.—During the month of November there were registered according to law with the Town Clerk, two marriages, four births and seven deaths.

Removal.—Mr. S. White has removed his boot and shoe store to the shop one door south of Davidson's hardware, where he intends to give greater bargains than ever during the present month.

If you want a pair of neat, stylish and well fitting boots and shoes, made to order, don't fail to call on Peat & McWhinnie, practical boot and shoe makers. 45-3in.

Monthly Meeting.—Young Canadian L.O.L. No. 1255, will hold their regular monthly meeting on Tuesday evening next, when the election of officers for the coming year will take place. A good attendance is requested.

Ladies' why suffer cold feet, while there is such a large and well assorted stock of felt boots and shoes, Dolliole overshoes, &c., to choose from at Peat & McWhinnie's boot and shoe store. 45-3in.

Trent Valley Canal Project.—Last Saturday Mr. D. Cassells, Reeve of Ennismore, was appointed by the Council of that township a member of the deputation being organized to visit Ottawa to press the above canal project upon the attention of the Government.

The Pulpit.—The Rev. Mr. Starr occupied the pulpit of St. Paul's Church on Sunday morning last. The Rev. Mr. Cameron filled the vacancy made by Mr. Starr, and General Meeting that made by Mr. Cameron.

New Low Firm.—Mr. D. S. Hutton has taken Mr. N. D. Beck into partnership in his law business, and the new firm has removed from Mr. Hutton's late offices to those over Flavelle's Flour and Feed store. We wish the new firm prosperity.

Heavy Purchase.—Several very heavy purchases were brought to market and disposed of during the past week. One very fine one weighing 615 pounds, raised by Mr. W. M. Fair, of Cavan, was attained by those who deal in the article.

Cheap Clothing.—Our enterprising clothier and out-fitter, Mr. H. Ledlaw, has this week received another large stock of tweeds and cloths, bought very cheap and which he is bound to clear off at a very small margin above cost. In all kinds of clothing he is offering pronounced bargains, especially in overcoats and tweed suits, in which lines the indications are greater than customary. Read his advertisement in another column, and if you require a suit of clothes visit the "City Clothing Store" before making our purchases, and see for yourselves the bargains he is offering.

February, 1880, will be a very remarkable month. It will have five Sundays. This hence falls to only three years in the present century, namely 1852, 1880, 1920. From these numbers it would seem that there are five Sundays in February once in 28 years, but this is not the case, as 1856 fell in 1884, but February 1908 will not have the leap year. The years will be 1880, 1948, and 1976.

The Sunday School Hostess is a first-class illustrated paper, Edited and published by Mr. C. Barker, King street, Bowmanville. The specimen copies now on our table justify us in heartily recommending it in our Sunday School friends. Send for a specimen copy before ordering elsewhere. A gratis supplement containing Notes on the International Lessons, is given with each number.

Grip's Comic Almanac.—An advance sheet of Grip's Comic Almanac for 1880 is before us, and from all appearances promises to meet with a hearty reception from the lovers of fun and laughter throughout the country. With the exception of twelve sketches representing political events of 1879, the illustrations and articles will be non-political, and will be found brimful of original humor. Price 15 cents.

Another Insanity Case.—Last week information was laid before Mr. Thos. Telford, J. P., of Ennismore, charging Helen Maloney, a resident of the township, with insanity. Mr. Telford having appointed D. Cassells, J. P., with him in the matter, ordered a medical examination, which was accordingly made on Thursday, and as there was no doubt whatever of the woman's insanity, the magistrates ordered her to be committed to Peterborough jail.

Election of Officers.—At the last regular monthly meeting of L. O. L. No. 69, held in the Orange Hall, on Tuesday evening last, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—

Bro. T. M. D. Croly	W.M.
" John Sharpe	D.M.
" R. Strain	Chap.
" John Smith	Sec'y.
" Thos. Brown	Treas.
" Maxwell Hall	D. of C.

Standing Committee.—Bros. James Dunlin, John Agnew, E. Deney, John Brown, John Green.

Recovered His Reason.—Mr. Thos. Morgan who, as mentioned in last week's EXAMINER, was brought to town from Galway and charged with lunacy before the Police Magistrate on the 30th ult., and committed to jail on a remand for Dec. 1st, has happily recovered his reason and was on Monday brought before the Magistrate and set at liberty. The symptoms of derangement seem to have disappeared and his friends and family will, no doubt, be grateful to know that he has been restored to them clothed in his right mind. It is to be hoped that his recovery may be permanent, and that he has fully escaped from the most terrible calamity that can possibly overtake any of God's creatures's.

Increased Operations.—About three weeks ago the extensive agricultural works of the Peter Hamilton, corner George and King streets, shut down operations for the purpose of making repairs and improvements, sorting up stock and making preparations for next season's business. Having then as the Yankee would say, "let go to get a better hold," on Monday, the works resumed business with a full force of hands, and expect to keep up a complete "run" until after next harvest. We are glad to know that this energetic and enterprising establishment has every reason to be satisfied with the success of the past season's operations, and that he has the prospect of continued prosperity before him—a prosperity which not only Peterborough but many take an interest but have a share in.

The Temperance Cause.—On Thursday evening last, notwithstanding the storm, there was quite a large attendance of members and visitors at the meeting of Cornwall Lodge No. 411, I.O.G.T., and a very pleasant evening was spent. The following officers have been installed for the ensuing quarter:—

George Cumberlain	W.C.T.
Mary Risher	W.V.T.
Miss Hina Evans	W.S.
James Lytle	W.J.S.
Wm. Cooke	W.T.
Alex Lumsden	W. Chap.
Louis Spry	W. Mar.
Francis Douglas	W. Dep. Mar.
Miss McWilliams	W.I.G.
— Barrett	W.O.G.
Miss Irwin	W.R.H.S.
Miss Carbop	W.L.H.S.
D. M. Sim	Lodge Deputy.

Mrs. Scott-Siddons.—The people of Peterborough were favored with a visit from Mrs. Scott-Siddons last week. The Opera House on the occasion was filled with a large and highly appreciative audience, Millbrook, Lindsay and other places in our vicinity failing in swelling the numbers deserving of hearing her histrionic efforts. The programme consisted over two hours and was selected with a view to please and at the same time afford a test of her ability as an elocutionist. During the whole recitations there was the closest attention, and frequently the enthusiasm of the audience was expressed in bursts of applause. Every part of the performance was done with the utmost grace and harmony of the highest dramatic talent. The scene from "Much ado about nothing," requiring great variety of expression, was admirably done, giving an excellent representation of Shakespeare's characters. The "Cricket" was rendered with enthusiasm. In "Pygmalion and Galla Collection," she evinced great talent, interchanging the different phases of the chapel scene, and the incantations of the different voices at impulse or imaginary call enhance but all the more to admire him. The "Creeds of the Bells" proved a sensation both pleasant and startling. The representation of a chorus of bells was well rendered, and the distinctive intonations of the different denominations as encouraged in the different bell peals produced a marvellous effect upon the audience. "Lady Macbeth" was a masterpiece of accomplished acting. The "Sonnet Recitations," embracing such American favorites as "Curfew must not ring to-night" and "Rienzi's Address," and "Rule Britannia," were most heartbeats and popular with the audience. In reply to applause during the performance she read the song of a young man, suffering from a severe cold, to his lady friend. The entertainment throughout was highly creditable and merited a very large audience of ladies and gentlemen, and we hope to see Mrs. Scott-Siddons again before the Peterborough public.

The Ritual.—In the memory of the "oldest inhabitant" never has the water in the river been so low at the season of the year as it is at present. A perceptible rise was noticed during the week. It is contributed to the rain and melting over together, and by a Rain descending by heathen kin.

The Irish Grievances.—Just at present the people of Ireland are in a state of excitement over the rent grievances, and the Home Rulers, landlords and tenants are having a warm time of it. The people of Peterborough, however, in the matter of cheap boots and shoes have no cause to complain, as the bargains given by S. White are sure to suit every one.

Supreme Accident.—Last Thursday evening Jas. Bowie, a lad of 16, received serious injury by a kick from a vicious horse. The boy had been engaged in threshing at the farm of Mr. James Fife, Otonabee, and was occupied in binding a neighbor's horse in the evening when he was suddenly struck senseless by a terrible kick. Under care of Dr. McCrea he is progressing favorably.

Weekly Bell.—Companies 1 and 2 of the Peterborough Battalion continue drilling every Thursday evening. By Spring we may expect to see the result of this extra attention in improved discipline and soldierly bearing on the part of the Volunteers, who deserve credit for taking pains to perfect themselves in their military duties.

Toronto and Ottawa Railway.—As will be seen elsewhere, the townships of Monmouth Harcourt and Madoc villages have granted By-laws granting aid to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway, in all $37,000. The people along the eastern section of the proposed line seem to be thoroughly in earnest in the matter, and disposed to forward the object of the promoters of the road in every way.

The Weather.—After a week of the most erratic conduct, in flying from one end of the thermometer to the other, and upsetting the most carefully devised prophesies of weather critics, and thereby making the life of the Review local a burden to him, Old Probs. settled down to steady work yesterday, and gave us a snowfall, indicating that he means business, and that the poor-laid-by sleter will have to be unbolted to the bones.

Sermon to St. Andrew's Society.—The Rev. Alex. Bell, preached a very eloquent sermon to the members of St. Andrew's Society on Sunday evening last. He took his text from the tenth chapter of Luke, twenty-ninth verse, viz: "Who is my neighbor?" The rev. gentleman delivered an able and instructive address and gave some excellent advice to the members, which, we trust, will prove of advantage to the "sons o' Scotia."

Removed by Fire.—On Friday morning last about 2 o'clock, fire was discovered in an unoccupied house on George street, near the Dublin House. The building, which was a wooden one, a rookery, valued at about $200, was completely consumed. It had been previously occupied by F. Quinn as a hotel, but he had lately moved to new quarters. It is presumed the fire was the work of an incendiary.

South Monaghan Bible Society.—The annual meeting of the South Monaghan and South Cavan Bible Society was held in the Presbyterian Church, at Centryville, on Friday evening, Nov. 21st. Dr. O'Hearn, the Agent from Port Hope, was present, also the Rev. James Cameron, of Millbrook. The Dr. gave a very interesting and instructive address. The Treasurer has contributed a great deal to advance the good work in the past, and we believe that the Committee will continue to do, and if possible excell any past efforts in collecting. We hope the friends will not weary in well-doing. We should all seek to spread the Truth. Officers for the coming year:—D. Truesdell, President; Thos. Dodds, Vice-President; Robt. Waddell, Treasurer; Jr. W. McBain, Secretary; W. A. Tate, Depository.—Con.

Personal.—Mr. Braithwaite left town for Montreal on Saturday last, to enter upon his duties in his new situation. Mr. Budden (his successor) has taken his position in the Bank of Montreal here.....In the Bank of Toronto Mr. Smith succeeds Mr. Rogers, removed to Barrie.....Mr. W. McKowan, of the Bowmanville Statesman, was in town last week.....Mr. W. B. Ferguson, Superintendent of the Midland Railway, was in town on Monday last.....Mr. W. Cumming, of Eastmoor, arrived home from Scotland on Monday last. He had a pleasant trip and is much pleased with with his visit.....Dr. J. J. Hammond, of Peterborough, was at the recent meeting of the High Court Canadian Order of Foresters, elected High Physician of the order.....A banquet was given to Mr. A. Niven on Saturday night by the leading citizens of Haliburton, on the occasion of his removal to Minden, where he goes to assume the duties of the office of Stipendiary Magistrate, to which he was lately appointed.

POLICE COURT.

The following cases were tried by the Police Magistrate during the past week:—

DRUNK AND DISORDERLY.

Theodore Barchard was charged by P. C. McGhee with being drunk on the street. Sent to goal for 14 days.

DISTURBING RELIGIOUS WORSHIP.

Thomas Emery, Henry Gray and Alexander Sutherland, three young lads from Ashburnham, were charged with disturbing religious service at St. John's Church, on Friday night last. Sutherland did not appear and a warrant was issued for his arrest. After a severe reprimand from the Magistrate, the other two were allowed to go upon paying a fine of $1, and costs $1.50 each.

SUPPOSED TO BE INSANE.

Thos. Morgan who was remanded to goal during the previous week for medical examination, was brought into Court by Chief of Police Sylvester. As there was no evidence against him he was discharged from custody.

SELLING LIQUOR WITHOUT A LICENSE.

Francis Quinn was charged with the above offence by the License Inspector. After hearing the evidence of several witnesses the Magistrate found him guilty and imposed a fine of $50, and $4 costs, to be paid on or before the 9th inst.

School Board.

The regular monthly meeting of the School Board was held on Tuesday evening last, in the School Buildings. Present—the chairman, Jas. Stevenson, Esq., and Messrs. Rumble, Hinrichsen, Shaw, Ernett, Menzies, Toole and Wrighton.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

The secretary reported that for the past month he had collected in fees as follows:—from the Institute, $87.75, and from the non-residents in the Public School, $11.75.

NOTICE OF MOTION.

Mr. Ernett gave notice of the following resolution, seconded by Mr. Toole.—That from and after the 1st of January next, (1880) 1st, The teaching staff of the Collegiate Institute to consist of the Principal and four teachers, 2nd, That the fees to be paid by the town pupils in the three upper forms of said Institute be one dollar per month. 3rd, That the head teachers of the several public schools be paid a uniform rate of a salary of four hundred dollars each per annum.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From C. D. Macdonald, resigning his position as a member of the School Board for No. 3 Ward. Resignation accepted.

From J. Stratton, Public School Inspector, stating that he had received from the Minister of Education, a letter approving of the special certificates granted to Miss Perry and Miss Matthews. Received.

From Alfred Bennett, applying for a situation as Writing Master. Received.

From the Secretary of the Clinton High School, asking what grant was given the Peterborough High School by the local municipality, and asking the Board to join in petitioning the government for an increase of the grants now made to High Schools. Received.

The Secretary read an extract from the report of High School Inspector Dickson, in reference to the standing of the Peterborough School. It reflected creditably on the Institution.

From Jas. Smart, Brockville, informing the Board that he had procured the right to manufacture the Ferguson School Desk. Received.

From the Educational Department, a letter in reference to the purchase of maps, &c., for the Board. Received.

From G. C. Robb, stating that the steam boat or had been examined and found in a satisfactory state.

From Jas. Coyle Brown, asking the use of the rooms for the holding of the Teacher's Association. Granted.

From the High School Department, informing the Board of the recommendation of the half yearly appointment.

From John F. Maitland, asking the Board to endeavor to have a change made in the present school law. Received.

Reports were read from the Principal as to monthly attendance during the months of October and November. The following is the average:—

	OCT.	NOV.
Collegiate Institute	110	112
Central School	262	264
1st Ward School	171	171
2nd Ward School	178	183
Ashburnham	61	61

The Principal reported on the examination of pupils for admission to the Collegiate Institute, and stated that the Board of Examiners were pleased with the manner in which the pupils acquitted themselves.

The resignation of the Head Master of the Central School was accepted, and the Principal instructed to advertise for a successor.

The resignation of Miss Perry, Assistant Teacher in the Central School, was accepted, and the Principal instructed to advertise for a successor.

The Board then adjourned.

ST. ANDREW'S DAY.

With the return each year of the 30th of November comes to Scotchmen the world over, one of the most honored days in their national calendar—the festival of their Patron Saint, St. Andrew. In no country perhaps, is the memory of the "mither land" more revered than in Canada, and in no country is this love of nationality productive of more good than in this young Dominion. Almost every town has its St. Andrew's Society—the object of which is to assist and aid the poor and deserving of Scottish birth and descent. In Peterborough, the St. Andrew's Society, since its foundation, has done good service in relieving the wants of needy Scots, and it is a pleasing circumstance that notwithstanding all the different calls attendant upon the successful working of benevolent national societies, the St. Andrew's Society keeps its exchequer in a healthy state, with funds at all times at its disposal to meet the requirements of its calls. Especially during the past few years of commercial depression, with employment scarce and wages low, have the demands upon the Society's funds been both frequent and heavy, and to those who yearly contribute to its laudable purpose, it must be gratifying that out of their abundance they have been able to assist their less fortunate and favored countrymen.

In accordance with the usual custom, the Society this year determined on celebrating the occasion with a dinner at the Choate House, and as St. Andrew's Day fell on Sunday, the festival was accordingly held on Monday evening, where quite a number of the members and their friends sat down to the excellent repast prepared by Mine Host Choate. Owing to illness, the President, James Millar, Esq., of Otonabee, was unable to be present, and at his request the chair was occupied by Mr. John Carnegie. After the bill of fare had been thoroughly analyzed and partaken of, the cloth was cleared, and the Chairman called on the company to drink the first toast on the programme, the health of the Queen, which was done with enthusiasm.—"The Queen."

Song.—"God Save the Queen."

"The Prince and Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family," was next given by the Chairman, after which followed "The Governor-General of Canada."

Song.—"Alister McAlister," by Mr. Brodie.

"The Army, Navy and Volunteers," proposed by the chair, was responded to by Capt. Edwards of No. 1 Co'y, 57th Batt., who thought the military training now given the young men of Canada was money well spent, and he trusted the Volunteers would be so improved by drill that if they were called out to defend their country, they would be prepared to discharge their duties creditably. So far as the Volunteers in town were concerned, he believed that the young men composing the companies would prove the sinews of a fine body of men.

Song by Mr. Hewie.

The Chairman in proposing the toast of the evening, "The Day and s' Who Honor it," regretted it had not fallen to the lot of some one who could have given it better preparation and done it more justice. He believed in gatherings of this kind and thought it was a right incentive to instill into the minds of all young Scotchmen Canadians to do honor to the day, and to prove themselves worthy sons of worthy sires. It was not alone the valor of her warriors that made Scotland the nation she was, but the care ful and moral training which her children received. It was well that we should teach our children to leave a record behind them that none should be ashamed of. The Scotch were accused of clannishness, but in his experience he had not observed such to be the case, especially in politics he knew that a Scotchman never changed his creed to support a brother Scot. Such meetings as the present might be turned had to account, but he believed them to be productive of much good.

Song—"Hame Cam' our guid Man at E'en."—by Mr. Hewie.

Mr. W. Telford, the Bard of the Society then read his annual poem."

At the conclusion of the reading of the poem, Capt. Edwards presented the Bard with a sprig of heather.

The 1st Vice President then gave "the House of Commons and Local Legislature," responded to by Mr. F. E. Dobbs, by a recitation of "Resistance."

"Canada our Home," was then proposed by by Mr. 1st Vice President.

The toast was responded to by Dr. J. Fife. He was proud of his nationality. He was a Canadian born and was proud to be such. His father was a Scotchman, and while he loved his own nationality he honored and remembered the country that was the birthplace of his father, a country that had produced so many great and noble men in the past. He was glad to be appointed to night with the members of the St. Andrew's Society of Peterborough.

In the absence of the 2nd Vice President, the Treasurer, Mr. W. Cumming, proposed "The Local Press."

Song—by Mr. Alex. McConnor, "When I am Far Away."

Responded to by Mr. R. B. Edwards and Dr. Fife.

"Our Agricultural, Commercial and Manufacturing Interests" was proposed by Mr. J. Patterson, 2nd Vice President.

Song by Mr. Bowie.

"Absent" was responded to by Mr. Geo. Tanner, Mr. Rowland, and Mr. Wm. Telford.

"Our Guests and Sister Societies" was proposed by the Chairman, and responded to by Mr. Wm. Hales, Mr. Tanner, and Mr. R. E. Ostrom.

Song by Mr. John Arnott.

"The Health of the President," "The Mayor and the Corporation," "The Ladies," "The Press," and "Our Host and Hostess," were then honored and responded to by a number members of the company.

After singing "Auld Lang Syne," and the "National Anthem," the meeting separated.

Ashburnham Council.

The municipal council of this village met on Monday evening last. Present—The Reeve, J. Burnham, Esq., and Councillors Calcutt, Rogers, Wand, and Mowry. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

A communication in connection with the Trent Valley Canal was read from J. J. Lundy, Esq., and received. Memorials to the Minister of Railways and Canals and the Dominion Parliament, were read, signed, and ordered to be forwarded to their proper destination.

The following accounts were presented: B. Brown, repairing fire engine, $7.80; C. Bowers, fence for year, (charity) $37.70; J. R. Stratton, printing, $3.60; J. Craig, repairing roads, $23.00; Rev. Somerville, account for charity, $5.50; J. Z. Rogers, lumber and plank, $20.65; McKee & Davidson, $3.85. Moved by Mr. Calcutt, seconded by Mr. Rogers, that the accounts be paid.—Carried.

On motion the town of Mr. Fisher, near Auburn Mills, were examined. In this connection a memorial was read from S. Fowler, Esq., stating that he was an object of charity.

A By-law appointing Jonathan Stephenson and Mitchell Calcutt Pound-Keepers, and Gilbert for Inspector, was read a second and third time and passed.

The Council then adjourned to hold a meeting on the fourth and last Monday in December, when the accounts will be audited, and other business transacted.

County Court.

The Quarter Sessions and County Court were held on Tuesday, Judge Dumoulin presiding. The amount of the business was not large, nor the issues important. The following cases were disposed of:—

BRITTAIN VS. KERR.—This was an undefended suit. Verdict for plaintiff. J. F. Donnelly for plaintiff; T. MacNaughton for defendant.

DEAN VS. CHAMBERLAIN.—An action on account of Richard Morris, on account of keep of horses, &c. Defendant's counsel moved for a non-suit. On plaintiff refusing to accept a non-suit, the judge directed the jury to find a verdict for the defendant. D. W. Dumble for plaintiff; J. F. Donnelly and H. B. Smith for defendant.

WARNER VS. MEDDER.—Case enlarged for convenience of counsel. D. W. Dumble for plaintiff; J. F. Donnelly and W. H. Mo

PETERBOROUGH, DEC. 4, 1879.

A LEGEND OF ALL-HALLOW EVE.

Majorie Cameron's Experience at Glen Ronald.

CHAPTER IV (Continued.)

I placed the lamp upon a table in a corner, and stood before the fire unbinding my hair. An inexpressible sense of something dreary laid a pall upon my heart. I glanced with fear and aversion at the sombre bed. I shrank from the green-eyed owl and grim pictures behind me, and after my night toilet was complete, I sat irresolute in the arm-chair gazing at the burning logs, and wondered why Elsie had not spoken of the dead grandmother, and why she wore such a cheap cotton gown—Elsie would scorn such a one—and why the laird and her brother had not appeared to welcome me. The profound silence depressed me intensely. I impatiently drew aside the heavy curtains of a window, and listened to the faint sough of the wind; the stars shone through straggling drifts of black clouds; a branch of ivy clung to the ledge, softly swaying backward and forward; and the tall trees beyond looked like silhouettes against the sky. I crept back again to the friendly fire, and looked at the bed, when my heart beat violently at a slight, almost imperceptible noise at the farthest end of the room. There was nothing to be seen. I satisfied myself that it was only one of those creaks in the walls and timbers of every old mouldy house which speak dumbly of the sinking flow back into the dust. Day and night it ceases not, this slow decay, but only in the night, when heart and brain are still, do we hear it. 'I am nervous and timid,' I said to myself, 'and perhaps a little homesick;' and with a resolute will I climbed into the great ugly bed, and sensibly went to sleep.

I was awakened in the bright sunshine by the harsh creaking of a door, and to my amazement, the curtains before the end window parted and disclosed the red head of Jessie, followed by the body, armed with wood and hot water.

'How did you get in at that window?' I demanded, springing from the bed.

'It's no window, mem,' returned the girl, with a grin; 'it's a door.'

'A door!' I exclaimed. 'Where does it lead to?'

'I dinna ken, mem; it's aye here.'

I laughed heartily at the girl's stupidity; for, rested and in full possession of health and youth my mercurial temperament rose accordingly. The blazing fire and the sunshine cast an air of faded respectability to the dingy old room.

'I thought you were a ghost, Jessie,' I said as I brushed vigorously at my hair.

'Na, na,' returned Jessie, as she finished her work, 'there's nae sic thing as ghosts; but auld Sandy says he has seen half a score ghosts, and on a bit the wear, and bogles and nievers and sic like deevelry, mem. Sandy's daft; he saw naught but the holly bess, and Nance gave a loud skirl and swarfed awa on the ground! She steekit her e'en and morning about a woman body dressed like a leddy with a sough o' a comin' wind. I'm no a Highlander like Nance, and I know a holly bum from a leddy.'

Naturally I followed Jessie, and looked through the parted curtains. I saw a recess with shelves on each side. The entrance door beyond opened into a wide short hall, with one door on one side and a narrow staircase at the end. It all looked commonplace enough, but I resolved to lock the door before I slept again. My inborn fearlessness asserted itself against the nervous tremors of the night, as I stood before the old dressing-table and greenish glass and tied back my long waving brown hair in a speed of blue ribbons, and the knot of lace at my throat made me prouder by contrast with my soft gray cashmere dress. I raised the heavy window and looked out. The wall Elsie had spoken of formed one of the three sides of a quadrangle. All of the windows of this part of the house were closely shuttered. An odor from the old-fashioned garden below floated up on the autumnal air—a faint decaying smell of thyme and southernwood. From a beehive in a corner of the stone wall came a murmur mingling with the song of the thrushes in a grove of beeches which stood outside of the wall, forming a boundary line between the patches of woods beyond, and great beehes of white and heather like small oaks. The resinous odor of the firs, the rosy light stealing into the sky, the soft mist rising from the loch in the far-away distance—so perfect was the awakening day in its passionless repose that I felt it was a joy to be alive.

My eerie room looked faded, in accent, and homely, nothing more; and I sang gay little chansons as I surveyed my small person in the queer old mirror that twirled my name, and lent a green and yellow hue to my pink cheeks.

CHAPTER V.

Elsie met me at the foot of the stairs, and presented me to her father and brother in her own little parlor, where breakfast was laid. The laird, a painfully thin and nervous old man, welcomed me with a few hurried words and a limp grasp of my hand, and Malcolm led me to the table with the beauty and grace of one of the golden-haired Vikings I had pored over for hours in my old Norse legends. There was little or no conversation, and my mercurial spirits sedately became depressed. Malcolm paid me no further attention, but devoted himself to his father. An intense strength of soul and restful gentleness shone in his dark sunshiny gray eyes, and a sad sweetness dwelt in the carved lips. All of this I had ever seen seemed dwarfed by comparison into utter insignificance. I felt relieved when Jessie entered and announced a man at the door from Loch Arne to see the laird about the pigs. A flush crossed the old man's thin cheek; he looked at me and at his son disconcertingly, and half rose, then resumed himself.

Malcolm immediately offered his services. 'Come, Ella,' he said with a grave smile, 'you must not keep the mare waiting. So please, Miss Cameron, forgive us, and see how in our lonely lives even the quotidian of pigs assumes vast importance.'

As he stood for a moment looking down upon me with those wonderful eyes, the thought crossed my mind, what a sensation this magnificent young chieftain would make in the home circle! As he followed his father, Elsie ran down after him, and I heard her kiss him, and thank him for letting me come, and ask if she could have the gig and pony. I did not hear his reply, but made my escape by a side-door which opened into a kitchen-garden, in a rather petulant mood. There seemed to be a mystery about everything and everybody, and I was indebted to Mr. Malcolm for my invitation. That odd old man, I thought, must have lost all their money, and is greatly ashamed of it: The cloth on the table was as plain as a cottager's fare. Poor Elsie! how glad I was that I had pandered in bringing my plainest dresses!

Two or three days passed like a dream of enchantment. For the first time in my life I experienced a perfect fascination of happiness and charmed content. We lived out in the hazy sunshine, rowing on the beautiful loch, walking and driving in the queer old gig or four-seated wagon among the lanes. Malcolm's mornings were devoted to his father, and the rest of the day to us. Once, only once, he and I stood alone under the stars; the birches' leafy summits moved to and fro by the soft breath of heaven; a lugubrious bush was on the earth; heaven was in his voice, his eyes, his tender smile, and I felt that he was all the world to me, yet he spoke no word that others could not hear.

And then followed a week of ceaseless rain and fine mist; great drops like tears fell with the brown twigs of the trees. We stood, before parting for the night, by the fire in the great hall. Malcolm, looking more than ever like one of my hero Vikings, lay full length on some sheep rugs, with his golden head pillowed on the back of a superb deer-hound.

'To-morrow,' cried Elsie, 'we shall have our first home day together, and we will go all over the house, Marjorie.'

'There ne'er was an ill but there might be a waur,' said Malcolm, mockingly. 'What possible pleasure can Miss Cameron feel, Elsie, in going over this mouldy, draughty old ruin? Do you know, Miss Cameron, that there are twenty or more rooms in this home of ours that never have a ray of daylight?'

I was puzzling my mind how to answer, when Jessie came in with the night lamps. 'It's a bonny bricht moonlicht nicht, Sirs; but there' the sough of a wind, an' awesome sound,' she continued, lowering her voice—'sobbit like a body crying for help, so Nance and Tibbie says. Auld Sandy has steekit all the doors, and they would like some guid whuskey, for the could makes their flesh creep.'

'Let Tibbie Macrae get what you need,' said Malcolm, rising; 'but remember, there must be no noise, and early to bed. The laird must not be disturbed, and his will shall be obeyed.'

I did not wait to hear the rest, but taking my lamp, flew like a spectre, as Jessie called me, to my room. I cared little for going over the house. I could only think of the happiness Jessie's announcement of the moonlight had given my foolish heart, and perhaps another day in the sunshine with Malcolm.

Indescribable terrors come to the coolest of us when we awake in the hush of night. After the first vague start from sleep into a sense of being, a senseless terror was upon me. My hearing, unnaturally keen and strained, seemed forced into a state of expectancy. Light gusts of wind rustled the vine at the window, and then wailed like a human voice in the distance. The stillness was intense. A senseless rhyme stole into my memory; unconsciously I repeated mentally again and again:

"What makes your eyes so holed?
I've lain so long among the mould.
What makes your feet so bruged?
I've walked more than ever I rode.'

The fire was dead. The yellow ray from the lamp in the corner by the fire-place flashed from some draught; the moon cast broad sheets of light through the room from the three windows. At the old desk was seated the figure of a woman, old and gaunt.

My skin tingled with the moisture of the pores. I lay still until the violent terror began to ebb; a sick weakness prevented motion I watched the figure keenly. It sat motionless; one hand supported the head, the other lay upon some papers; a jewel sparkled on one long, slim finger; a dark mantle shrouded the shoulders. Did I dream? I took the rings from my fingers and dropped them on the rug at my bedside. I was awake—broad awake. A cock crew in the garden; the wind soughed eerily in the trees; far off came the slow rumble of wheels on the rough road, and the roar of the swollen loch. I gazed steadily at the figure. Should I question it? Alas! where was my boasted courage—the poetry of my superstition? It moved, it turned, and the stony black eyes looked steadily at me. It slowly rose, and I heard a wailing, sobbing sigh as it drew nearer to my bed.

I recall a faint, deadly sickness, an effort to cry out, but the trembling voice failed. My limbs seemed palsied, and my heart stifled me with its heavy throbbings. I remember nothing more.

When I again recovered my senses the moon was on the wane, and the chair at the desk was empty. In utter discomfort, and chilled with cold, for my hair lay damp upon my forehead, I crept beneath the bed-clothes, like a shivering child, and fell asleep at last. The clock struck four in the hall below.

CHAPTER VI.

I looked out in the morning upon a verdable Scotch mist—thick, gray, impenetrable. My rings lay where I had dropped them. My first step was toward the desk. The doors were slightly ajar, and packages of paper were open and scattered about. Pale and spiritless, my face and manner attracted the attention even of the old laird. Malcolm's anxiety and interest for once were undisguised.

A headache was my excuse for my dullness, and an hour later I was introduced to the library for the first time, and installed before a bright fire, with books and papers, until Elsie was ready to join me.

Glancing listlessly over a newspaper, discovered that it was All-Saints Day! My terrible night was the eve of All-Saints, the night on which the dead come out of their graves to haunt their old homes. All the year silent and low they lie, and then, with a longing for the old home, they creep out this one night to enter the old haunts. While we sleep, the house-place swarms with the poor ghosts. This is their penance and expiation for deeds done in the flesh, until the soul in the fullness of perfection shall enter into possession of the divine. The false witness, the profligate, the murderer, the unforgiving, the miser, the sensualist, the uncharitable—it may be their toil to thus come back one night in the year, stung by an avenging Nemesis, until, their penance done, they are wafted over the Styx. The good ghosts sleep, and are troubled with no waking.

And so I thought with a dazed brain, until the dark recesses of the great gloomy room seemed peopled with phantoms, waiting in misery for their Prospero to shake off their shackles of bondage. I dropped the papers and began to examine the curious titles and carvings of the mantle-piece. I wandered aimlessly about. The large room was wainscoted with oak black with age. Several of the panels near me were filled by grim, bleak-looking portraits of old Ronald chieftains, and there was a funny oval mirror over the fire-place that gave back my reflection in three different views. Two books seemed to be a century old. In fact, my restless thoughts wandered continuously to the events of the past night. Was there a family ghost, and did they get me prosperity in the haunted chamber, or did I dream? I was horribly frightened and dazed. [illegible] was I not triumphant [illegible]

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, DEC. 18, 1879.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

We have received a communication from a prominent ratepayer in Ashfield asking how it is that that township is allowed to have a Deputy-Reeve in the Council, having only 481 ratepayers eligible to vote, while the law requires that there should be 500 ratepayers to entitle a municipality to two representatives in the County Council.

The Belleville Ontario states that there are "twenty prisoners now confined in the gaol, ten of whom are males and five females." The public mind in Belleville is now labouring with the somewhat discouraging problem—What sex do the other five belong to? Our contemporary should enlighten its readers on that point.

The appeal of Mr. Valin, respondent in the Montmorenci election case, against the judgment of the Supreme Court, respecting the constitutionality of the Dominion Election Law, has been rejected by the Imperial Privy Council. The consequence of this will be that the trial of Mr. Valin, the sitting member, will now be proceeded with.

It will be seen that the Directors of the Midland Railway have awarded a retiring gratuity to Mr. H. G. Taylor, the late Superintendent. Our contemporary, the Port Hope Times, though it very unjustly attacked the Directors when Mr. Taylor's retirement was made known, has not apparently heard anything about the very handsome grant to Mr. Taylor; or if so, it has not yet made up its mind to do Mr. Cox the simple justice of putting the matter right.

The inexorable Election Court is playing and havoc with Conservative pursuits, who have in the short space of one week lost one M.P. and two M.P.P.'s in this Province, all leaving the same inscription for their political tombs—"unseated for bribery and corruption." Bergin, of Cornwall, has gone to join Barr and Kerr; Robertson, of Hastings, is on the "ragged edge"; and it will be Carpenter's (of Wentworth,) turn after Robertson.

The first duty devolving upon the new Legislature of the Province will be the election of a speaker. It is understood that Hon. Mr. Mowat will nominate for this important position Mr. Clarke, of Norfolk, whose name was prominently brought forward for the same office at the last election of a Speaker. Mr. Clarke is admirably qualified, by ability, experience, courtesy and good judgment, to fill this post to the satisfaction of both sides of the House, and it will be agreed without respect of politics that Mr. Mowat has made an excellent choice.

The Midland Argosy says:—"Mr. J. W. Delaney, head master, and Miss D. Davis, second teacher, in the Midland Public School, have been re-engaged for another year." No doubt it was a skilful stroke of diplomacy on the part of Mr. Delaney to get his engagement prolonged for another year just at this time, as next year is leap year, and Miss Davis would be fully entitled to propound the matrimonial conundrum which Mr. Delaney seems so anxious to postpone. At the same time these protracted engagements are not the thing, and we would advise the Midland people to raise Mr. Delaney's salary and insist on his fixing the date without delay.

Mrs. Nash and two children, while attempting to cross the ice on the North Nation river, near Green Lake, were drowned.

PROPOSED NEW INDUSTRY.

We believe a gentleman representing a considerable capital has during the past week visited the town with a view to ascertain the facilities which might be available here for the accommodation of an extensive manufacturing enterprise. The gentleman referred to claims to contemplate the establishment here of a cotton factory, on an extensive scale, the requirements for which would be a lot with a frontage of 700 feet, 300 in depth, and water power of not less than 70 horse power. The proposed cotton mill would have 200 looms, would employ over 200 men, and would necessarily pay about $1,700 fortnightly in wages. We understand that the representatives of the Dickson estate have made a most liberal offer, so far as the necessary site and the required water power are concerned, and that the gentleman who is promoting the enterprise is disposed to regard the offer of the estate very favorably. It would, of course, be very gratifying indeed to all who take an interest in the progress of the town to see a manufactory of such importance established here, and we can only hope very sincerely that the project may be realized. Should, however, nothing more than mere talk come of it, it is satisfactory to observe that the managers of the Dickson estate are not disposed to throw any obstacles in the way, so far as their property is concerned, of the interests of the town, and that they are prepared to meet any such offer in a public spirit, and with commendable liberality.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

We trust that the suggestion made by Councillor Deane at the meeting of the Council on Saturday evening, in reference to the property owned by the town along the river frontage, extending from Sherbrooke Street south, will not be allowed to drop. The property is not only valuable, and its title ought not to be permitted to be prejudiced by its present occupancy; but it also affords a piece of public resort in the summer season which would be largely taken advantage of if the property were thrown open as it should be. We hope Councillor Deane will urge the matter upon the Council and insist upon steps being taken to that end.

A DOOMED INSTITUTION.

The Toronto Mail must be wilfully blind to the unmistakable expression of public opinion, when it pretends to assume that Mr. Blake's proposal to reorganize the Dominion Senate is a mere ephemeral fancy, not seriously contemplated to be realized by anybody. Last week the "Farmers Parliament," the Dominion Grange, a non-political institution, represented at the Dominion meeting by a majority of Conservative members, after a serious discussion, passed the following resolution:—

"Your Committee beg to draw your attention to the fact that, through the possible bolstering of the Dominion Senate, an irresponsible body in the government of our country, we are still burdened with what is known as the insolvency law. This action on the part of that body, by which they have taken it upon themselves to refuse sanction to the abrogation of an Act which the people of this country have demanded by a large majority of their elected representatives, requires a close investigation as to whether the advantages derived from the existence of this branch of the Government are at all commensurate with the cost of its maintenance, and the evils which it has the power, and apparently the will, when the occasion offers, to inflict upon us with reference to the insolvency laws.

And there is no doubt whatever that the farmers' representatives in this position merely gave expression to the consensus of public opinion. The Senate is not only a useless and expensive fungus attached to our parliamentary institutions, but it has shown of late years that it possesses dangerous and mischievous powers, and has just enough obstinacy and stupidity to use them for the purpose of thwarting the popular will in the legislation of the country. The proposal to amend the constitution of the Senate so as to render it more amenable to public opinion, more in accord with the representative spirit of our institutions, and of more practical utility in the work of Parliamentary government, is endorsed by the approval of a great majority of the people, and the Mail will find that on this subject Mr. Blake has the people at his back. When the proper time comes, doubtless, the people will place him in a position to carry out this sorely-needed reform. Meanwhile the attitude of the Mail on the question is more likely to do its protegee harm than good, and may make a demand for abolition take the place of one for reconstruction.

ABOUT PAYING TAXES.

It is, perhaps, scarcely expected by the people of Peterborough that anything which appears in the columns of our crooked contemporary, the Times, should be entitled to serious attention; but we are not disposed to pass over in silence a contemptible insinuation which appeared in the last issue of that delectable sheet, in which it is intimated that the taxes of the Examiner office have been settled "by presenting false and dishonest accounts as an offset for taxes." The taxes on the Examiner Building were paid in the month of November, by cheque of the publisher, which was not dishonored, as some people's cheques almost invariably are. We may further observe that the statement of a correspondent in the Examiner of last week was perfectly true, that the taxes of the Times office—whose assistant was the father of the illegal imposition in the Rates By-law, imposing an extra five per cent upon the taxes of all who had not paid by December 1st—had not, as a matter of fact, been paid at all up to December 11th. It is no particular concern of ours whether the publisher of the Times pays his taxes or not, or when he pays them; but from his attitude in the Council in regard to the collection of other people's taxes, it may be of some interest to the ratepayers of the Fourth Ward. Beyond that the matter may be safely left in the hands of the Collector, Mr. Cummings.

THE LATE JAMES MILLAR.

It is our melancholy duty this week to have to record the death (which took place in Otonabee on Monday afternoon last) of an old and respected fellow-citizen of the County of Peterborough, one who has for many years occupied a prominent position in the social life and public affairs of the county—Jas. Millar, Reeve of Otonabee. Although Mr. Millar had been ailing for some time past, his death occurred with unexpected suddenness, and occasioned a shock of painful surprise and regret throughout the community where he had been so widely known and so universally esteemed. Space does not permit us this week to pay that tribute to the life and memory of the deceased which justice demands, and which we shall endeavour to render in next week's issue of the Examiner.

OUR LOCAL INDUSTRIES.

McKee Bros.' Furniture Factory.

Dropping into the Furniture Warerooms of McKee Bros., a few days ago, our reporter was compelled to remark the variety and elegance of the stock on display, and led to enquire where a particularly handsome parlor suite in black walnut, upholstered in black and gold brocatelle, was obtained from. The answer that it was manufactured in Peterboro' by McKee Bros., disclosed a fact, by no means discreditable to the enterprise of the town, or to the skill of the manufacturers, as it was certainly equal, in style, elegance, finish, and the more substantial qualities of workmanship, to similar goods which we have seen displayed in larger cities, by more pretentious firms, as models of special excellence, and it determined our reporter to pay a visit to the manufactory, and prove from ocular demonstration, what had been told him—not that he had any reason to doubt the information—but that, taking an interest in such evidences of progress and enterprise, he preferred to be able to speak thereof from personal knowledge. Proceeding to which is situated on the Dickson Rose, a short distance north of the Carling and Stirling Rink he soon found Mr. W. McKee, who is in charge of the works, and stated his desire to be initiated into some of the mysteries, which most of us daily sit on, eat from and sleep upon, without in the least comprehending anything of beyond their comfort and usefulness. Following Mr. McKee to the basement, after an explanatory conversation, we ascertained that the motive force of all the machinery in the building was supplied by a splendid Turbine water-wheel, of 75 horse-power, manufactured, too, we were pleased to learn, in Peterborough at Mr. W. Hamilton's establishment. Here also was found the "gauge lathe," a marvellous piece of ingenious mechanism, the only one we believe of the same pattern in the Provinces outside of Hay's establishment at Toronto. Square pieces of wood are passed through it with incredible rapidity, and come out perfectly finished for chair structures, different patterns being produced by different shaped knives. As another lathe a man was engaged turning bottoms for wooden chairs, which he produced at an astonishing rate. Here too was a "boring machine," which was doing its work with as much energy, and persistence, and deadly certainty, as any lightning-rod peddler in town. Some who ever brought a fellow-creature to an untimely grave. Proceeding outside the building we found here the furnace—with its great chimney, taller than the Lieut.-Governor of the North-West territories—in which the shavings, chips and refuse are consumed, being taken thither by a curious manipulation of pneumatic forces, supplied by a revolving fan, on the first floor.

THE MANUFACTORY,

THE MACHINERY.

Proceeding thither we found over each machine a pipe leading into a larger one, which communicated with the furnace outside, and so produced a suction of air created by the fan that the chips, etc, from the machines were flying into the pipes with such marvellous velocity that one might imagine each chip a prisoner set free by the magic of the machine and in furious haste to escape from the scene of bondage. Putting out his hand to test the strength of the current, our reporter came nearly losing sight forever of these notes, and is not quite certain that he was not in danger of bodily disappearance. On this floor there was the "hub" which tariff tinker Tilley so much delights in, of much machinery in madly methodical motion. There was an endless saw, for cutting woods into every conceivable shape—a planer of superior patent, the same which, when shown at the Industrial Exhibition at Toronto by the Galt firm which manufactured it, excited so much attention—a moulding machine, which turns out mouldings of various patterns—a matcher—a machine used for tongue-and-groove work, and other machines of less importance. Still going up stairs to another story, we came to a shaping machine, a superior article which turns out portions of furniture of different patterns, of perfect finish and shape, with as much precision as if it were endowed with intelligence and good taste to boot. A tenoning machine here is a very ingenious and rapid worker, and there is also a dowel machine.

CARVING AND FINISHING.

A machine for sand-papering is very useful for its purpose, but would be a delicate thing to sit on when in motion, and destructive of the pantaloons of any person making the experiment. Another machine here turns out slats for window shutters so easily and rapidly, that one asks himself what makes a shutter cost so much, it seems such a simple thing to make it. On this flat were also the carvers engaged in their peculiar work of tracing those beautiful and graceful designs which lend so much elegance to modern furniture, and about him sections of articles in divers stages of completion. Others were engaged in "joining" the frames of sofas, chairs, etc., and the air in their neighborhood was redolent of the mellifluous glue-pot. On each of these flats, the floors are perfectly littered with rungs, seats, backs, legs, arms, and other portions of the anatomy of the various articles in process of manufacture. As each machine passes its work through with lightning-like speed, the operator casts his finished work down as he supplies the fresh piece in the rough, and the result is that he is soon surrounded by the fruits of his labor, to the detriment of the movements and the danger of the personal safety of

THE UNACCUSTOMED VISITOR,

who is in constant danger of being tripped up into some of the machines, and artistically carved, or being blown out through the refuse spout. It is only, however, when these various limbs, formed at the different machines, are "articulated," to borrow from the profession of Mr. Venus, that we begin to see the method which there is in all this conglomeration of mechanical labor, and even this is better appreciated by a visit to the story next above, where the painters and varnishers are at work, and where we can begin to get an idea of what has been accomplished in the previous stages. Here is a large stock of

FINISHED WORK,

in chairs, tables, bed-room suites, sideboards, etc.—finished that is for the upholsterer, whose work is not carried on where the ware-room is situated, and whose labor is very essential indeed, towards the perfection of the work. There is as much difference between a sofa before and after upholstering as there is between a skeleton and an animate being, or an attenuated spinster of uncertain age before and after she is "MADE UP" FOR CONQUEST.

Proceeding back to the ware-rooms on George Street again, we take a look into the upholsterer's shop, where everybody is busy and don't seem to want to be interrupted, and then have a more critical examination of the stock of furniture generally, which we now regard with a more enlightened and appreciative eye. Nor is our first good opinion of the wares on view lessened by a general survey. McKee Bros. seem, so far as our reporter could discover, to have on hand every variety of household furniture except coffins, and everything both in cheaper and more expensive lines is characterized by the same elegance and superiority of workmanship.

The firm have only been in business in their present establishment about seven months, having been burned out in October of last year, but they have the greatest reason to congratulate themselves on the extent their business has already attained, and the excellent prospects they have before them. They employ twenty-five to thirty skilled mechanics, and expect shortly from increasing demands of business to be compelled to augment the staff.

A Calcutta despatch says Yakoob Khan has arrived at Lahore. He will immediately proceed to Merut, where he will be detained for the present.

A Trip to the Tropics.

On the 27th of October last, our townsman, Mr. Harry Rush, of the firm of Rush & Elliott, left Peterborough for a trip to the South, from which, as mentioned last week, he returned on the 9th inst., having been absent exactly six weeks. From a chat with Mr. Rush concerning his experiences during his absence, our reporter jotted down a few notes, some of which will no doubt be found of interest to our readers. After a brief visit to friends in New Orleans, Mr. Rush determined to cross the Gulf, and pay a visit to Mexico, in pursuance of which determination he took passage from the Louisiana capital, in the steamer Charles W. Lord, bound for Vera Cruz, distant from New Orleans about 360 miles. The fine steamer Charles W. Lord, is a vessel of 1,100 tons burthen, and took with her a cargo of 1,700 bales of cotton. She was sailed by Captain Ledue Colton, a fine seaman and one of the most obliging and agreeable officers who ever trod a quarter-deck. They had fine weather and a pleasant trip, during which Mr. Rush saw and other curious inhabitants of the Gulf, which are not common to the waters of the Otonabee. On arriving at Vera Cruz, the steamer was weather-bound for three days and a half, lying off the old Spanish Fort, the weather, which was what is technically called a "Norther," not permitting a landing. Ships of all nations, French, English, American, Spanish, South American, etc.,—trading vessels, freight vessels, passenger vessels,—were lying there in large numbers, and a busy trade appears to be done at the port, which is the principal commercial port of Mexico. There is no harbor at Vera Cruz, and the surf is very dangerous. Vessels have to be unloaded by lighters, which take freight ashore in small quantities, the goods being moved from the hold to the lighter by means of a tackle worked by a donkey-engine.

FLYING-FISH AND DOLPHINS,

A landing having been effected, Mr. Rush was installed at the Hotel Vera Cruzana, where he was provided, as a friend of Capt. Colton, with the best room in the house. The house, he describes as very satisfactory, but the amount of extravagance and luxury in the ordinary room accomodation, took him by surprise. The hotel is of stone, three stories, with brick floors throughout. The average room is one apartment in which the strictest economy of space is observed, being of that size supposed to afford the proper facilities for "whipping a cat." It contains simply three common pallets, three plain chairs, two washstands, and very ordinary earthenware.

THE BUILDINGS OF VERA CRUZ

are generally of stone—or composition resembling it—with walls about three feet in thickness, built with a view to ameliorate the excessive heat, which, at certain seasons of the year, is said to be intolerable. The city is walled around, and contains within the mural enclosure some 4,000 or 5,000 inhabitants, a large portion of the people residing outside the walls. The town is guarded by soldiers, who are to be seen everywhere, and the necessity for whose vigilance may be gathered from the fact, that every train which leaves by rail for Mexico city, contains a car-load of government troops. The country is thronged with outlaws, who do not scruple to fire on and attack trains, especially when they are supposed to carry specie. Mr. Rush examined the engine and cars of a train which was covered with bullet marks, and appeared to exist in a

PERIPATETIC STATE OF SIEGE.

The inducements to travelling are therefore not great, unless the passenger is fond of excitement, and can afford a suit of bomb-proof clothes. It is a common sight to see the country peasant riding his mule or donkey, laden with produce for sale—generally coffee, or water, which is brought to the city from the mountains in this primitive way—armed with two long pistols, and a sword, and presenting a spectacle that would create a big sensation on Peterborough market. Mr. Rush saw figs, cocoa-nuts, and almonds growing on the trees, and plucked some bunches of almonds, which he brought home as a souvenir; and he had the extreme felicity, far exceeding the wildest dream of his boyhood, of beholding a

MONKEY ON HIS NATIVE HEATH,

—that is to say, swinging by the tail in a cocoa-nut tree. Sunday appeared to be the only day for amusements, for which there is a large arena with a high enclosure, within which Vera Cruz fashion and beauty indulge in the excitement of the Bull-fight or the relaxation of the Circus. The people appear to be of two classes—the very wealthy; and the very, very squalid, miserable, gaunt, and hungry poor. The work of the town is done entirely by prisoners, of whom there are constantly large numbers, under the supervision of the inevitable military. Mr. Rush visited the

OLD SPANISH FORT,

which stands about half a mile out in the surf, and where are kept about 150 prisoners of state, all who go there, it is said, being entertained by the military during the balance of their lifetime. He inspected the dungeons, built down below the surface of the gulf, and which seemed damp and dismal enough to accommodate even a "prisoner of Chillon." He visited the observatory, where are instruments by means of which a vessel may be sighted eighteen miles distant, and where a look-out is constantly maintained. The man on duty—a prisoner always—signals the approach and description of a vessel to the port, when a pilot is despatched to the visiting vessel. The coast is very bad, and when a storm comes up the shores are thronged with people, like boats ready, to rifle cargoes, baggage, and even that ghastly fruit, which sometimes, after a great disaster, the Gulf casts upon the Mexican shores. During the three days his steamer was wind-bound off the town, the shores were lined night and day with these kind of fishermen, waiting with ghoulish expectation for the plunder of which they were fortunately disappointed.

VULTURES WAITING THEIR PREY,

These people's relations, the tarissy-bessards, infest the city, devouring the refuse lying about, and consciously helping on the offal-carts of the scavengers, for a richer feast. All kinds of strange people swarmed, and the country people bring in promiscuously and all by mule or donkey carriage, the loads being conveyed in packs on the backs of the animals.

Mr. Rush remained eight days in Vera Cruz, during which time he made the acquaintance of the Italian Consul and the Captain of the Port, both of whom spoke English, Spanish and French in, however, almost exclusively spoken. On Sunday he dined on board with a number of captains of vessels, from among whom he brought away pleasant recollections of Captain Mastrolmah, of the City of Mantua, and Captain Reynolds, of the City of New York. They brought a cargo of coffee back to New Orleans, and had a pleasant and uneventful voyage.

NEW ORLEANS.

Mr. Rush spent a very pleasant time in San Francisco, which is a great commercial port, and whence most of the cotton of the south-western States is exported. The city itself is too much like other American cities to merit any special description. A bale of cotton, as brought in by the producer, is about 5 feet square, bound up in old hoops and virus. In the city it is pressed to the limits of about 12 inches square, and made ready for steerage as cases freight. Before leaving, through the kindness of Mr. James Walsh, Commission Merchant, New Orleans, he was furnished with a number of samples of sugar from the plantations.

Mr. Rush cannot speak in too high terms of Captain Colton, through whose courtesy and thoughtful attentions he was enabled to make his trip much more pleasant and interesting than it would otherwise have been, and he advises any one going that way to place themselves under Captain Colton's genial protection.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.

Peterborough, Dec. 18, 1879. 51-6ins

Mr. Rush left New Orleans on Saturday the 7th, reaching in Illinois, and crossing by way of Chicago and Detroit, arrived home in Peterborough on Thursday. He brought home a number of curious souvenirs of his trip to the tropics. Among other things some very choice cigars and tobacco, which latter our reporter "sampled" with due appreciation. He brought home with him also, a fine lot of oranges, plucked from the tree by his own hand, and which may be seen with other curiosities at the store of Rush & Elliott. He has also two very beautiful Mexican parrots. Mr. Rush enjoyed his trip very much, but says he wouldn't be condemned to live in Vera Cruz for a hundred dollars a minute.

THE FIRST SNOW

An Enterprising Firm.

Perhaps in no previous year have the merchants of Peterborough developed a greater spirit of enterprise in the quantity and quality of their Christmas importations, as may be easily ascertained by a look at any of the leading stores. Among them all, there are none more fully equipped for the Holiday trade than the extensive firm of T. W. Robinson & Co. Mr. Robinson has just returned from the wholesale markets, where he has selected one of the choicest, and most varied stocks ever brought into Peterborough. This stock is now on display, and we would strongly advise our lady readers not to fail to see it before they complete their Christmas purchases. In addition to the usual superior lines of choice family groceries, for the wholesale and retail trade, T. W. Robinson & Co. have on view one of the finest stocks of china and glassware to be found in the Province, both as regards extent and variety, and quality as well. A special feature is a large line of lamps of every conceivable design, and each in itself an article of household ornament of exquisite elegance. In china they have an extensive variety in every grade, all of surpassing beauty. In fancy vases he has some gems of rare merit, as well as Parian ware which must have been selected with the eye of an artist; cut glass water bottles of delicate designs, hand painted tea and dinner sets, and cheese pans. The ladies will be sure to go into ecstasies over the beautiful Majolica ware, while they will find also those articles of verte of various descriptions which good taste nowadays makes a most essential feature in the adornment of a drawing-room. Dresden china which to look at is to long to possess, fancy flower pots, Bohemian glass ware of exquisite workmanship, are among the attractions which will be found at T. W. Robinson & Co's. and the greater portion of which, we opine, will be required in the holiday purchases of our readers. That there is a market here for goods of this class, is an evidence of growing culture and improving good taste among the people, as the presence of such articles in a household invariably indicates a degree of refinement on the part of those who choose this method of beautifying their homes, and it is gratifying to know that this firm has the enterprise to supply the wants of all such. It is hardly necessary to refer to the general grocery trade of the firm, as their reputation is so well established that the goods need no recommendation. Buying on an extensive scale and importing direct, they are able to sell to their customers at about the same rate the Montreal wholesaler charges to the retailer, and his customers accordingly get the benefit. He has an unusually heavy stock, bought at the most favorable rates, which will be sold at the lowest advance on cost. We strongly advise our lady readers to pay the establishment of this firm a visit, if for nothing else than to see for themselves some of those beautiful wares to which we have referred.

December, 9th, 1879. ly

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, DEC'R 18, 1879.

Tax Collectorships.—On Thursday, Mr. Gelley, Collector of Otonabee, met those of the ratepayers who wished to pay their taxes, at the Croft House. About three thousand dollars were paid in to the Collector during the day.

Good Rails for the Midland.—For the improvement of the Midland Railway, Mr. Cox has purchased 4,000 tons of steel rails to be placed on the line between Lindsay and Beaverton, and it is expected that they will be laid by the middle of July.

Our Canal Project.—Mr. Sisk, C. E. has been instructed to make an examination of the country about Lake Simcoe with a view of ascertaining the most feasible route for the outlet of the proposed Trent Valley Canal into the Georgian Bay.

Lakefield Harness Depot.—W. Harper is now prepared to sell harness, horse clothing, trunks and valises at exceedingly low prices. If you want a saving sweetness of the best manufacture—Wanzer F., Wilson A., Raymond or Louise—try him and see what money will do. 49-12 ins.

The Grangers.—At the meeting of the Dominion Grange, held at Toronto last week, among the representatives present were Mr. Hugh Davidson, of Smith, and Mr. Dawson Kennedy, of Otonabee. Mr. Kennedy was elected one of the Auditors of the Dominion Grange.

The Trent Valley Agitation.—We observe a letter in the Montreal Gazette of last week, by Mr. John Carnegie, of this town, in which the subject of the Trent Valley Canal is very ably handled, and the advantages which it would offer to the commercial and forwarding interest of Montreal, discussed in a manner which ought to strongly impress the Montrealers of the importance of this scheme to their interests.

To Dairymen.—Every dairyman wishes to get the top price for his butter. It can be done only by having it perfect in quality and appearance. When the color becomes light it is necessary to add a little of Wells, Richardson, & Co's Perfected Butter Color to keep it up to the June standard. Many well known butter buyers recommend all their patrons to use only this preparation, as it gives the most perfect color. Sold by druggists and Merchants. 47-dlm.

The Famine in Ireland.—The Irishmen of Montreal have already organized measures for the collection of a fund in that city to contribute to the relief of the suffering and distressed poor in Ireland. An esteemed correspondent writes asking us to make the suggestion that the Irishmen of Peterborough should take steps in a similar direction. No doubt there are many in this county who have long ago acquired that affluence and ease, upon to the honesty and industry of every man in Canada, who can, from old time recollection, vividly imagine the horrors of such destitution as is threatened in Ireland this winter, and who would be even glad of the opportunity of contributing out of their ample means towards so worthy an object.

Worth Knowing.—Mr. Purser, of the Commercial House, has this fall been making quite a lot of improvements for the convenience and comfort of his guests, and has now increased accommodation for both "man and beast." The table is always furnished with the best viands and the bar with the choicest brands of wines, liquors and cigars. Farmers and others interested will do well to note that he offers free stable room to all who wish to put up at the Commercial. The stable will accommodate fifty horses, and contains a number of box stalls. The sheds are large, warm and very convenient. A new well has been sunk in the yard this fall. Remember the stand, corner of George and Hunter streets, opposite the new Post Office. 49-dlm.

Narrow Escape from a Terrible Accident.—Mr. J. Moore, eldest son of Mr. D. Moore, of Otonabee, last week had a very narrow escape from what might have been a terrible fate. It appears that Mr. Moore had been engaged in threshing during the day, and just as they were about to quit work, the young man mounted the loft to get his coat which had been left there. Crossing the loft immediately above the machine, he stepped on the end of some loose boards that gave way beneath his weight, precipitating him directly into the cylinder of the machine, which had at that moment stopped motion. Had the fall occurred a few seconds earlier, we should have had to chronicle a terrible and perhaps fatal accident; as it is Mr. Moore escaped with some bruises and one or two new phrenological developments.

The Model Subscriber.—Will. Carleton thus describes the model subscriber, who visits the EXAMINER office once or twice in a century, and who always has the privilege of shaking hands with the proprietor:—

"Good morning, sir. Mr. Editor, how are the folks to-day?
I owe you for next year's paper—I thought I'd come and pay;
And Jones is a-goin' to take it, and this is his money here;
I shut down lendin' it to him, and then cleared him to try it a year.
And here's a few little items that happened last week in our town;
I thought they'd look good in the paper, so I just jotted them down.
You're doing the politics baily, as all the family agree;
Just keep your old goose quill a-flappin' and give them a good one for me.
And now you are chock full of business, and I won't be taking your time;
I've thirteen of my own I must 'tend to—good day, sir; I believe I will climb."

An Impertinent Consideration.—As a successful plum pudding is the very climax of domestic bliss, and a failure in that respect, in that important crisis, an irreparable disaster, all good housekeepers are just now agitating the momentous question—where shall we get our Christmas groceries? All well-regulated heads of families—and the women who bemoan the Christmas cracking is the head of the family just now—are duly and properly anxious that they shall get the very best flour, the best and freshest fruits, the best liquors, the finest sugar, and the most delicate condiments, and equally anxious to buy the same where they can get the best satisfaction for the least money. All such will read with interest the advertisement of Mr. R. Morrow, elsewhere to be found, and will note not only the fact that he possesses a fresh supply of superior reasonable groceries and liquors, but the equally gratifying information, that he will sell the same at the old prices, notwithstanding the recent general rise in all kinds of groceries. Mr. Morrow's new stock, laid in expressly for the Holiday trade, is both large and varied, and care has been taken in purchasing, to secure everything of the very best quality. This is especially the case with the fruit department, and with various articles of esparn. Housekeepers will not fail to be delighted with the unexceptionable excellence of these articles. Another line to which Mr. Morrow has devoted special attention is that of teas, the different brands of which have been carefully selected, all from last year's crop—a wholesome, fragrant article which is bound to give satisfaction. Those who buy their Christmas supply of groceries from this establishment will find their money prudently and economically invested, and will be, we doubt not, well satisfied with the result of their dealing.

Another Matrimonial Event.—Another of the eligible young men of Peterborough has gone ahead for a helpmate, and as will be seen from the following extract from the Lindsay Post, has succeeded in his mission:—"St. Paul's church was well filled on Tuesday afternoon last with the elite of Lindsay, the occasion being the marriage of Mr. G. Q. Hilliard, eldest son of Mr. Geo. Hilliard, M. P., Peterborough, and Miss M. E. Musgrave, grand-daughter of Mr. Walter Needler, of this town. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. T. Smithett, D.D., and was rendered more than usually impressive by the presence of the choir of the church, who formed out en masse out of regard for the bride, who has been for several years a very zealous worker in the Sunday School, and is held in high esteem by the congregation. As the procession filed up the isle the wedding march pealed forth from the organ and the wedding party took up their position within the chancel. The bride, who was appropriately dressed and looked charmingly, was supported by three bridesmaids. The groom, the bride's bright black three-years old sister, Minnie Dimond, daughter of H. J. H. Dimond, and the others were Miss Hilliard, sister of the groom, and Miss Lottie Smithett. The groom was supported by Mr. Harry Stapleton and Mr. Thos. Fergus, both of Peterborough. The bride was given away by Mr. Wm. Needler. After the ceremony the happy couple received the congratulations of a host of friends and took their departure by the Midland for a short tour to Quebec and the Montreal Stakes. The presents to the lady were numerous, costly and elegant."

The Remember Fair.—The Remember Fair will be held on Tuesday next, and if the statistics say anything good, a brisk business may be anticipated.

Fraserville.—The Methodists of Fraserville will hold a grand soiree in their church on Christmas Day, for which a most interesting programme has been arranged.

"Am and Egos."—Mr. J. W. Flavelle has just received a choice lot of super-cured hams, of this season's make. They are unusually fine—try them.

Accident.—At noon yesterday, on, Morty Hanlon was in the act of coupling cars at the Midland Station, he had his arm caught and badly injured. Dr. King was called when to attend to the case.

Gratuity to a Retiring Official.—At a recent meeting of the board of directors of the Midland railway a gratuity of $1,500 was voted to Mr. H. G. Taylor, the late superintendent.

Farm Lots for Sale.—Attention is drawn to offer for sale by public auction, on Saturday, the 20th instant, at the Queen House, at 2 o'clock p.m., several valuable farm lots at present occupied by Mr. C. Spilsbury, North Monaghan.

Sale of Lands for Taxes.—The Treasurer's sale of land for taxes took place on Tuesday, at the Court House, here, when there was a large attendance of parties interested as owners of [illegible] properties advertised.

"Tonberry," the new powder for whitening the teeth, purifying the breath, cementing the mouth—brightens, restores, confers little toilet pen extinct. Ask your druggist for "Tonberry." Price 25c.

Russian and German Felt boots, American and Canadian [illegible] Moccasins, Shoepacks and Snowshoes just received at the wholesale and retail store of H. Stevens & Son.

Intermediate Examinations.—The intermediate examination of pupils attending the public schools began yesterday, and will probably be able to announce the result next week.

The Rag Baby.—A Mr. Grills, one of the godfathers of the unfortunate rag baby, addressed a meeting in the Council Chamber, last evening, in favor of the scheme for a wild-cat currency, and repudiation of our honest debts.

How Don't You Forget It.—Purchasers should always buy their supplies when they have the largest stock to select from, particularly in boots and shoes. This advantage is to be had by buying at the wholesale and retail boot and shoe store of R. Stevens & Son.

Personal Mention.—Capt. Grover, Capt. Rogers, and Capt. Edwards have taken first-class certificates at the recent militia examinations, and Lieut. Beck and Lieut. Miller have taken second-class. Capt. Edwards was commissioned on his very satisfactory examination, and was awarded a first-class.

The Shooting and Courting Match.—Expectant curlers and skaters whose patience has been sorely tried by the cloak of our weather, have all our sympathy at the prospect of good cold ice for the be ance of the winter, and next week we may be able to indicate something of the programme which is in progress of preparation in both lines of amusements.

The Hydesville Fiend.—Last week the Ashburnham Bible Christian Church had a narrow escape from burning by the explosion of a coal oil lamp being used by the caretaker. Fortunately Rev. Mr. Cannon happened to be at hand and extinguished the flames, after some trouble, by smothering them with his coat.

Lacrosse is making a specialty in Ladies Skating Boots, in all widths and quarter sizes.

Another Benedict.—The many friends in this locality of Mr. A. P. Bower, druggist, formerly of Lakefield, will be interested in the information that he was married on the evening of the 25th ult. to Christina, daughter of Mr. David Hogg, of Perth, where Mr. Bower is now a resident.

Should be Encouraged.—We hope to see a large attendance at Bradburn's Hall on the evening of Friday, 26th instant, when the pupils of the Convent will give a musical and dramatic entertainment, which from past experience we may be sure will be well worth patronizing.

Annual Soiree.—The annual soiree of Selwyn Temple No. 93, I.O.G.T., will be held on Christmas Day, when a very pleasant time is anticipated. In the evening a literary entertainment will be given, a feature of which will be a selection of music during the course of the proceedings by the Indian Brass Band from Chemong Lake.

Weights and Measures.—Mr. Thos. Cahill, Deputy-Inspector of Weights and Measures, is now busily engaged in a thorough inspection of the weights and measures of his district, and so far as those in Peterborough have been examined, has found them very accurate. This speaks well for the honesty of dealers in the town, as generally the experience of the Inspectors has not been so favorable.

Sleighing at Last.—Our merchants, who had begun to wear somewhat long faces over the prospect of a dull Christmas trade, are now in the best of spirits. Snow fell on Sunday and accumulated steadily until there is now very fair sleighing, with every prospect of its continuance for the holiday trade. Business has since been brisk, and will no doubt continue so for some time to come.

Sunday School Festival.—The annual festival in connection with St. Luke's Sunday School will be held in the Town Hall, Ashburnham, on Tuesday evening next, the 23rd December. The children will recite suitable pieces and sing their Christmas carols, after which gifts will be distributed to all who have been in regular attendance during the year. The entertainment will commence at 6.30 p. m. Admission ten cents, proceeds to be devoted to the Sunday School Library.

Methodist Anniversary.—The anniversary sermons of the George-street Methodist Church will be preached this year on Sunday, 21st Dec., morning and evening, by Rev. Samuel Hunter, of the Bloor-street Church, Toronto. Rev. Mr. Hunter, the founder and formerly the pastor of the Dominion Methodist Church, is an able and eloquent clergyman, and those who have the pleasure of attending these services cannot fail to obtain both pleasure and profit. On Monday evening there will be a soiree in the lecture room of the church, for which the ladies have made such ample provision, that we can confidently predict a splendid success. Addresses will be delivered during the course of the evening by Rev Mr. Hunter and others.

Alleged Criminal Libel.—On Monday last, Wm. Marshall, baker, of Fenelon Falls, arrived in town accompanied by his lawyer, and laid information before Mr. Edwards, J.P. (in absence of Mr. Hatton), charging Wm. H. Robertson, publisher of the Times, with criminal libel, the alleged libel consisted in publishing in the Times of Oct. 11th, the statement that the village baker of Fenelon Falls, had been arrested for selling light-weight bread, the 4 lb. loaf only weighing 3½ lbs. Marshall is the only baker in Fenelon Falls, and alleges that the said publication was false and did him serious injury. The case will come before the Magistrate on Tuesday next.

"What Shall We Buy for Christmas Presents."—This is the conundrum which is just now agitating the public mind. What can be more suitable for a Christmas present than a set of furs? or a fur garment of any description? Nothing can hold more to the richness and elegance of a lady's toilet in the wintry season than furs, whether worn as jackets, hats, boas, muffs, or even as trimmings, while at the same time nothing is more economical, useful or comfortable. Nature too, has provided the different tastes and conditions, so that the comfort and elegance is within the reach of all and nobody who has a thoughtful friend to make them a Christmas present, need suffer from the cold blasts of the after winter. Those who want to get a first-class article in furs, both as to style and value, at the cheapest rates, should call and see the elegant stock at W. Loth's establishment, George Street. He has also a fine lot of ladies' and gentlemen's kid mitts and gloves received for the season. See advertisement. 50-4 ins.

Sabbath School Anniversary.—The anniversary in connection with the Sabbath School under the auspices of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, Swan's Corners, came off on the evening of the 15th December. The weather was all that could be desired. The tables were in the Orange Hall, which was kindly lent for the occasion. After tea the audience removed to the church, which was comfortably filled, and the proceeds from the public tea were very satisfactory. The talents of the children were attended to with the greatest care, reflecting much credit on the parents. The speakers by the Rev. Mr. McCullough, Dr. Hurdman, Dr. Fife and others, were very good. The choruses and recitations of the children were excellent. Miss Phillis Rogers, with her usual ability, and Mrs. Finney, of Norwood, presided at the organ. The choir consisted of Miss Thompson, of Toronto; Miss Moore, of Peterboro', Miss Allegra Stanton and others from Norwood.—Com.

The Peterboro Falls Forger.

We mentioned last week, that just as we were going to press on Wednesday evening, a man named Thomas Johnson alias James Johnson, had been arrested, charged with the crime of forgery. The circumstances attending the case show the man to have been either a very lazy knave or a consummate idiot. Judging from the following paragraph from the Fenelon Falls Gazette it does not appear that Thomas succeeded a very elevated position in the esteem of his neighbors there:

"On Tuesday evening last some person or persons unknown broke open the back door of Thomas Johnson's barber shop in this village, and pilfered their clothes of the proprietor by cutting the stitching of the pockets and thereby getting some articles of furniture. We are well aware that T. J.'s frequent evidences of the possession of a double pocket pricked some fond admirer with rather improper, but that Queen's Justice a malicious injury to his property."

Mr. Johnson, it seems, came up here to Peterborough on Tuesday morning, the day in which the material thrown was receiving the above mentioned attentions, and was [illegible] in the same car with a couple of professional cops from Barrie, one of whom he succeeded in borrowing $3 from, and who forgot temporarily the old adage about a certain class of people and their money. On arriving here he went to Mr. Thos. Saunders, to whom he offered for sale a joint note signed by Arthur McQuade (the name for Sarah Victoria) and William White, endorsed by James Robinson, which name he assumed, for the amount of $250. After some persuasion Mr. Saunders agreed to buy the note for the very modest share of $25, and paid the pseudo Robinson a portion of the money. Robinson thereupon left, and Mr. Saunders, probably judging the bargain to be small too good a one, became the possessor of the genuineness of his newly acquired property, and his doubts were by no means alleviated when he found that the gentleman had engaged a livery rig from Mr. White to take him to Fraserville, seven miles down the Midland. It does not seem that the fellow had contracted any fear of detection, but he had visited Peterborough before and succeeded in borrowing money from one or two parties under false pretenses—among others $5 from Mr. Wm. Croft, of the Croft House—and several of these friends of his were anxious to interview him, and chivalrize for his spare. To avoid these he fled to Fraserville, to which classic village there were men speeding Mr. Brethours, Constable McGhee, Mr. Croft and one or two others, all having a keen interest in the future movements of the unconscious fugitive. At Fraserville they found the gentleman ready for his departure by the train, when he was promptly arrested by Mr. McGhee, who no-doubt has a way of having committed a forgery. Johnson at once admitted the fact, and returned what he had left of the money, some $17.50. At Mr. McGhee's pressing instance he returned to town, and was easily persuaded to accept the hospitality of the County Gaoler, Mr. McWilliams, for an indefinite term. Mr. Saunders' charges over cost a warrant against him for procuring money under fraudulent pretences, and he was brought before the Police Magistrate on Friday. Mr. Hatton remanded him till Monday last to give him a chance to produce evidence in his favor respecting his character. This, probably from prudential reasons, he failed to attempt, and on Monday morning, having pleaded guilty, he was sentenced to three months in the county gaol at hard labor. It is, of course, open yet for Mr. McQuade or the County Attorney to proceed against him for the crime of forgery, but it is not known whether this will be done or not. Johnson's friends are respectable people living at Bethany, but he himself bears the reputation of being an unmitigated scamp. He has a stylish appearance, good address, and an undeniably fine conversation, as several persons in town can testify from sorrowful recollections. Three months hence he will again be let loose upon society, and if he continues to improve upon his past exploits, will no doubt be able to secure a lengthened apprenticeship to Her Majesty, and a chance to learn a trade at Kingston.

Creeds of the Bells.

A correspondent asks, "Could you not oblige your thousands of readers by publishing the 'Creeds of the Bells?'" In answer to this request we give the poem below as read by Mrs. Scott-Siddons. Although more suited to the latitude of New York than anywhere else, the description will be found on the whole to be correct and certainly very vivid. The poem was written by Mr. G. W. Bungay. The notes as to how it should be read are by Mr. Richard Lewis, author of the "Dominion Elocutionist."

How sweet the chime of the Sabbath bells!
Each one its creed in music tells.
In tones that float upon the air,
As soft as song, and pure as prayer;
And I will put in simple rhyme
The language of the golden chime.
My happy heart with rapture swells
Responsive to the Sabbath bells.

(1) "In deeds of love excel—excel," Chimed out from tried towers a bell;
"This is the church not built on sands,
Emblem of one but triple with bands;
In forms and sacred rites revere,
Come worship here—come worship here:
In ritual zeal in faith excel,
Chimed out the Episcopalian bell.

(2) "Oh, heed the ancient landmarks well,"
In solemn tones continued a bell;
"No progress made by mortal man
Can change the just, eternal plan.
Do not not invoke the avenging rod;
Come here, and learn the way to God.
Set to the world forward! / forward!"
Pealed out the Presbyterian bell.

(3) "Oh, swell, ye clamorous waters, swell,"
In mellow tones rang out a bell;
"Profess faith alone in Christ on cross:
Man must be plunged beneath the wave,
To show the world unfaltering faith
In what the sacred scriptures saith.
(4) "Oh swell ye rising waters, swell,"
Pealed out the clear-toned Baptist bell.

(5) "Not faith alone, but works as well
Must test the soul," said a soft bell.
"Come here, and cast aside your load,
And work your way along the road.
With faith in God, and faith in man,
And hope in Christ, where hopes began:
Do well—do well—do well—do well,"
Pealed forth the Unitarian bell.

(6) "In after life there is no hell,"
In rapture rang a cheerful bell;
"Look up to Heaven this holy day,
Where angels wait to lead the way.
There are no fires, no flames to light
The future life; no lost souls' nights.
No hell—no hell—no hell—no hell,"
Rang out the Universalist bell.

(7) "To all the truth we tell—we tell,"
Showed in accordance, a bell;
"Come, all ye weary wanderers, see!
Our Lord has made salvation free.
Repent! Believe! have faith! and then
Be saved, and reach the Lord. Amen.
Revelation's free we tell—we tell,"
Sheeted the Methodists bell.

(1) This line is to be sung like a chime of bells; the second line is only read, but the accompanying tone is sung to "excel" should seem to be echoed, varying the chimes on each two lines. If the reader can not sing the chimes, the lines may be read in a pure high tone.

(2) Read in imitation of the tolling of a bell, deep and slow. Dwell on the Italic words like a tolling bell.

(3) Read like No. 2, but higher pitch.

(4) Same as No. 3 but closer and chant "swell."

(5) Same as No. 3, but softer tone. Swell with greater power on "Do well," &c., giving a chanting note "swell."

(6) Loud and clear, not of a bell, chantier "No hell," &c., in a high, triumphant tone.

(7) Chant loud and clear. Rise higher on "Come all," &c. Chant loud and rapid "Repent," &c. The last line to be read.

A LEGEND OF ALL-HALLOW EVE.

Majorie Cameron's Experience at Glen Ronald.

CHAPTER VIII (Continued.)

'Never,' said Elsie, shaking her curly head mournfully. Grandmother never allowed it, and papa never has been in the mood, but our low resisters,' and she smiled sadly, always pretend to be sick, and manage to have a little gathering in the kitchens, and something but to keep up courage against the bogies, and we don't mind that, do we, Malcolm?'

I remembered with a shiver one year ago, when I was unaware of the day of the month.

Malcolm smiled affectionately as he said, 'No, indeed, little sister; but talking of All-Saints Eve, are you never superstitious, Miss Cameron? Have you no dread of Hallow'en, as we call it here, where witches and evil spirits are abroad upon their baleful errands? Old Sandy and his familiar, Nance declare they hear the brownie o' nights.'

'What is the brownie?' I asked with a little tremor in my voice.

'The brownie is a domestic spirit, very harmless in its way, whose voice is always heard lamenting when a dancer or death is about to befall the family, like the Irish banshee. Now I would not object to a family brownie if it came in the shape of one of those beautiful Valkyries of the Gothic paradise, who buster on the spirit of the departing warrior that heaven he eagerly rushes on death to obtain.'

And Malcolm looked at me with so intense a gaze that, to conceal my emotion, I said, laughingly, 'More practical persons would prefer to live in these prosaic days than die for any reward the gods might offer. Some day I will sing to you a deliciously frightful old ballad or legend of All-hallowe'en, called 'Bonny Jane,' with such a weird ending, as this:

"'Yet legends say, at Hallowe'en,
When silence holds her deepest reign,
That still the ferryman fiend is seen
To wait the monk and bonny Jane.'"

CHAPTER IX.

I changed my dress, and sat quietly waiting in a soft flannel dressing-gown and slippers for the household to retire. When all sounds ceased, I gently opened my door and looked down the hall, where a niche lamp burned all night, and where I intended to light my candle, when, to my intense surprise, I saw the laird before me, with weak uncertain step approaching the stairs, holding his lamp in his hand. I swiftly and softly followed as he turned down the passage leading to the room where I had fully made up my mind to watch by the door during the mystic hour. He paused in, and I watched his movements, still keeping near the entrance. Two shaking hands placed the lamp on top of the desk; he then opened the doors, muttering: 'It must be here. There must be something. Mother, mother, how you hurt me! You never meant it.' To my horror, the same awful figure suddenly appeared near him. I stood in awe-stricken fascination. The hands stretched forth appealingly; the face wore a look of agony. The unconscious old man turned, gazed for a second, with a cry of horror, and fell prostrate on the floor. I fled shrieking from the spot and down the hall to call Malcolm and Elsie, who heard my cries and rushed from their rooms. They flew in agony of fear to their father's side, and I followed as fast as my shaking limbs would permit. The papers lay scattered about, the chair was overturned, and the old man lay like one dead, with wide-open eyes, and an expression of intense horror imprinted on his face. They carried him to his room. I simply told them that I had followed their father, fancying he was walking in his sleep, which was true. The doctor arrived in an hour, and give no hope of his lingering longer than the next day. I was left to myself, and my dream came to me as if by inspiration. There was a mystery. It might be explained by the book, and the old man's peace of mind restored. I then shared the vigils of the brother and sister until they sent me to bed. Alone again, I tried to recall my dream. The book was old, with a leather cover, the writing in black and red ink. Then with a determined will, before day dawned, I took my candle and retraced my steps to the fatal chamber. All was still, 'Poor ghost!' I thought to my heart swelled with pity, 'whatever brings you from your grave, perhaps I can give you rest.' I opened the doors, and resolutely took out all of the papers, and scrutinized each one when I found a small diary. A [illegible] pressed my trembling more than a narrow aperture. For the first time in my life my own Elsie and Orlan served me unduly.

After some talk [illegible] to forcing me head through [illegible] and grasped the book cover of a book. Another trial of strength, and I held an old ragged book eagerly to the light, and a rapid glance through the leaves showed writing in black and red ink. There was nothing else in the drawer but packages of seeds.

In one's life sometimes there comes some great shock, which either hazards the faculties or stimulates every power of mind and body into action. The horrible fact of a dream being a reality, that I was in some supernatural or extraordinary manner in rapport with a being of another world, which was clearly no illusion of the brain, while it nearly paralyzed my limbs, aroused in me a fearful sense of responsibility and forced me into action. A terrible panic seized me, and I flew in dread from the room, carrying my prize with me, as the gray, dawn sweet the shadows from the sky. I found Elsie crouched before my fire weeping.

'Oh, Majorie!' she cried, 'where have you been? Papa's mind is wandering. He sent his mother appeared to him with outstretched hands, and his right side is palsied.'

Now was my time to speak. I sat down on the rug and held her in my arms. 'He was right, Elsie dear; his mind does not wander. I saw the spirit of your grandmother one year ago, and again to-night. Don't start nor ask any questions, please, I will tell you all by-and-by. Tell no one in as few words as possible.'

She turned him and disinherited him legarding everything to Malcolm on condition that he would be laird over papa, and never share the property with him or aid him in any way, or we would be outcasts, and a distant branch of the family inherit. Malcolm has accepted the conditions of the will to keep the home, but has never touched any of the money, and welfare and have lived on papa's little income which he had from my grandfather. Papa's health failing forced my brother to take upon himself the duties of laird in public. He has given his life to papa and, denied himself every pleasure, every thought of self; and Elsie's voice failed through excess of feeling.

And this was the mystery of his silence toward me, the bit of privation. He seemed glorified in my sight, but there was not a moment to lose. I told Elsie of my dream, and together we looked carefully through the book, and at last, to our joy, we found the words as I had dreamed of them, and added below was the date, proving that this last will had been made just before death.

We clung to each other for a moment in a passion of tears, cried from mingled joy and grief, and then Elsie took the book to Malcolm. I crept to the half opened door and looked in. The old man lay, with his head on his son's breast, his poor patient eyes gazing in his face.

'One you ever forgive me, dearest father,' he repeated, 'for my neglect of this solemn trust? Do you heed me? Hear what I have to confess myself of, and know what misery you might have been spared. Before her death, grandmother told that a book was left for me in her desk, containing receipts for mental and bodily health, for man as well as cattle, and she charged me solemnly to read it carefully and profit by it. God knows my only thoughts were, and have been, of you. And this message from the dead caused me loss.'

A smile of ineffable peace dwelt upon the old man's face as he whispered: 'Not too late, my boy; it is never too late to know that she blessed me at last. Call Marjorie to me.'

I approached, and with his poor left hand he drew me to his breast, and kissed me. Elsie lay weeping by his side, and there was a low wailing outside of the door from the faithful retainers of the household. A heavenly radiance overspread the wan face, the dim eyes looked their last upon his children, and the old laird at last found rest.

CHAPTER X.

It is again the eve of All-Saints. I am no longer Majorie Cameron, but Mistress Majorie Ronald, of Grosvenor Square, Glen Ronald, and Macpherson Tower, and though we had been married three months, we—Malcolm and I—never wearied of telling each other the same old, old story. We had just returned from the Continent, and, like a wilful, spoiled child, I insisted upon going direct to Glen Ronald for a week before sailing for Elsie at Lady Seaver's, and establishing ourselves in London until certain important plans of mine were perfected. We were very rich, my fortune and his together; and Elsie resigned all claim to the Tower conditionally. She said with many imperativeness, that we accepted her as the housekeeper, which my aunt Seton begged to share, for Elsie knew quite won her heart. And even time proved fallibleer; so I made her over to her new little mistress, and took honest Jessie into my especial service under my French maid.

We passed the long drawing-room, Malcolm and I, when the gray glistening and fire-light blended softly together. The great deer-hound lay stretched on the soft sheep rug. Outside, the wind wailed eerily about the house, but I no longer trembled, for a protecting arm was about me, and the wealth of a great abiding love encompassed me.

We had discussed, until all arguments, all ideas, were exhausted, the subject of my dream and what had appeared to me. We acknowledged our belief that "millions of spiritual creatures

Walk the earth, both when we wake
And when we sleep."

'And,' observed Malcolm, 'we have better warrant than superstition for the belief. Who should we doubt the agency of ministering angels? Do you remember, darling, that passage in Kingsteeb's 'Hamish' in which the angel Abadonna resigns his charge? Even for Judas we cannot help but feel a thrill of interest.'

'It seems a link between earth and some other space—I dare not say heaven,' I returned, 'nor yet hell; and this belief in their spirits is certainly confirmed and sanctioned by the language of Scripture. And now, Malcolm,' I added, in my most fascinating manner, drawing down the dear face for a kiss, 'do you know that from the first time I ever saw you I called you a grand Viking?'

'And do you know,' he interrupted, 'that I always called you my Valkyrie, though I never dared hope for the heaven you have given me.'

'Then we are quits; and you did not have to pass through death to gain your heaven. And now for a boon: promise to my yes. And naturally, with my head leaning against his breast, how could he say nay? 'I want you to watch with me to-night, dear Malcolm, in that room. I must watch there, if I go alone.'

And so it came to pass that again I kept my vigil in that gruesome chamber. A strong arm clasped me, and firm warm hands held mine, so we sat together in the shadow. It was a bleak night. The look roared in the distance; rain splashed against the windows in the mirk hours; the wind swept about the trees and around the house with the wail and sob of departing spirits.

We sat in silent expectancy. The night waned, and the cold gray dawn stole into the gloomy room, a warmer light, and we looked each other in the eyes with calm content. The poor ghost had found rest, and the cause had departed her evermore from the home of Ronald.

Bismarck's health is reported better. He returns to Berlin on the 20th. He has resumed the direction of affairs.

Mr. L. Tupper, of the Canada Pacific railway staff, has returned to Ottawa from an exploratory survey of the country between Edmonton and the Rocky Mountains. He speaks in good terms of the fertility of the soil. Many thickets are well wooded and watered.

His Excellency the Governor-General has signified his intention to present bronze medals to the Collegiate Institute and the Convent of Notre Dame at Kingston, for competition among the pupils.

A sad collision has occurred on the Rio. P. A Landry, Councillorelect of Pabos, wants his New Brunswick. Less would be [illegible] and child died, and [illegible], his third son and only remaining one [illegible] with the same disease.

EGYPT AND ABYSSINIA.

Failure of Gordon Pasha's Mission to King John—His Majesty in a Passion—A War Inevitable—The Khedive's Preparation for the Struggle.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—A Cairo correspondent telegraphs that a despatch from Gallabat, on the Abyssinian frontier, 9th inst. says it is all but impossible now to avoid hostilities between Egypt and Abyssinia, as the mission of Gordon Pasha to the pretender of Abyssinia has proved utterly fruitless. All efforts at conciliation are in vain, it being manifestly the desire of King John to precipitate hostilities. Gordon's interview with him was very stormy. The King, was in a towering rage. Gordon was for some time in extreme danger, and he would certainly have lost his life had not the manifestation of the fate of his predecessor, King Theodore, produced a wholesome effect on the mind of the enraged monarch. He told Gordon he would never be permitted to leave Abyssinia unless he met an Englishman. A strong escort of Abyssinian guards accompanied Gordon to Massowah.

The estimation of King John was that £30,000 in gold be delivered to him before entering into negotiations. The Council of War in Cairo have lost no time in preparing for the inevitable struggle. A dispatches of the artilleryery forces has already been made. Eighteen thousand men will be immediately despatched to Massowah, eighteen thousand more pushed forward as far as Gallabat, and a third corps of eighteen thousand choice troops will be sent up the Blue Nile Marshalling such strong forces against Abyssinia shows the Egyptian Government has no intention of risking another disaster like that of January, 1876.
